Vandenberg May Favor First-Year Cut in Aid

Senator Indicates Relief Program Won't Begin in Time To Use Full Amount

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg dropped the broad hint yesterday that he favored cutting the size of the European recovery program, at least for its first year of operations.

He indicated doubt whether the program could be organized in time for the sound and efficient spending of $6,800,000,000, as the Administration has proposed.

"Aside from food, fuel and fertilizer, which are essential for immediate relief, it seems to me that the second year's appropriation is infinitely more important than the first," Vandenberg remarked during yesterday's Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing.

Connally Agrees

"In the second year the organization will be functioning and self-help in Europe will be further developed. For myself, I'd like to take the emphasis off the importance of the first year's appropriation."

Senator Tom Connally of Texas, ranking Democratic member of the committee, chimed in to say that he, too, thought the second year would be the most critical. By the second year, he said, the ERP would have the benefit of experience and a far better idea of what the European nations could do to help themselves.

Under the 4¼-year program President Truman submitted to Congress, the first year would be the biggest. The second would involve expenditures roughly estimated at between 4 and 4½ billion dollars.

Officials have already estimated that five-sixths or six-sevenths of the first year's cost would be needed for food, fuel and fertilizer, together with farm machinery and certain raw materials for immediate use. The remaining one-sixth or one-seventh would go into industrial machinery and other "capital goods."

Troubled by Time Element

In the second year, however, the Administration envisaged fewer relief goods and more supplies for rebuilding and development.

Vandenberg did not say whether he thought the first-year cut should be made only in the "capital goods"; what seemed to be troubling him was the time factor in organizing the program.

Twice he asked business witnesses how long they thought it would take to get a recovery organization "in good working order," even on the basis of the most optimistic assumptions. Twice he got the same answer.

"They'd be doing a good job if they got started in six months, and they'd be a year before they could do a really good job," said Lewis H. Brown, chairman of the board of the Johns-Manville Corp., who was adviser to the Army's Chief of Ordnance during the war.

The same estimate came from William L. Batt, president of SKF Industries, Inc. (ball and roller bearings), a former vice chairman of the War Production Board. Batt said even the simplest problems of "housekeeping," of getting office

Single Witness Given Hearing By Vandenberg

Arthur Vandenberg may be one of the most important men in the Senate, but he was not too self-important yesterday to give an exclusive one-man committee hearing to a young man in search of world peace.

His Foreign Relations Committee had already listened to over three hours of testimony. One by one the other Senators had excused themselves and gone to lunch. Only Vandenberg stayed on, and only Richard Rosamond, a 26-year-old Philadelphia accountant, remained to be heard.

Vandenberg apologized for having kept him waiting so long. Then, all alone at the committee table, he listened patiently for 15 minutes while Rosamond outlined a 100-billion-dollar "world prosperity budget" to promote peace and recovery.

Rep. Thomas Reported Improving in Hospital

FCC Tells Stations Not To Censor

By The Associated Press

The Federal Communications Commission has ruled that a radio station may not censor the content of political broadcasts, even when the material may appear to be libelous.

The commission further expressed the view that a station operator may not be held financially responsible for such libelous matter going on the air. It said Congress intended to forbid the station operator to invoke censorship. But:

"The actual speaker is, of course, completely liable for the contents of his remarks," the commission added.

The case at issue involved a license renewal for Station WHLS of Port Huron, Mich. The commission announced it proposed to renew that station's license after it had studied for 2½ an nistance in which the station refused all political broadcasts.

The case dates back to an April, 1945, city election.

A candidate for city commissioner obtained free time on WHLS to discuss a proposed bond issue. After the broadcast, the station announced it would give equal time free, as provided by the law, to any responsible party, desiring to present contrary views.

However, some persons opposed to the candidate who spoke, entered private objections to some of his statements. The station management, after looking over

Left Wingers Step Up Zonal Strike Efforts

Union Leaders Report Increased Pressure for British Area Walkout

Frankfurt, Germany, Jan. 31 (AP). Growing efforts to foment mass unrest in western Germany were reported today as nearly three million German workers planned strikes against food shortages next week.

Three separate 24-hour strikes have been called for Tuesday in huge areas of the British-American occupation zones.

Communist influence in promoting these walkouts was generally regarded as small. But increasing left-wing activity was reported by conservative trade union leaders.

German labor sources in Hamburg said they noted greater pressure by Communists and left-wing Socialists for a general strike throughout the British zone with its 23 million population.

Trade union leaders there said they had been pushed into calling strikes by the rank and file.

The threat of a walkout of three million workers in the Ruhr-Rhineland vanished as union leaders postponed strike action until they received a hearing on demands that one million tons of coal should be exchanged for food.

Clay Reminds Red U. S. Has Equal Rights in Berlin

Berlin, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay today sharply reminded Russian Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky the United States has the same rights in Berlin as any other occupying power.

Sokolovsky, military governor of Soviet-occupied Germany, had told the Allied Control Council the western Allies have no right to attend meetings "solely of interest to political parties in the Soviet zone."

Nimitz Operated On for Bunion

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 31 (AP).—Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz today underwent a foot operation in Naval Hospital, and was afterward pronounced in good condition.

Mrs. Nimitz explained that the surgery was performed to correct a deformity caused by a bunion which forced the toes out of line and interfered with his "enjoyment of taking long walks." The condition has existed for many years, and is not serious, she said.

Democrats Bid $700 Tax Exemption

Thought Too Low To Compete With GOP Bill, Expected To Pass Tomorrow

By The Associated Press

House Democrats proposed a $200 additional personal exemption yesterday for every income taxpayer, raising the total to $700.

There was every indication, though, that their bid was too low to offer serious competition with the $6,500,000,000 Republican tax cutting bill slated for House passage tomorrow.

And in the Senate, where tax bills generally get a thorough reshaping, Republicans were hot after Democratic votes, which they will need to override an expected veto.

Senator McClellan (D., Ark.) told a reporter he would vote to override such a veto if the Republicans would agree to hold the Federal revenue loss to five billion dollars.

The whispered-hope substitute which a group of Democrats worked out in former Speaker Sam Rayburn's office would do three things:

1. Raise personal exemptions and credit for dependents from $500 to $700. The revenue loss from this would be about $3,200,000,000.

2. Put back an excess profits tax on business, recapturing the $3,200,000,000 relief granted to individual taxpayers.

3. Let husbands and wives in all States split their incomes for tax purposes. This would reduce their obligations in most instances. The Treasury loss from this provision was estimated at 800 million dollars.

The Republican bill contains the income split provision for married couples and a 100 increase in personal exemptions. In addition, it would offer percentage cuts ranging from 30 per cent for those at the lower end of the tax ladder and 10 per cent at the top.

Would Remove 10 Million

Rayburn said the $200 personal exemption boost proposed by the Democrats would take 10 million persons off the tax rolls. Republicans claim their $100 increase would take out 7,400,000 persons.

In contrast to the Democrats, the Republicans called for no tax increases, but only cuts.

The Democrats' plan will be laid before the House tomorrow shortly before the vital vote which is expected to send the Republican measure to the Senate.

But this may be only waste motion unless the Senate later trims the revenue loss. House leaders said they could pass their bill by a 2-to-1 vote there. They add that they can muster the strength to ride down a veto.

The Senate prospects are different, however. Republicans there concede they need the support of such Democrats as Senators McClellan, George of Georgia and Byrd of Virginia to round out the necessary two-thirds to beat a veto. They already have the backing of some Democrats, including Senators Edwin C. Johnson of Colorado and O'Daniel of Texas.

McClellan's five-billion-dollar limitation was the highest any of the group of doubtful Democrats was willing to talk publicly.

Barbara Hutton Is Improved After Second Operation

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 31 (AP).—The former Barbara Hutton underwent a second operation today. Her condition was described as critical this morning but had improved tonight.

Doctors said the Woolworth heiress, the wife of Prince Troubetskoy, is in no immediate danger. She underwent a major operation last week to overcome an intestinal ailment. Today's was termed a minor abdominal operation.

Another major operation may be necessary, the doctors said. The princess is 35.

3 Children Hurt by Stoves

Two Women Burn to Death, Third Dies of Fire Injuries

Two women burned to death in Greater Washington yesterday in fires attributed to cigarettes which fell from their hands as they dozed.

Mrs. Corkrean

A third woman, Mrs. Laura Stone, 39, of 1240 11th st. nw., died at Emergency Hospital yesterday afternoon of burns suffered in her basement apartment a week ago. Firemen also blamed that blaze on a cigarette.

In other fire mishaps yesterday three children were burned seriously in three separate accidents involving ranges or stoves.

The dead:

Mrs. Mary Corkrean, 49, of 2514 Palmer pl. se., a Veterans' Administration employe, wife of William Corkrean, a real estate salesman, found dead in the bedroom of her home.

Mrs. Floris Aribelle Dickerson, about 26, found dead in her still-smouldering living room at 2011 N. Taft st., Arlington, Va.

Critically burned:

Marcella Dawson, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dawson, 1632 A st. ne., burned in a flash explosion when her father lit a gas stove burner. He had turned the jet on, and when the pilot light failed to ignite the burner, he applied a match. She was taken to Casualty Hospital with second degree burns of the face, right arm and neck.

Maybelle Allen, 9, of 7580 Walker Mill rd., District Heights, Md., burned when her clothing caught fire from an oil stove. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital with 50 per cent of the skin surface burned.

Michel McFerren, 5, of 415 Brandywine st. se., in Children's Hospital with severe burns from the waist down. Her nightgown caught fire as she stood on a chair reaching over a lighted gas burner to reach a cookie jar. Her father, Richard McFerren, suffered hand burns when he beat out the flames.

Mrs. Corkrean's daughter, Betty, 23, a private nurse, partly overcome by dense smoke, barely made her way from the house where her mothed died. She was awakened by smoke, crawled to her mother's bedroom door, but was driven back.

She told firemen the wailing of a cat inside the front door drew her back to consciousness. She

Priority System Set Up

New York, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Mayor William O'Dwyer announced today a priority system for the distribution of fuel oil, which may force all nonessential buildings in the Nation's largest city to close.

Following a meeting at City Hall with representatives of eight major oil companies, O'Dwyer announced "there is not enough oil in the city, or available to the city, to supply every user."

Therefore, he added, oil will go only to dwellings, hospitals, institutions, public utilities, transportation and communication, food and restaurant stores, school and health facilities.

Duration of the oil curbs hinged on the endurance of the winter's record cold wave and a replenishment of the city's depleted oil stocks. The curbs were expected to close thousands of neighborhood movies, saloons and bowling alleys.

Continued Cold Snap Forecast for District

Continued cold and cloudy, with a high temperature of about 25 degrees, is forecast for the District today following light snow and about 12 above zero during the night.

Yesterday's temperatures varied from 6 above zero at 7:30 a. m., one degree above the season's low set last Monday, to 23 above at 1:50 p. m. Old Washingtonians may remember when it was 71 degrees above on January 31, 1916, and older ones when it was 2 below that day in 1905.

Maryland and Virginia will share the District's cloudy and continued cold weather today.

Sleet and freezing rain yesterday morning forced suspension of bus service by the Atlantic Greyhound Corp. west of Roanoke and in other parts of the State, the company announced in Richmond. Suspension of service was expeced to remain in effect for 24 hours.

2 CIO Locals Order Signing Of Affidavits

Ford Unit in Detroit And Textile Union At Cumberland Act

Memberships of two large CIO locals yesterday directed their officers to abide by non-Communist provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The separate actions, reported by the Associated Press, occurred in Detroit's Ford Local 600, United Auto Workers, and at Cumberland, Md., where 3500 members of Local 1948, Textile Workers Union of America, ousted reportedly reluctant officers.

The Ford unit voted to compel five of its officers to sign non-Communist affidavits or resign. The election committee announced that 7539 members voted the "or else" action, with 4650 opposed. Only slightly more than 12,500 of the local's 70,000 members at the Rouge Plant participated in the balloting.

They Won't Resign

All other officers of the local had accepted an order to sign from the union's general council, in accordance with a resolution adopted by the UAW-CIO convention in Atlantic City, N. J., last November.

Failure to comply with the affidavit provision of the Taft-Hartley Act would deny the local use of National Labor Relations Board facilities.

The five who refused to sign are J. G. Couser, financial secretary; William McKie, trustee; John Gallo, guide; William H. Johnson, recording secretary, and Edward Lock, president of the plastics building unit.

A joint statement by the five said the election was illegal under the local's by-laws.

"We do not intend to resign," the statement declared, "and we do not expect to be purged."

Issue in Election

In the Maryland action, members of the textile workers' largest local, elected Playford Aldridge its new president, largely on the Communist affidavit issue, it was said. Aldridge charged that William Boyd Coleman and Joseph Barley, retiring president and recording secretary, had failed to sign non-Communist affidavits after being directed to do so by a membership meeting in November.

Most of the local's 8700 members eligible to vote are employed by

3 Commissioners Called

5 Slated to Testify Tomorrow As Home Rule Hearings Open

Hearings on home rule, biggest District issue in Congress this year, begin tomorrow at 10 a. m. in the Caucus Room of the Old House Office Building.

Congressional sponsors of the home rule plan have called Washington's three Commissioners and their top legal and budget aides to open the testimony.

Five witnesses will appear the first day—Commissioners John Russell Young, Guy Mason, and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, and Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler.

They will be the first of more than 50 witnesses expected to be called during the 10 days of hearings now planned.

The hearings will be conducted jointly by the House and Senate subcommittees on District reorganization and home rule. Their chairmen are Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) and Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.).

They are sponsoring legislation to change the District government, and put an elected city council at its head in place of the present Commissioners. The council would appoint a city manager as top city executive. Congress and the President would have a veto power on proposed legislation prepared by the council.

Inappropriate Location

ABC Sounds Taps for Taps At Two Ninth St. Grog Centers

The Alcoholic Beverage Control Board eighty-sixed two Ninth st. grog centers yesterday—cut off their taps.

With all the bluntness of Carrie Nation's ax, but with more permanent effect, the board refused renewal of on-premises liquor permits to the Reno Food Shop, Inc., 929-931 9th st. nw., and its neighbor, the New Western Lunch, Inc., 943-45 of the same gay belt.

It explained, among other reasons, that the location is "inappropriate"—a sentiment also voiced by the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, the Mid-City Citizens Association and the City Bank.

Ninth st., never an object of high-sounding praises, has been referred to as Washington's Tenderloin or "hardened artery"—to mention a few. But not too recently, the Rev. Dr. John Rustin, pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, gave the street solace. It has improved over the last 10 years, he said.

An application for renewal of the license of Esther's Grill, 521 Massachusetts ave. nw., didn't even get to the decision stage. It was withdrawn after the Board had looked over 30 charges against the place, among them fighting, bad language and bad faith.

A third renewal denial left the Veterans 1830 Club, Inc., 1809 Rhode Island ave. nw., without a beer and light wine permit because "it is not a bona fide club," the Board held.

Cessation of operations by the three made but a little dent in the District's over-all liquor-selling picture going into the new year.

Records show a total of 1776 permits of all kinds compared to 1837 issued last year. They net the city $77,000 in revenue.

The breakdown:

Package stores, 388 this year; the same last year.

Wholesalers, 41 this year; 40 last year.

Class D. beer and light wines on-premises sale, 182; 229.

Class B, beer and light wine, off-sale, 627, compared to 659.

Class C, 537 this year; 540 last year.

Truman Asks 'Self' Control By Distillers

Proposes Voluntary Limit of 2.5 Million Bushels a Month as Plea Fails in House

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Faced with the end of his power to allocate grain to distillers, President Truman late yesterday called on whisky makers to limit their use of grain voluntarily to 2½ million bushels a month.

Mr. Truman expressed regret that Congress had failed to "act in time" to extend his allocation powers as he had requested. Last Thursday he asked for a nine-month extension, warning that the grain shortage jeopardized the national security.

Even before the President sent his message to the Hill, the House Banking Committee voted 12 to 9 against continuing the allocation program as much as one month. His powers to allocate grain to distillers expired last midnight.

The Distilled Spirits Institute disclosed, meanwhile, that, prior to the President's appeal yesterday, it had sent telegrams to all segments of the industry urging them to be reasonable in the use of grain when controls expire.

The institute represents about 65 per cent of the distillers, but in making its appeal, a spokesman said, it sent messages to both members and nonmembers.

In a statement last night Mr. Truman said:

"It is unthinkable that at this time, when the need for grain as a food is so great, the distillers in this country should choose to use unlimited quantities of grain in the manufacture of whisky.

"Therefore, I now call upon all users of grain for the production of ethyl alcohol, including both distilled spirits and neutral spirits, to observe temporarily the same controls established by the grain conservation order of the Secretary of

Meat Rationing Held Aid to Black Market

Meat packers went into action yesterday to forestall the possibility of rationing with predictions that it would bring black markets shortages and higher prices.

An economist for one meat packer forecast prices next spring and summer as high as those of 1947 and said they might even "exceed the previous highs."

Two representatives of the industry declared black market operators already were preparing for a return of rationing.

Other Developments

Developments were:

1. H. B. Arthur, Swift & Co. economist, told a meat rationing subcommittee of the Senate Banking Committee new black markets would be inevitable should Congress enact rationing legislation proposed by Chairman Flanders (R., Vt.) of the subcommittee.

2. R. J. Eggert of the American Meat Institute and Jay C. Hormel, packing company official, testified that black market operators were attempting to buy plants they sold after the war. Hormel said these operators also were negotiating for livestock supplies.

2000 Cabaret Girls Riot in Shanghai Over Club Closing

Shanghai, Jan. 31 (AP). — Two thousand Chinese cabaret girls and an equal number of men friends wrecked the Social Affairs Bureau offices tonight in a four-hour riot.

The demonstration was in protest against closing of 14 night clubs under Chinese austerity regulations, scheduled for March 31.

Police suspended the license of all girls involved and arrested any who showed marks of combat, however slight.

House Unit Proposes Ban On 3 Authors

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Banning of all library books and textbooks in Washington schools written by Harold Rugg, Louis Adamic and Louise Kreuger was recommended yesterday by a House District subcommittee.

The textbook, "Building Citizenship," by Dr. Ray O. Hughes, was recommended for drastic revision to "delete all the unfounded favorable comments on Russia." A picture of Stalin aroused the particular ire of the subcommittee members. It was placed in the book in the 1944 edition when the Soviets were a war ally, but the text described him as a dictator.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning told the committee that the Rugg books, a target of patriotic organizations throughout the country for a decade, had been removed from grammar schools. The reason, he explained, was that they were found to be unsuitable for the grades—not because of the reputation of the author. Only grammar schools here used the textbooks, and then only for reference purposes.

Dr. Robert A. Maurer, vice president of the school board, indicated they would be taken off altogether soon.

The subcommittee report declared that Rugg, Adamic and Kreuger had been "cited" by the Un-American Activities Commit-

Judges Plan 5½-Day Work On Big Docket

Barse Says Saturday Half-Day Sessions Will Be Started Soon

Municipal Court is going on a 5½-day week in an effort to thin out its backed-up civil dockets.

Chief Judge George P. Barse announced yesterday that the civil division will remain open Saturday mornings, beginning "in the next week or two," to hear contested motions. Arguments on the motions require considerable time, and the extra half day will allow judges more time on the backlog of 900 civil cases, it was explained.

The action came after a Friday meeting of judges with the District Bar Association's committtee on Municipal Court, but Judge Barse said the move has been considered for some time.

There was little comment forthcoming from the Friday session, but Judge Barse yesterday expressed confidence in his judges and appreciation of the bar committee's suggestions.

He had no comment on a recent tabulation showing how much time each judge spent on the bench. He said the "District clocks its judges more carefully than any other court in the country."

Recent moves to help alleviate the congestion in civil division dockets include transfer of a traffic judge to the civil side for jury cases in the afternoons while the judge of the D. C. Court hears the remainder of traffic cases.

In a similar change, small claims judges are on the bench in that court during the morning; then in landlord and tenants court during the afternoon.

Port Louis, Mauritius Island, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—At least 300 persons were killed and tens of thousands were left homeless by a 10-hour cyclone which struck Reunion Island Monday night, according to the first definite reports reaching here today.

2 GSI Strike Leaders, Missed By Marshal, Heed Probe Call

Two GSI cafeteria strike leaders, "vanished" for a week so far as subpena servers are concerned, will voluntarily appear tomorrow morning before a House subcommittee probing the chowline labor dispute.

President Richard A. Bancroft and Business Agent Oliver T. Palmer, leaders of the striking United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (CIO), disclosed yesterday that despite the inability of the United States Marshal's Office to find them, they will heed the Congressional summons.

Meanwhile, the 150 striking employes of Government Services, Inc., operator of 42 government building cafeterias, will hold a mass meeting today at 3 p. m. at the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church, 1130 Vermont ave. nw., to hear reports on the status of the walkout, in its twenty-eighth day today.

The U. S. Marshals office, busy all week seeking witnesses subpenaed by Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), chairman of the House subcommittee, reported one success yesterday—personal service of a subpena to Ethel Dew, identified as a "missing" cafeteria workers' union receptionist. Service was made at local headquarters.

F. Albert Reiman, subcommittee staff member, said yesterday that Chairman Hoffman has also issued a subpena for Alfred Bernstein, director of negotiations for United

New Delhi, Jan. 31.—Millions of Indians paid mournful homage to Mahandas K. Gandhi today as flames consumed the body of the man who had led them to freedom.

By the side of the River Jumna, while fire leaped through the piles of sandlewood logs and the thick smoke drifted toward the East, the greatest crowd ever assembled in New Delhi chanted the holy invocations of Hinduism, shouted hysterically, and wept.

Villagers Stream In

Throughout India at the same hour, peasants gathered in the fields and fishermen upon the beaches to offer prayers. In cities, towns and villages, mass meetings were held, flags flew at half-staff and the nation entered a 13-day period of mourning.

Throughout last night villagers traveled the roads to Delhi, many coming from over 100 miles away. In bullock carts, on foot, on bicycles, in buses and on trucks they arrived in the city during the morning hours, swelling to immense the size of the crowd of Delhi citizens who wanted a last look at their Mahatma.

At 4:45 p. m., when the funeral cortege arrived at the cremation grounds beside the Jumna, the crowd of well over one million Indians had broken through all barriers, and from the edge of the funeral pyre it stretched for miles in three directions.

Only Two Peaceful Faces

This was no western crowd, silent and disciplined. It was an Indian crowd—excitable, worshipping, filled with the vitality which Prime Minister Jawarhalal Nehru has called the dynamic quality of India. As Gandhi's cortege moved among the people they shouted and wept, pelted the bier with garlands, prayed aloud and surged forward, many fainted, others were trampled.

In this sea of emotionalism there seemed only two faces of peace: The face of Mahatma Gandhi, peaceful with the calm of death, and the face of his devoted follower, Jawaharlal Nehru, calm with the stoicism of sorrow.

Gandhi's bier lay 15 feet above the ground on an open-wheeled platform, which was draped with the national flag and pulled throughout the five-hour journey by members of the Indian armed services. The white cloth, which covered Gandhi to the shoulders, was almost obscured by flower petals and garlands thrown by the people who called him "father."

Through the clouds of dust raised by the trampling crowds, the bier was drawn up to the Congress Decides Against Return Of Hungary Horses

By the United Press

Congressional lovers of fine horseflesh won a victory last night.

The State Department announced that the United States Army is not going to give back 120 Hungarian thoroughbreds removed from Germany during the war.

The department originally thought this Government obliged, under the Hungarian peace treaty, to return the horses to their Hungarian owners. The Army, which has the horses, and a lot of Congressmen, who thought the horses too good to give back, protested. The Senate Armed Services Committe investigated.

In a letter to Committee Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. D.), Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett announced that the department now believes Hungary has no claim on the horses.

Hindu Riots Spre[ad] Throughout India

American Seized Gandhi's Assassin

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HERBERT REINER, JR., of Stamford, Conn., wartime lieutenant commander in the Navy, is the American who seized the assassin of Mohandas K. Gandhi in New Delhi, it was disclosed yesterday. Reiner, 32, went to India last year as financial officer for the State Department. Recently he had expressed the hope in a letter that he might some day see the Indian leader and attend one of his prayer meetings. Presumably it was to fulfill that desire that Reiner was present when the Mahatma was slain

Gandhi's Slayer Believed Winner Of Death Lottery

Bombay, India, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The people upon whom Mohandas K. Gandhi showered a lifetime of pleadings for brotherly love, slashed one another's throats in riots throughout India today, even as the Mahatma's body was being cremated.

Hindu fought Hindu with knives, stones and fists.

In Bombay alone the official death figure was 22. At least 46 had been stabbed and 15 others injured at Bombay's summer capital of Poona.

It was believed that Gandhi, who gambled his life many times on India's future, was assassinated by a man who had forfeited his own life by winning a lottery to select an assassin.

View of 15 Seized

"This view was expressed with the arrest of 15 persons suspected of belonging to the group which plotted Gandhi's death.

A high official of the criminal investigation department flew here from Poona to investigate reports that this group set up a lottery in which Gandhi's assassin drew his assignment. The suspicion was strengthened by the fact that the slayer went from Poona, 725 miles to New Delhi to fire the fatal bullets.

Narayan Vinayak Gadse, a newspaper man, described by acquaintances as a "maniac," "won" the lottery and killed Gandhi.

Seen as Part of Plot

The assassination was seen as part of a political plot which police said "spread its tentacles around New Delhi." The Hindu secret militant organization known as Rashtriya Sewak Sangha (Political Servants of the Country) was blamed.

The organization is an extremist group working in conjunction with the Hindu Mahasabha, which persistently sought to establish Hindu rule for all India before the partition.

Competent observers predicted a crisis that would force changes in the present Indian government.

Gandhi left two leaders—Prime Minister Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and his deputy, Sardar Patel—an iron-fisted nationalist.

Both are expected to work together in the immediate crisis but observers are pessimistic that cooperation will last long.

[The Associated Press said many believe the assassination was the work of underground left-wingers who opposed Gandhi's efforts to halt communal bloodshed.

[A cabinet shake-up may come in the wake of complaints from Gandhi's followers that he should have been afforded better protection. Gandhi himself declined such protection.]

More Leaders Voice Tribute To Gandhi

London, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The world's leaders paid tribute to Mohandas K. Gandhi today.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin said: "Words fail adequately to express what we all feel for the loss India and the whole world sustained in this terrible event."

In Tokyo, Gen. Douglas MacArthur said: "He had come through time and circumstances, and his oft repeated ideologies are to be regarded as the very symbol and apotheosis of peace. In the evolution of civilization, if it is to survive, all men cannot fail eventually to adopt his belief that the process of mass application of force to resolve contentious issues is fundamentally not only wrong and useless, but contains within itself germs of self-destruction."

In Eire Prime Minister Eamon de Valera said: "Our prayer is that the sacrifice of his life by which he gave to his country 'this last full measure of devotion' will bring to the Indian people that brotherly peace which was so dear to him."

Emperor Hirohito of Japan described the assassination as an "event of great sorrow."

The Indian Ambassador to occupied Japan, Sir B. Rama Rau, characterized his leader as "undoubtedly the greatest man India has produced since the time of Buddha." . . .

Deputy Prime Minister H. V. Evatt of Australia said his people hoped Gandhi's death would not be in vain, that it would bring better harmony to India.

In Moscow the Soviet press reported Gandhi's assassination in two paragraphs and noted that the native murderer spoke English.

In Pakistan's capital, Karachi, the government paper Dawn on a black-bordered front page said: "They killed Mahatma Gandhi at last. Thus has fallen one of the world's greatest men—a martyr to his convictions. Thus ended the life of the greatest Hindu of modern times . . . Should the Mahatma's supreme self-sacrifice in the cause of peace and amity lead to a genuine stirring of the conscience of the Hindus of India, Moslems on this side of the frontier will not fail to respond with all sincerity."

Bombay's leading newspaper, the Times of India, said "Gandhi, the father of his country and the architect of its independence, died a martyr's death . . . There can only be one answer by the Indian people to his sacrifices, namely, that he triumphs in his death."

The London Times said Gandhi's death "lights up in a flash the terrible intensity of the communal passions he has been laboring to allay . . . The crime shocks men of goodwill all over the world. It has robbed the Indian peoples of a unique guide along the pathway of peace."

Assassination Delays India Peace Effort

Lake Success, N. Y., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—United Nations attempts to mediate the dispute between India and Pakistan faced indefinite postponement today as a result of the assassination of Mohandas K. Gandhi.

Indian U. N. officials said they may be summoned home at once to help deal with the crisis brought on by Gandhi's death.

Security Council debate on the India-Pakistan dispute was scheduled to be resumed Tuesday.

Thursday the Council had been ready to order a plebiscite in Kashmir, the princely state over which the current U. N. clash revolves.

India wants the vote deferred until Moslem raiders have been moved ouut.

DEVADAS GANDHI, in keeping with Hindu tradition, yesterday set fire to his father's funeral pyre. Mohandas Gandhi's body, blanketed in flowers, was burned on a pile of sandalwood logs on a bank of the holy Jumna River at New Delhi funeral pyre by men of the Royal Indian navy. On a low brick platform 15 feet square, river sand had been thinly spread, and at the center sandalwood logs were laid. Sandalwood is used because it is believed to give a sweet scent to the pilgrim's journey toward Heaven.

Around tahe pyre stood men and women with whom Gandhi had worked and lived: Prime Minister Nehru, Governor General Earl Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, Gandhi's son, Devadas Gandhi, and two granddaughters; all of the members of the Indian cabinet, and a silent group of anonymous disciples to whom Gandhi had become the way of life.

As Gandhi's bed was tenderly lifted from the platform and placed upon the pyre, three airplanes flew overhead and scattered rose petals. Beside the pyre, girl disciples and priests in white chanted Mantras, Hindu holy prayers, which were almost drowned out by the hysterical noise of the crowd.

"Long live the Mahatma!" a lone voice shouted. "Victory to the Mahatma." the crowd answered. These cries were repeated over and over while holy water from the Jumna was sprinkled over Gandhi, seven pieces of sandalwood were laid upon his lips, and garlands of white jasmine and oleander blossoms were placed upon the pyre.

As Devadas Gandhi piled more logs over the figure of his father, the crowd surged through the police and military cordon, and for a few moments threatened to create havoc. Almost trampled by the mob, an old woman was rescued by Lady Mountbatten, while Earl Mountbatten and Nehru attempted to restore peace. Many people near them threw themselves upon the ground and hysterically tried to kiss Nehru's feet.

At 4:45, while the priests prayed and an anguished roar came from the crowd, the fire was lighted. Fifteen minutes later the flames were 20 feet high. Smoke was drifting eastward over the Jumna, and most of the audience was in tears.

Lady Mountbatten stood with her arm over the immobile shoulders of Nehru, while Deputy Prime Minister Valiabhbhai Patel vainly attempted to comfort the two young Gandhi granddaughters.

Two hours later the funeral pyre was a smoldering point of light in the dark Indian night. Most of the crowd had slipped away and the fire was guarded only by a small group of relatives and friends.

To all who witnessed today's events in New Delhi, the genuine sorrow of the Indian people was amply demonstrated, despite their apparently undisciplined behavior. For hours they waited along the line of march, joking and shoving. But when the cortege appeared, preceded by the riders of the Governor General's bodyguard and attended by relatives, cabinet ministers and disciples, a hush fell upon the crowd and there were tears in many eyes.

Hindu Throng Shouts 'Gandhi Still Lives!'

By James Michaels

New Dehli, India, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The earthly remains of Mohandas K. Gandhi were consumed on a pyre of scented sandalwood today while the sobbing, moaning multitudes intoned ancient Hindu prayers and shouted "Gandhi still lives!"—"Victory to Gandhi."

The ceremony began at 3:30 a. m. when members of Gandhi's household recited prayers and sang a song which he once selected for his funeral.

"Dress thyself in rich attire, befitting the moment," the song says. "Now thou goeth to your beloved's home. Thou wilt lie in dust, cover thyself with dust. Be one with dust. Bathe and wear a fitting dress. Remember thou [ar]t not returning from where thou goeth."

Placed on Balcony

Shortly before 10 a. m., the body was placed on the balcony of Birla House so the grieving tens of thousands outside could see it. Next to the body was a single lamp—the holy lamp which was used to ignite the funeral pyre.

The body was bedecked with flowers. The face, calm and serene, was smeared with sandal paste and on the wrinkled forehead was the red caste mark of the Hindus.

Then the body was placed in a military carriage at 11:40 a. m. and was drawn slowly through the outswung gates of Birla House by nine white horses. A thunderous shout arose from the multitudes—"Gandhi lives!" "The Mahatma lives!"

Preceded by scarlet uniformed guards of Gov. Gen. Earl Mountbatten, the cortege proceeded slowly under a clear blue sky through the modern streets of New Delhi and then into old narrow thoroughfares of Delhi proper.

Nehru, Patel Beside Body

Seated on each side of the body were Gandhi's friend and premier, Pandit Jawarahlal Nehru, and Sardar Patel, the "iron man" of the All-India Congress.

Ahead of the cortege were four armored cars with two soldiers standing at stiff attention in the turrets of each.

The procession was followed by tens of thousands and the shuffling of their feet raised choking clouds of dust that almost shrouded the sun.

Almost Covered With Flowers

Several times the carriage was almost completely covered with flowers thrown by the mourners. Occasionally an attendant gently brushed them off the wrinkled face so all could have their last view of the Mahatma's countenance.

Thunderous shouts greeted the cortege when it reached the cremation plot on the river banks shortly after 4 p. m.

Preparations for the cremation had been under way since long before sunrise. Hindu holy men had piled nearly 600 pounds of sandalwood, 10 pounds of camphor and an equal weight of sacred Indian incenses under the platform. The whole was saturated with nearly 200 pounds of ghee—buffalo butter.

Gandhi's body was placed reverently on the platform and the crowd swayed and clapped in unison to the words of the second of Gandhi's favorite songs—the ancient chant of the Indian god Ram to his wife Sita.

Ignited by His Son

Then his youngest son, Devadas, facing the setting sun, prayed to the Hindu gods believed responsible for Gandhi's rebirth in a new incarnation and circled the pyre with a burning branch lit from the holy lamp that had burned all night beside the body.

A mighty rush of flame engulfed the body, which could be seen twisting as it dissolved into ashes. The multitude watched in silence as the flames licked through the sandlewood. A column of smoke wafted over the holy river.

The cremation ceremony was completed at 5:20 p. m. (6:50 a. m. EST), only 20 minutes after the pyre was ignited.

After three days, the ashes will be gathered and scattered on the waters of the river, which will convey them to the Holy Ganges as were those of Gandhi's wife, Kasturba, four years ago.

A-Bomb Is 'Dated,' GW Phyicist Holds

Toronto, Ontariofi Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The atom bomb won't bother our descendants. It's scheduled to disappear in a few billion years.

Dr. George A. Gamok, physics professor at George Washington University, said here today eventually there will be no uranium 235 left in the world—hence no atomic bombs.

That's because U-235, the type of uranium used in its manufacture, decays rapidly.

Communistic China Seen by Businessmen

By Christopher Rand

Copyright, 1948, N. Y. Herald Tribune

Shanghai, Jan. 31.—Some American businessmen here are convinced China will go Communist soon. Most are making plans to deal with this possibility.

The plans must cover at least two periods:

1. Collapse of government authority in the big seaports like Shanghai and Tientsin and establishment of Communist authority there.

2. The long haul after this, when the Communist state would presumably become stable and when its true business policies would emerge.

Some Americans here feel there may be dangerous chaos in the first period. Already the big cities are overcrowded with destitute refugees and already the government's control of these elements is weak and uneasy.

Wholesale looting, rioting and considerable anti-foreignism are feared.

Some important American firms here have begun to consider the problem of evacuating the families of their staffs. They believe this problem must be faced within a matter of months. They want to be out of here completely if an upheaval comes.

The policy of some big American firms already has been formulated: It is to get out of China before the civil war hits the big cities, and then to sit tight waiting to see how stable the new government is and what trade terms it will offer.

Many American businessmen here are so critical of the present government that they are receptive to the idea of any change. Many assert the government is a parasitic affair which will "squeeze" any enterprise it can reach. But the big oil companies do business with China—an oil-starved country—pretty much on their own terms.

ATC to Open Dharan-Manila Air Route Link

The Air Transport Command is planning to reopen its globe-girdling air system.

A link between Dharan in Saudi Arabia and Manila will be set up as soon as details are worked out, an ATC spokesman said yesterday.

ATC now operates from the United States to Dharan and from the United States to Manila, but has not flown the intervening route for about two years.

ATC officials said the reopened route is intended primarily as a connecting link for military cargo, passengers and communications between American occupation zones in Europe and the Far East.

Despite Warning

U. N. Entry In Palestine Likely Soon

Lake Success, Jan. 31 (AP).—The United Nations partition commission will enter Palestine in March or April, informed quarters predicted today.

The exact date depends on negotiations with the British and Security Council debate on providing an international military force.

It was stressed that the five-nation body was not ready to accept the British warning to stay out of the Holy Land until two weeks before the end of British rule May 15.

The commission planned to pursue this point vigorously with the British delegation here and even carry an appeal directly to Foreign Secretary Bevin if necessary.

Six Arabs Are Killed By Snipers, Booby Traps

Jerusalem, Jan. 31 (AP).—Snipers and booby traps killed six Arabs today in Palestine.

The unofficial death toll since the United Nations voted for partition November 29 rose to 1008.

Although more than 20 persons were killed during the past week, it was the quietest the Holy Land has experienced in two months.

Jewish sources claimed an armed force of between 400 and 500 Syrian Arabs crossed into Palestine last night from, Trans-Jordan.

Chinese Troops Report Easing Peiping Threat

Peiping, Jan. 31 (AP).—Chinese government troops have seized the initiative north, east and south of Peiping, easing Communist threats to rail communications, pro-government military dispatches said today.

Government dispatches from Manchuria continued to predict a new big battle at Sinlitun, 70 miles west of Mukden.

Arab Hints Action on U. S. Projects

Damascus, Syria, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The commander of the Arab army of liberation, Fawzi el Kawkji, said today, "United States support of Palestine's partition means an end to American interests throughout the Middle East."

"Do you think they can now bring a pipeline across this country?" he asked, and answered:

"They have aroused the hostility of the Arabs and there is no chance of their fulfilling any of their projects."

Kawkji apparently referred to the oil pipeline under construction to tap the rich American concessions in Saudi Arabia.

"We haven't really started," Kawkji said, "but soon the world will see what stuff Arab fighters are made of. The Jews fooled Americans and others by stating they were able to defend themselves against Arabs, not only in Palestine, but all Arab armies.

"Now before we have really started our fight they are wailing and pleading for an international army and assistance. We are mounting a campaign that will destroy the so-called Zionist army and state."

Greeks Reorganize Army; Ventiris Out

'Ablest' General's Post Is Abolished; Politics Is Blamed

By Homer Bigart

Copyright, 1948, N. Y. Herald Tribune

Athens, Jan. 31.—The coalition government today imposed its will on the Greek army, removing the army's most disputed personality, Lieut. Gen. Constantine Ventiris.

The reorganization move also eliminated First Army headquarters at Volos and placed all corps headquarters under direct command of the general staff in Athens.

For several months, Athens politicans have been gunning for Ventiris, whom many Americans and British military observers regarded as the best Greek field commander on active duty.

Without support of Athens, Ventiris could accomplish little, and morale among the top command deteriorated steadily. An ambitious officer, Ventiris was feared by Premier Themistocles Sophoulis, leader of the Liberal Party, and by the Vice Premier Constantine Tsaldaris, leader of the Populists. Both suspected Ventiris of dictatorial aspirations.

The shake-up has impended ever snce the rebel attack on Konitsa during Christmas week. After the attack, Ventiris came to Athens, charged political leaders with plots against him, and submitted his resignaton.

Today the resignation was accepted.

The reogranization scheme was carried over mild opposition of Major General Rawlings, chief of the British military mission.

The cabinet expects to strengthen its control over the army by legislation giving it power to retire generals. Eight of 11 lieutenant generals are among those slated for retirement. It is expected Ventiris will also retire.

Only a few days ago Ventiris was praised by United States Chief of Mission W. G. Livesay as one of the ablest Greek commanders. General Livesay told this correspondent blame for the low morale among the top command could be placed on the machinations of Athens politicians.

Biggest in History
77 Billion Budget for Soviet Urged

Moscow, Jan. 31 (AP).—Russian Finance Minister A. G. Zverev proposed tonight to a joint session of the Supreme Soviet (parliament) the largest budget in the history of the Soviet Union.

With Prime Minister Stalin and Foreign Minister Molotov among his listeners, Zverev called for expenditures of 387,900,000,000 rubles and a revenue of 428 billion rubles in 1948.

The amounts would come roughly to $77,580,000,000 in expenditures and $85,600,000,000 in revenue.

No Free Exchange

There is no free exchange of rubles and dollars. The official rate is 5.3 rubles to one United States dollar.

Stalin, making his third public appearance in 10 days, walked briskly to his seat in one of the rear rows as the session began. Applause thundered through the huge Kremlin palace as he appeared.

The appropriation recommended for Russia's armed forces for the current year was 66 billion rubles or 17 per cent of the total budget and a cut of 2,500,000,000 rubles from the 1947 military expenditure.

Zverev indicated the Soviet exceeded its 1947 military budget. The budget announced last February called for 67 billion rubles. Zverev's figure of a projected 2,500,000,000-ruble reduction in 1948 indicates the Russians actually spent 68,500,000,000 rubles in 1947 on defense.

(President Truman has asked the United States Congress for $11,025,000,000 for national defense in the next year. Washington experts have contended the Russians do not include in their military budget many items that are carried in the United States as national defense expenditures.)

Boost in Services

(A Soviet news agency, Tass, report heard in London said Zverev reported estimates of this year's total Russian expenses were 16,700,000,000 rubles higher than last year's. He attributed the increase to a boost in funds for research, social and cultural services.)

(Radio Moscow quoted him that the added funds would be devoted to "research work . . . on a big scale, helping to make the national economy still stronger." Zverev announced there will be no increase in taxes this year.)

Zverev declared Russia spent 361,200,000 rubles during 1947 and collected a revenue of 385,200,000,000 rubles. He contrasted the figures with the 1946 totals of 307 billion rubles spent and 325 billion rubles collected.

(The Tass report said Zverev reported that the gross production plan for 1947 had been fulfilled by 103.5 per cent. This, he said, was equivalent to an increase of 22 per cent over 1946.

(Last year's total agricultural production was reported at 32 per cent over 1946. Gross grain harvest was reported to have been 58 per cent over drought-stricken 1946, the totals not reported.

Sofia to Mark New Status

Sofia, Bulgaria, Jan. 31 (AP).—Bunting decked the streets of this old Balkan capital today, heralding an event which will help transform Bulgaria into a miniature model of the Soviet Union.

The bunting is in honor of the Congress of the Fatherland Front, a two-day meeting opening Monday. For this the government is staging one of the largest shows in Bulgarian history.

At present the Fatherland Front is a Communist-supported coalition of all Bulgarian political parties, dominated by Premier Georgi Dimitrov, one of the leaders in Moscow policy outside the Soviet Union.

Authoritative sources say before this congress is over, every man, woman and child in Bulgaria will be embraced within the fold of the Fatherland Front. The front will become a political party in itself, composed of every element of Bulgarian political life. Other parties now in the front, such as the Socialists, will continue their individual identifies, but only within limits.

Italy Ignores Red Protest On U. S. Ships

Rome, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The Italian government, aroused by a Soviet protest about the presence of American warships in Italian waters, told the Russians today to mind their own business.

Italy announced a permanent Italo-American treaty of friendship, trade and navigation will be signed Monday. It has no political clauses.

It will be the first such pact signed by the United States with any European country since the war, and the first "real" treaty to be signed by Italy since Mussolini, an American embassy spokesman said.

The Italian government told Russia "sovereign" Italy "is the only one to judge if there is any reason to raise objections or take protests" concerning United States ships in Italian ports.

U. N. Launches Funds Drive For Children

Lake Success, Long Island, Jan. 31 (NYAT).—The United Nations began broadcasting around the world tonight the most heart-rending of sounds—the forlorn crying of a little girl.

It was the wordless wail of a 4-year-old Polish waif, a refugee in a displaced persons camp outside Berlin, and she was suffering the pangs of illness and years of semi-starvation.

With that cry was lauunched formally one of the U. N.'s most ambitious efforts to build the peace. It was the first global campaign in history, urging people everywhere to "give one day" in pay, work or income to feed as many of the world's 400,000,000 undernourished children as can be reached. Tomorrow the U. N. appeal for children will begin at the American Overseas Aid.—U. N. A. C.

Hagerstown Jail Proves Too Popular

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 31 (AP).—Sheriff Joseph D. Baker is having trouble again at his "hotel." He said the number of persons seeking free food and lodging for the night at the county jail has been increasing lately. And he's getting tired of it.

Mt. Rainier City Hall Packed With Gifts for Adopted Bohars

Bohars Week ended yesterday in Mount Rainier, Md.

Result—the mayor and city council will have to find some place besides the city hall to meet Tuesday. The city hall is packed to overflowing with gifts for the French town adopted by the local Marylanders.

Children of the town paraded yesterday with toy wagons and bicycles bearing the results of a house-to-house canvass of the town. Canned goods, clothing, shoes and other supplies were collected for the 800 residents of the French town that was bombarded by both American and German artillery. It is located about 5 miles from Brest on the French coast.

The movement was started last Thanksgiving when children of the second and third grades of Mount Rainier Elementary School decided that the proper way of expressing thanks was to do something for those less fortunate. Under the leadership of their teacher, Miss Vivian Marshall, the children drew up a plan and called upon local merchants and residents for assistance.

Bo, a china pig designed to receive cash donations, and her spreading litter of smaller Bo's have realized approximately $320 in addition to the many gifts.

The gifts were accepted officially for French Ambassador Henri Bonnet, who is in New York, by Pierre Basdavant, an attache at the Embassy, who rode in the parade yesterday with Mayor Floyd B. Mathias and other city officials.

Franc-Dollar Trading Due to Start Tuesday

Paris, Jan. 31.—French officials forecast today legal trading in dollars and Portuguese escudos would start Tuesday.

The Council of the Republic must first pass the financial measure already indorsed by the National Assembly and specifications must be printed in the "Official Journal," to make the reform legal.

There was no immediate indication whether free gold trading would be effective at the same time.

Unofficial reports said:

1. At the outset, dollars and Portuguese escudos would be traded only at the Bourse, the Paris stock exchange.
2. Amounts of less than $2000 or 25,000 escudos would not be accepted.
3. Only over-the-counter deals would be allowed.
4. There would be transactions only at the buying and selling price with no interim quotations.

The franc has gained 20 points against the dollar on the black market. Before the financial reform was introduced, it required 335 francs on the black bourse to buy $1. Today, it required only 315 francs to get the dollar.

By prior agreement, the British pound sterling will not be admitted to the money market in France. The official rate is now 864 francs to the pound, the Paris black market quotation today was 780, as against 806 several days ago. This constitutes another gain for the franc, even though it is not a legal one.

Navy Reports Biggest Ram Jet Flies Far Into the Supersonic

By the United Press

The Navy said last night that a new ram jet engine—the largest ever flown—has gone "far into the supersonic" speed range.

The new "flying stovepipe" has power "consistently in excess" of the 14,000 horsepower of the largest four-engine planes, the Navy said.

This was the first formal announcement the Navy has made on the ram-jet engine developments since it sent a "small" 70-pound model hurtling into the supersonic range at 1500 miles per hour in June, 1946.

Pound for pound, the new model delivers 25 times the power of the best conventional aircraft engines, the Navy said. The best conventional engine is a 5000-horsepower one belonging to the Air Force.

The new ram jet, a duct shaped like a stovepipe and open at both ends, completed its successful test flights at the naval ordnance test station, Inyokern, Calif., the Navy said.

The ram jet is intended ultimately to power guided missiles. Because it has no moving parts and can be produced rapidly and cheaply, it is considered especially suitable for expendable missiles.

A rocket has to boost the ram jet to supersonic speeds. The rocket then drops off, and the ram jet continues under its own power.

Synthetic Rubber Accord Is Reached

Steelman to Send House Armed Services Group Government Agencies 'Findings'

By Tom Twitty

General agreement has been reached by the Administration and a Republican-controlled committee in Congress on a plan for the permanent preservation of America's multibillion dollar synthetic rubber industry, it was learned yesterday.

The agreement, in all but relaatively minor detail, will be formalized when John R. Steelman, assistant to President Truman, sends a message to the House Armed Services Committee tomorrow commenting on behalf of all the Government agencies on a subcommittee bill now pending.

This is seen by Representative Paul W. Shafer (R., Mich.), chairman of the subcommittee and author of the bill, as assuring speedy passage of permanent rubber legislation which would:

1. Require the preservation in operating or standby condition of at least 600,000 tons annual capacity for general purpose synthetic rubber and 75,000 tons of special purpose synthetic rubber.

2. Require the President to see that one third of the retained capacity is operated.

3. Empower the Government to prescribe specifications requiring the manufacturers of rubber products to use sufficient synthetic rubber to keep one third of the retained capacity in operation.

4. Empower the Government to sell synthetic plants to private industry but only under terms and conditions which would carry forward the national rubber policy.

5. Make Government operation of the minimum capacity mandatory if the plants cannot be turned over to private operation either by sale or lease, and make reservation of the additional standby capacity obligatory on the Government if private industry does not do it.

6. Give the administration broad discretion in administration but with the mandate to "consolidate all of the powers, functions, and authority . . . in one agency, officer, Government corporation or instrumentality" whenever "practicable."

Vandenberg Hints Aid Cut

space and personnel, would delay a real start for six months, and would make the second year rather than the first the "critical" one.

Apart from the time factor, the committee heard its first clear explanation yesterday of what had come to be the most confusing single aspect of the cost of the recovery program.

This was President Truman's budget estimate that only $4,500,000,000 would actually flow out of the Treasury in the 1948-49 fiscal year, although $6,8000,000,000 had been requested for the first 15 months of the program.

The gap of $2,300,000,000, and the failure of Government departments to explain it, brought loud Republican demands last week for slashing the size of the initial authorization.

Yesterday Richard M. Bissel, jr., secretary of the Harriman committee, cited official figures to clear up the mystery. He explained that $1,500,000,000 of the gap of $2,300,000,000 represented shipments made but not yet paid for by the time the fiscal year ended on June 30, 1949. The Treasury would keep this money, he said, to take care of unpaid bills that would come in during the following three months.

The other 800 million dollars of the $2,300,000,000, he went on, would have to be "obligated" against shipments to be made during the following fiscal year. It would be needed to permit the placing of new orders and the starting of production on others, and also to cover goods that might be on their way to the ports but not yet shipped by the start of the 1949-50 fiscal year.

Vandenberg did not seem satisfied, although he said Bissell's figures agreed with information he had received. "There's still a field for legitimate discussion regarding the $2,300,000,000," he said.

Charles P. Taft of Cincinnati was the first witness yesterday, with ideas on the Marshall Plan diametrically opposed to those of his older brother, the Ohio Senator.

"There ought to be a moral commitment now to go through with this thing whatever it costs," he told the committees. Senator Taft has opposed a four-year authorization and, like former President Herbert Hoover, has warned against "even a moral commitment."

Vandenberg, with a broad smile, said the witness was testifying, "not for the Taft family, as I see it?"

"I don't know," Charles Taft answered. "I think some of them might agree." He went on to say that the Marshall Plan "will fail for sure if the program is grudging and half-hearted."

As a former State Department official, Taft suggested setting up a regional council of American ambasadors in Europe in connection with ERP. In the past, he said, almost every American ambassador has been "a satrap in his own area," and only recently has there been any coordination among them in Europe.

He predicted that a regional council of American ambassadors in western Europe, meeting at the headquarters of the new western European organization, would encourage the Europeans to develop a truly international body with an international staff.

Brown of Johns-Manville, author of a controversial book on Germany, argued that all restrictions on German industrial output be ended so that Germany could get back on its feet. He called for a one-year moratorium on coal exports from Germany, and said it would be "dangerous" to let the State Department take over control of the American zone at the present time.

As for the Marshall Plan, he warned the committee not to be guided by western Europe's own estimates of its needs. He said the United States should concentrate its help on the most vital areas, and should provide only the "irreducible minimum," with 80 per cent of it in the form of repayable loans rather than free grants.

A different approach came from Batt, who saw "grave danger" in appropriating too little to achieve European recovery. "Too few dollars would obviously be sheer waste," he said. But he also argued that technical help was needed as well as dollars, and that American private industry should be encouraged to use its brains and its resources to put Europe on its feet.

GI in Crash Says POW Saved Life

Thrown Clear of Plane Wrecked in Alps, Sergeant Was Given Succor by German

Digne, France, Jan. 31 (AP).—The only survivor among 22 Americans in two United States plane crashes in the Alps today credited a German prisoner of war with saving his life.

Sergt. Angelo LaSalle of Des Moines, Iowa, was thrown clear when his plane—a B-17 Flying Fortress—burned. He was saved by Horst Kupski, former German air force pilot, working for a French farmer on the mountain.

The Fortress crashed yesterday, just after sighting wreckage of an Air Force C-47 transport which went down Tuesday. Twelve Americans, including three women and five children, died aboard the transport.

At the hospital Lasalle said:

"We were circling the wreck. I told the pilot not to go too low. But just then our left wing tip scraped the mountain. I was flung around, somehow I was thrown out.

"I had the feeling of sliding down the mountain for hundreds of yards. I saw fires burning close around me—from the plane's gasoline. I tried to get up and run, but passed out. Then sometime later, that German found me.

"The German wrapped a blanket around me. My shoes were torn. He took off his own shoes and put them on me."

The German helped carry the American down the snow-covered mountain.

There were 10 crewmen aboard the Fortress. Searchers said another crewman, lived through the crash but died en route to the hospital.

30 Planes Hunt Airliner Missing Over Atlantic

Hamilton, Bermuda, Jan. 31 (AP).—Thirty planes fanned out today in an ever-widening search for a British aircraft feared lost in a stormy Atlantic with 29 persons aboard.

U. S. Army and Navy craft found no trace of the Star Tiger, missing since Friday.

The British Ministry of Civil Aviation in London said the plane was "presumed lost," but the British South American Airways, operators of the ship, still had hope. Air Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham, RAF hero of World War II, was among the passengers.

7 British Fliers Killed In Crash of Bomber

London, Jan. 31 (AP).—Seven British fliers were killed today in the crash of a Lancaster bomber near Istres, France, the air ministry said tonight. Three others escaped unhurt.

After 28 Years

Park Police Veteran Quits Today

After 28 years, 6 months, 7 days of service, Sergt. Walter H. Sconyers, 55 today retires from the U. S. Park Police Force. He is the oldest member of the force in terms of service.

Sconyers

Members of the force yesterday presented him with fishing equipment, a wrist watch, luggage, and a gold retirement badge. At the presentation ceremonies, park officials spoke briefly about his work, and a letter from Secretary of the Interior Krug was read.

In all of his years with the force, Sconyers has never received a reprimand or notation for violation of police regulations. Officials and citizens alike have commended him for his service, according to the Park Service.

For the past ten years Sconyers has been in charge of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal patrol, and in addition to his duties he has been active in promoting restocking of the stream with game fish.

that rumors of rationing and price controls were causing "serious liquidation of breeding herds" in his State. He said cattle herds were down 25 per cent and sheep flocks down 30 per cent January 1 as compared with a year ago. Hogs, he added, had declined 18 per cent.

4. In Chicago packers and packing house employes disagreed on the effect a 29-cent-an-hour wage increase sought by the United Packing House Workers (CIO) would have on meat prices. The union said profits would absorb the raise; management said it "eventually will have to be borne by the consumer."

5. R. J. Hawes, speaking for the Idaho Cattlemen's Association, told the Senate subcommittee rationing would "hinder and disrupt rather than improve the distribution of meat."

The bill by Flanders is designed to prepare for eventual meat rationing which, the Vermont Senator has often said, is inevitable if food requirements here and abroad are to be met. The subcommittee is expected to vote on the measure tomorrow, with the indications that it will be killed 3 to 2.

Other witnesses yesterday told the subcommittee rationing would impel farmers to sell their grain for human consumption rather than feed it to livestock to produce meat.

Officially there were at least two warnings of scarce meat for this year.

Agriculture dated December 30, 1947.

"Specifically, I ask them to use no wheat in the making of whisky. I ask them to use as a monthly basis of consumption those limited quantities of grain set forth by the Secretary's order as a quota for the month of January. I ask them not to disturb grain markets by rushing in and purchasing large quantities of cereals."

Holds Distilling Nonessential

Mr. Truman pointed out that export of large quantities of grain was necessary to relieve hunger where food was scarce and this necessity called for limitation on use of grain for nonessential purposes.

"When millions face the threat of starvation," he said "the use of grain for the production of whisky and other beverage spirits is a use which is clearly nonessential."

He described limitations imposed under the previous allocation authority as "reasonable" and said they had caused no "undue hardship" in the distilling industry. The industry, he added, "now has on hand stocks of whisky which represent a 6-year supply."

Canadian Consumption Cited

Distillers in paid newspaper advertisements recently have charged that limitations on grain consumption by their industry in the United States had resulted in enormously increased consumption in Canada. This increased Canadian consumption, they declared, more than offset any savings effected by limitations here.

The Senate last week passed the President's bill to continue his limitation authority through February. Before it died in the House Banking Committee Chairman Wolcott (R., Mich.), said it would be "nonsensical" to continue restrictions on American distillers.

Wolcott contended the Government had authorized shipment of corn to foreign countries to be used for making spirits rather than feeding the hungry.

Quota 50% of Average

The 2½-million-bushel voluntary quota asked by Mr. Truman yesterday compares with an average monthly consumption by distillers of five million bushels in the first 10 months of 1947.

Louisville Distillers Reported Cooperative

Louisville, Ky., Jan 31 (AP).—Louisville distillers undoubtedly will cooperate with President Truman's request that whisky makers voluntarily limit their use of grain to 2,500,000 bushels a month, it was said here tonight.

The statement was made by J. A. Englehard, president of the Distilled Spirits Institute. He declared however, that "in reality, the whisky dealer's contribution to the grain-saving program is only a psychological one." He said only 1 per cent of the Nation's corn crop went to the whisky industry, and this was merely processed, and not consumed.

Good News For Folks Who Suffer From ✓ STOMACH GAS
✓ SOUR FOOD TASTE
✓ ACID INDIGESTION

Do you feel bloated and miserable after every meal, taste sour, bitter food? If so, here is how you may get blessed relief from this nervous distress.

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red-blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Don't wait! Join the host of happy people SSS Tonic has helped. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle of SSS Tonic from your drug store today. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

Congress Powers Held Vital to U. S.

Otherwise, Martin Warns, Saboteurs Could Take Over

By The Associated Press

Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) said yesterday that saboteurs could "execute a sudden coup and take over the Government" if what he described as a powerful campaign being waged to destroy confidence in Congress is successful.

Martin made the statement in an address to the National Association of Women Broadcasters.

The speaker said America for years has harbored thousands of people who would "sabotage our American system of freedom and bring our people and our Government under the sway of an alien ideology and a foreign clique of rulers."

"And for years," he continued, there has been "a very powerful, highly sustained, well-financed and cleverly managed campaign of sabotage in some of the press, over some radio microphones, and on some public rostrums, to destroy the confidence of the people in the Congress as an institution."

If this confidence can be destroyed so that people put their faith in "powers of control, regimentation and restriction concentrated in the executive department," Martin said, then the people will have been defeated and free government shackled.

"When that has been accomplished, it would be simple for the saboteurs to carry out a campaign of destruction against the executive department, execute a sudden coup and take over the Government," he continued.

The speaker said Congress can, does and should take issues often with the executive branch on expenditures, taxation, powers and restrictions.

"The very essence of Americanism," he said, "is proposal, disagreement, discussion and compromise. Whenever any one, or any two branches of the Government can put a stop to that kind of system, free government is gone, and individual liberty will be dead."

Reece Calls Communism Chief Peril

Philadelphia, Jan. 31 (AP).—Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said tonight "the spread of Communist power throughout the world constitutes the greatest menace to our Nation."

Chief speaker at a dinner of the Order of Sons of Italy in America, Reece added:

"Whether or not we shall be compelled ultimately to come to grips with communism abroad, is something for the future to decide."

Reece defined communism as "an organized attempt directed from a foreign headquarters to destroy liberty, to destroy property, to destroy religion and all of the other things necessary to the perpetuation of our form of government. In so far as it receives support from American citizens, it is nothing more than organized treason."

"It is a grim fact which must be faced," he declared, "that the Communist power today represents the greatest threat of our American institutions and it is all the more unfortunate that it has become such a threat because of unwise policies of appeasement, conciliation and even outright encouragement and material support practiced by our own Government.

"We have helped to create a monster which threatens to destroy us."

Ban on Books Is Advocated

tee and "have no place in the school system of the District."

Adamic has written numerous books about Yugoslavia and immigrants in the United States. Miss Kreuger was said by the subcommittee to be a director of the Walt Whitman School in New York which is on the subversive list issued by the Justice Department. Neither has authored textbooks in use here.

The report recommended that teachers "should continue with renewed vigor to teach the evils of communism and its destruction of individual liberty and freedom."

Testimony yesterday on the bill introduced by Chairman A. L. Miller (R., Nebr.) to increase patriotism in the schools and requiring six years of study of American history and the Constitution brought these incidental charges.

1. Attorney Franklin T. Niles, author of the bill said the National Education Association, because it is a half block from the Soviet Embassy, had been issuing pamphlets which were not strictly patriotic.

2.—Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, president of "The Wheel of Progress," which she described as a patriotic organization, said that District teachers were "required" to take postgraduate studies at Columbia University. "Everybody knows," she said, "that the school is radical." (No such requirement exists, teachers testified.)

3.—Chairman Miller said that Dr. Corning had taken the side of Rugg many years ago while Corning was school superintendent at Colorado Springs, Col. The accusation fell flat before Dr. Corning's spirited defense of his professional reputation.

Representative Miller agreed to hold secret sessions for teachers who allegedly have made accusations of patriotic deviation in the school system. The request was made by Eugene A. Grady, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, who declared the teachers feared punishment if they appeared openly.

Dr. Regis Boyle, president of the District Education Association and numerous other teacher representatives, agreed that the patriotic ideals expressed by the bill were excellent. But, said Dr. Boyle, compulsory study of American history for six years meant abolition of other courses required for college entrance. Besides, she added, patriotic ideals were not instilled by teaching American history alone.

Of 'Undermining'

Air Lines Accuse U. S. Agencies

By C. B. Allen

The Joint Congressional Aviation Policy Board moved yesterday to investigate air line charges of widespread government department bargain-hunting in air transportation—at the ultimate expense of the government itself.

Members of the board's staff called on the Air Transport Association to provide immediately copies of correspondence between the ATA and W. Stuart Symington, Air Force secretary. In this exchange the industry's trade organization unsuccessfully protested what it considered Symington's adherence to a penny-wise-and-pound-foolish policy of "undermining" the scheduled air lines.

The ATA contends that the Air Force, as well as other government agencies, has been doing this consistently by patronizing independent cut-rate, charter service operators in competition with the air lines on routes that the latter have been given the responsibility by the Civil Aeronautics Board of operating and developing "in the national interest."

Specifically, the letters sought by the Congressional board as a starting point in its airing of what the ATA calls "the whole unsound situation," deal with the pending transportation of 2000 Army dependents from the United States to Japan and other Pacific points.

Symington has indicated the Air Force's intention to split this business equally between the Nation's two CAA-certificated trans-Pacific air lines and two charter service operators.

Congressional Aviation Policy Board spokesmen said they intended, if necessary, to call Secretary Symington, other Government dpeartment heads who have been awarding contracts to charter service operators, and Paul Aiken, second assistant postmaster general in charge of air mail.

This would be to "get at the bottom" of the ATA's contention that all such "bargain contracts" deprive the scheduled air lines of revenue that, eventually, must be made up to them in the form of mail payments by the Postoffice department under their CAB franchises.

Vice Admiral Emory S. Land, retired, ATA president, said on January 5 in his first letter to Symington about the Pacific case, the Government "will, in effect, be paying twice for this transportation" if the Air Force decision stands.

In his letter, Admiral Land pointed out that the award of these routes by the CAB was made "with Air Force and Army approval" and that these and other Government agencies therefore have an obligation to support the CAB-certificated operators.

In a supplemental letter to Symington on January 19, Admiral Land charged that the army, in mid-September, 1947, upset a deal that the trans-world arline had made to fly 1000 civilan rehabilitation workers over its CAB-certified route to Greece. This, he said, was done by requiring the contractors concerned to "divert a large part of the traffic" to a bargain-rate charter operator.

UAW Co-op Move Expansion From 6 To 9 States Slated

Detroit, Jan. 31 (AP).—The CIO United Auto Workers today gave out a progress report on its mushrooming consumer cooperative movement against spiraling living costs.

Reporting the co-op activities in a dozen industrial centers in six States, Educational Director Victor G. Reuther said in Michigan alone the union has establishments at Pontiac, Detroit, Lansing, Flint, Jackson, Muskegon, Saginaw and Port Huron. They sell groceries, appliances, hardware and auto supplies, some equipped with mass-distribution warehouses.

Elkhart, Ind., has one store and is pushing a drive to open two more. Waterloo, Iowa, UAW members have an option on a $75,000 building and are striving to raise share capital.

Millers Ask President To Avert Early Strike

Minneapolis, Jan. 31 (AP).—The American Federation of Grain Processors today asked President Truman to "avert" a strike called for "shortly after February 10" which the union said would affect 75 per cent of the grain-milling industry.

S. P. Ming, federation president, and H. A. Schneider, general secretary, said in a letter to President Truman their current contract expires tomorrow and that a strike "is scheduled to take place shortly after February 10, 1948" unless a contract agreement is reached.

The union officials urged the President to appoint a board of inquiry to investigate the AFGP's dispute with six milling companies representing "approximately 75 per cent of the Nation's flour, cereal and agricultural feed."

The AFGP, the letter stated, represented nearly 15,000 milling industry workers in 14 States.

Stassen Supporters Claim 230 First-Ballot Delegates

Portland, Me., Jan. 31 (AP).—Aides of Harold E. Stassen said today the former Minnesota Governor running for the Republican presidential nomination would have at least 230 delegates on the first ballot at the national convention.

It takes 548 to get the nomination.

The Stassen camp announced it was counting on at least 17 of the 30 delegates in the three New England States Stassen visited—Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine, with Stassen himself listing Maine and Connecticut as his two strongest States in the region.

He said he expected to win a majority of the eight delegates in New Hampshire's presidential preference primary March 9—important as it is the first primary in the Nation.

Stassen appeared confident during his five-day tour of northern New England and at the end said:

"I would not change places with any other candidate at the moment."

He clearly appeared counting on many of the supporters of the "draft-Eisenhower" movement swinging to his banner.

After leaving for a weekend rest with his family in Minnesota, Stassen said he would next campaign in Wisconsin.

Wallace Rejected

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Henry Wallace, third party presidential candidate, lost a possible 260,000 votes today when the State CIO adopted a resolution rejecting him as their candidate in 1948. The resolution called for its 260,000 members to give their support to the progressive forces within either established party.

Pledged to Truman

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 31 (AP).—A delegation pledged to the renomination of President Truman was named today by the Democratic State Central Committee of California.

It was agreed the successor to National Committeeman Edwin W. Pauley, resigned, would not be named until after the National Convention in June. The committee accepted Pauley's resignation and directed his work be turned over to James Roosevelt, as State chairman, and Mrs. Edward H. Heller of San Francisco, national State committeewoman.

Will Rogers, jr., as well as Henry I. Dockweiller of Los Angeles, both early Truman supporters, were named among the delegates-at-large.

Protest on Film Rejected

By The Associated Press

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, yesterday rejected a protest from the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship against the movie "The Iron Curtain." The council had said it would impair relations with Russia.

"The screen is free in America," Johnston said. "I intend to do everything within my power to keep it free . . . I therefore reject your protest."

"You are aware that a play, 'The Russian Question,' is enjoying great popularity in Russia . . . this play, with its sneering, lying attack on the United States and its people, is an open bid to stir contempt and hatred for America on the part of Russian audiences."

Then Johnston asked the Rev. William Howard Melich, chairman of the council:

"Have you written to anyone in Russia protesting this deliberate effort to create bad feeling against our country?"

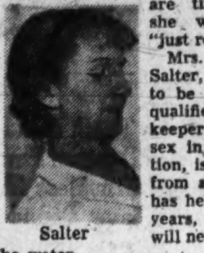
Last of Her Sex

Woman Quits Bay Light Post

Turkey Point, Md., Jan. 31 (AP).—The last woman lighthouse keeper on Chesapeake Bay formally gave up her job today because her feet are tired and she wants to "just rest."



Salter

Mrs. Fannie Salter, believed to be the only qualified light-keeper of her sex in the Nation, is retiring from a job she has held for 23 years, but she will never leave the water.

The woman, tender of the light at the head of the bay on a tip of a peninsula formed between the northeast and Elk River, has been on sick leave since last September.

"Climbing the tower has given me fallen arches," she explained. "I haven't quite decided what I will do, but I'll stay near the water. I'll rest and catch up on long-delayed visits with relatives."

Mrs. Salter, who said she was in her "sixties," took control of the Turkey Point tower February 11, 1925, under appointment by Calvin Coolidge. She succeeded her husband, who had been the keeper for three years before his death.

Sandy Point Ferry Back In Service

By The Associated Press

Ferry service between Maryland's Eastern and Western shores was resumed today despite heavy ice floes which sent one craft aground and marooned 129 passengers aboard the ship for more than 13 hours.

The ferry, the Governor Herbert R. O'Conor, pulled into the Sandy Point ferry slip under its own power after crew members repaired a steering cable which snapped and caused the vessel to drift helplessly into a sandbar last night.

The passengers suffered no discomfort. Many slept in their automobiles, while elderly passengers rested in crews' quarters.

The O'Conor went aground about a quarter of a mile off Sandy Point.

Mrs. Esther Gilbert, wife of Engle L. Gilbert of the University of Maryland staff, told newsmen this morning that no one had spent an uncomfortable night.

"My husband and I," she said "slept in our car for several hours and were not bothered by the cold."

AFL Urges $800 Postman Pay Raise

Council Makes Appeal to Congress For Others 'Victimized by Inflation'

Miami, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—The AFL today appealed to Congress to grant an $800 annual raise to letter carriers and other Government employes who, the labor group said, "are being victimized by inflation.

"The plight of Government workers dependent on fixed salaries in these times of soaring living costs has reached an emergency status," the AFL executive council said. The council is holding its mid-winter meeting here.

The National Association of Letter Carriers, headed by William C. Doherty, a member of the 15-man council, set the $800 figure at a special wage conference in Washington three weeks ago. The postmen's pay ranges from $2100 to $3100 a year.

The AFL council, taking up the fight, said it was up to Congress, which fixes the pay of Federal employes, "to correct this mass injustice without delay."

"The ever-widening gap between wage standards in the government service and the cost of living is graphically illustrated by the official record. Postal employes received their last wage adjustment on January 1, 1945, and other government employes six months later. According to the figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, it is estimated that the over-all cost of living has risen more than 27 per cent within the past two years."

"Severe economic pressure" has forced some government workers to seek part-time jobs to supplement their pay, the Council said.

"Within the past year, most employers in private industry have recognized the economic facts of life and adjusted wages to make up, in part at least, for higher prices," the council said.

"But government employes, who cannot bargain collectively for wages or strike, but must depend upon the . . . Congress, have been callously ignored. . . . The disparity between government standards and private industry standards has never been so extreme as now."

Rubber Union Set to Ask Pay Boosts for 200,000

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Nation's 200,000 organized rubber workers are ready to ask for higher wages.

The CIO United Rubber Workers, nearly half of whose membership is concentrated in this manufacturing center, emphasized the cost of living as the basis of the new demands.

On Friday the union's executive board will meet in Cleveland to prepare its recommendations, and the following two days the URWA policy committee will formulate the specific demands. Actual negotiations may not get under way until April.

The belief here is that the figure will be close to that decided upon by the CIO United Auto Workers, 30 cents an hour. In the case of the auto union, five of the 30 cents would be for hospitalization and health insurance.

Petrillo Bending

Radio Hopes For Lifting Of AFM Ban

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Recent conciliatory gestures by James C. Petrillo have raised hopes in radio circles for complete and amicable settlement involving performances of musicians on the air.

Industry officials now believe they will be able to reach agreement with the president of the American Federation of Musicians on standard and frequency modulation radio and television as well.

During the 60-day extension of the contract between the AFL musicians union and the four major networks, the two sides will try to work out a formula for lifting the union will lift its ban on FM television. Petrillo has expressed confidence an agreement can be reached.

Simultaneously with announcement of the contract extension Thursday, Petrillo also disclosed the union will life its ban on FM duplication of standard radio musical programs at midnight tonight.

Threat of Telegraph Strike Is Removed

By The Associated Press

The threat of a Nation-wide Western Union strike has ended.

Forty-five thousand telegraphers voted to accept a raise of 8 cents an hour, effective April 1, 1948. This was announced yesterday by Adolph Brungs, president of the Western Union division of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, AFL.

Baltimore Papers Give Printers Raise

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—Baltimore newspapers have given their printers a wage increase of 22 cents per hour, Local No. 12 of the International Typographical Union announced today.

Charles V. Brannock, president of the local, said the increase was agreed to voluntarily by the publishers, but no contract was signed and there was no commitments as to the duration of the boost or any other matter.

Printers employed by the Baltimore Sunpapers, the News-Post, the Sunday American and the Daily Record, a publication devoted to legal notices and business news, are affected

Brannock said the new scale is $2.27 an hour for day employes, $2.40 for night workers and $2.54 for those on the third shift.

Delaware U. Lifts Its Ban on Negroes

Newark, Del., Jan. 31 (AP).—The University of Delaware today lifted its ban on admission of Negroes. President William S. Carlson said it was "the first such action taken by a Southern university."

Dr. Carlson explained that any Negro resident of the State may enroll in any course of study at the university which is not provided by the Delaware State College for Negroes.

Dr. Carlson said the university's board of trustees acted after the United States Supreme Court ordered the University of Oklahoma to admit a Negro student to its law school.

He added that Delaware's action was inaugurated by the trustees. He said the trustees felt the Supreme Court's action had "a binding effect" on Delaware.

The Delaware General Assembly, Dr. Carlson said, had provided "that separate schools be maintained for Negro and white residents on elementary, secondary and college levels thereby establishing a public policy that should not be departed from . . . unless by paramount authority."

He added that under the Supreme Court ruling, it was established that the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution would be violated by such a ruling.

The university's enrollment is 2000, the Delaware State College for Negroes' 400.

Oklahoma Admissions Are Ruled 'Unlawful'

Oklahoma City, Jan. 31 (AP).—Attorney General Mac Q. Williamson late today ruled it would be "unlawful" for the University of Oklahoma regents to admit six Negroes who seek graduate work.

Williamson said segregation laws were made by the people of the State, and until they were changed by the people—or other high authority—it was the duty of State officers to enforce them.

The application of Walter M. Harrison, 57, prominent white Oklahoma newspaperman, for entrance to Langston Negro University's School of Law here was rejected today for the second time by Dean Jerome E. Hemry.

At Norman, Okla., 100 Irish students at the University of Oklahoma, lampooning campus meetings of the past two days on the racial segregation laws of the State, demonstrated for the rights for the wearers of the green.

Ferrill Rogers, Stillwater, Okla., told the campus meeting, "Sure, and 'tis true, Oklahoma has a law school for Negroes in Oklahoma City, and one for whites here, but there is no school for the Irish."

The group, mimicking the burning of the Fourteenth (civil rights) Amendment by students protesting racial discrimination, burned a copy of the hated railroad act of 1872, put the ashes in a can and mailed them to the janitor. The ashes of the Fourteenth Amendment were mailed to President Truman.

Strike Leaders To Heed Call

Public Workers of America, parent union. Bernstein appeared before the Hoffman subcommittee last Monday under subpena.

Already served with subpenas for appearance tomorrow are Abram Flaxer, U.P.W.A. national president; Victor R. Daly and Robert A. Morrison, United States Employment Service officials; and Ethel Thompson, identified by United States Marshal's office as a cafeteria union receptionist.

Hoffman has stated that he wants to ask the unon leaders whether they are or ever have been Communists.

The strike began January 5 after GSI insisted that the cafeteria workers union file non-Communist affidavits before contract negotiations were begun.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People yesterday urged the closing down of all government cafeterias affected by the strike, in letters to Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming and all Cabinet officers. Of the 12 cafeterias involved, all are operating except those in Labor Department and Supreme Court buildings.

In its letters, the NAACP pointed out that the "vast majority" of cafeteria employes in the strike are Negroes, and charged that "the real problem in the dispute is racial rather than economic."

Charles E. Sands, international representative of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Union, an AFL affiliate, yesterday continued his drive to organize nonstriking GSI workers and those hired in place of the strikers. He distributed circulars seeking authorization from current GSI workers to represent them in any labor negotiations.

Negro Legion Post Gets Charter Back

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 31 (AP).—The revoked charter of an all-Negro American Legion post was restored last night by the Illinois Legion Department which had suspended it last August in a dispute over communism.

William P. Kleuskens, then State commander, investigated the Roy S. Tisdell Post No. 537 after its commander took a leading part in demanding that Paul Robeson, Negro singer, be received in Peoria after his scheduled concert was canceled.

proposed scripts for future broadcasts, decided to refuse any additional free or paid time during the campaign.

The commission came into the case to decide whether censorship was involved. In today decision the commission said the station had acted as a censor, but there was no evidence of "deliberate or willful attempt to violate" the communications statute.

The commission said, "We are of the opinion that the prohibition against any censorship by licenses of political speeches by candidates for office is absolute, and no exception exists in the case of material which is either libelous or might tend to involve the station in an action for damages."

Democrats Make Tax Bid

George is known to have told colleagues he thinks the cut in Treasury income should be held to around four billion dollars.

Byrd has stipulated that the Republicans must prove they are going to cut the President's $39,669,000,000 budget about three billion dollars before he will support a tax cut.

McClellan is the chief Senate advocate of the split income provision which has been written into the House bill. Under it, a married couple can divide their income to take advantage of lower rates.

Senate Republicans plan to go ahead with hearings after the House passes the bill but delay Senate debate on the measure until after action on the European Recovery program.

'Strike Vote' Taken By British Doctors

Association Begins Poll of 56,000 On Boycott of Nation's Medical Plan

London, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The powerful British Medical Association started taking a "strike vote" among its 56,000 members today, in an effort to organize militant opposition to the government's nationalized medicine plan.

The association sent ballots to all members in England, Scotland and Wales, asking whether they are willing to byocott the socialized medicine scheme, which the government has said will become effective July 5, regardless of objections.

The plan provides salaries for every doctor and free medical and dental care for every Briton.

Representatives from every section of Britain voted at an association conference to recommend a general boycott. If carried through, it would be the first nation-wide strike against any socialization measure approved by Parliament.

The British Dental Association announced today its representative board had voted 84 to 4 to recommend that members refuse to participate.

Four physicians who are Labor members of Parliament today accused the association's leaders of attempting "to organize and exploit an outburst of mass hysteria among doctors."

"We seem to have passed beyond the stage when the prime consideration is the welfare of the patient," the letter said.

The act provides $264,000,000 to compensate doctors for the loss of their right to sell their practices and provides them with an annual salary of $1200 plus approximately $3 for every state patient listed in their books.

Prudential Adopts Plan To Pay New Agents

The Prudential Insurance Co. of America announced yesterday the adoption of a new plan of compensation for new agents during their "breaking in" period. It is known as the two-year incentive plan and provides a salary during the beginners' first three weeks and then for a further period of six months.

Frick Clarifies Business Group's Home Rule Stand

Clarification of the stand of the Federation of Business Men's Associations on the Auchincloss home-rule bill came yesterday from federation secretary Lewis F. Frick.

Frick said statements attributed to federation members at the Friday meeting represented individual views. He said that the Federation opposes the bill on the ground it does not let the people decide what form of local government they shall have. The federation also is opposed to permitting those persons to vote who pay no local taxes and to permitting Government employes to vote for improvements requiring bonded indebtedness.

Frick said the federation also believes the suggested form of government would be far more expensive than the present form.

Navy Fuel Oil Due To Ease Shortage

Limit on Trucks

Va. Road Law Held Fuel Oil Curb

Emergency fuel oil deliveries to nearby Virginia from Baltimore are hampered by the State's refusal to relax its highway weight-load limits, an official of a major trucking association charged yesterday.

Accusing the State of an "outright refusal to recognize the emergency," C. Austin Sutherland, secretary, and manager of National Tank Truck Carriers, Inc., said Virginia officials are forcing fuel trucks to enter the State only partially loaded by making them comply with the weight regulations.

Temporary, emergency relaxation of the law would enable each truck to carry from 1000 to 1500 more gallons on trips into Virginia, Sutherland said. He explained that the average truck, fully loaded, carries from 4500 to 6000 gallons of fuel oil, but in order to comply with the Virginia weight limit must cut the load to about 3750 gallons.

Gen. J. A. Anderson, State Highway Commissioner, said yesterday he saw no possibility of lifting the restrictions because "it might mean sending trucks over bridges that couldn't stand the extra loads."

Maryland, which has a higher weight limitation than Virginia, has indicated it will not enforce the law in regard to fuel trucks as long as the present emergency continues. According to the State Roads Commission and State Police, no effort has been made to check trucks for overloading since the shortage became acute.

41 Below Temperature Frosts Walls of Home

Warren, Pa., Jan. 31 (U.P.).—An oil worker and his wife living in a valley 5 miles south of here awoke at dawn today and read 41 degrees below zero on their thermometer.

The couple, Arch Blowers, 66, and his wife, Clara, 58, found the walls and floor of their two-story brick insulated home covered with frost even though they left gas stoves burning in each room.

Hard Coal Supply Now Reported as Becoming Tight

The expected arrival last night of 735,000 gallons of Navy-loaned fuel oil and new February allocations scheduled for this week should ease the fuel shortage here, Coordinator J. Thomas Kennedy said yesterday.

District coal dealers, however, said a possible shortage of the hard fuel was developing as many reported a run on anthracite orders from householders caught short by the continued cold weather. The soft coal supply situation was easier.

Coordinator Kennedy announced that as of yesterday morning, the District's "pool" of fuel oil for emergency or hardship cases amounted to 119,000 gallons. During the past week, he said, the pool has distributed some 212,018 gallons of fuel oil and 7625 gallons of kerosene.

The emergency pool will receive 300,000 gallons from the Navy shipment being loaded to the District, Kennedy said, with the rest assigned to L. P. Steuart & Bros., Inc., for such of their customers who can show an immediate need for it.

While some coal dealers reported a shortage of all anthracite, others declared they were short only of certain sizes of coal and some said they were able, so far, to take care of their own customers without trouble.

Practically all coal dealers said they had been receiving greatly increased coal orders from householders in the past few days, beginning in most cases with the snowstorm of a week ago.

Though the majority said this was creating only a "selective" shortage of certain sizes of anthracite, one smaller dealer said he was out of coal and another said he had nothing but pea size anthracite left. The soft-coal supply appeared to be sufficient.

Demand Is "Terrific"

The weather was blamed by the dealers not only for the large demand—described by one as "terrific"—but also for smaller amounts of coal being mined, frozen switches in spur railroad tracks and other transportation delays, and more difficult handling.

A number of persons calling the dealers in recent days have been asking for cannel coal and similar types of fuel suitable for burning in grates and fireplaces, the coal companies reported.

New coal shipments—practically all of which come by rail—were expected early this week.

The barge carrying the fuel oil loaned by the Navy was expected to dock at the Petrol Corp. dock in the Anacostia River, at the foot of 13th st. se. at about 8 last evening, after the tug towing it was delayed by ice off Indian Head, Md. Fuel Oil Coordinator Kennedy enlisted the aid of the Coast Guard to help the tug on its way.

Co-ordinator Kennedy announced plans to check oil dealers' tanks, beginning Monday, to see for himself how much fuel oil they have. On two occasions, he said, he had learned that one dealer was trying to use the "emergency pool" to supply customers when the dealers have used his own stocks.

The Fifth Naval District headquarters in Norfolk announced yesterday that a seagoing tug has been assigned by the Navy to the Coast Guard to help keep shipping channels open in Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac River during the current cold weatther.

From Pittsburgh, Chairman Walter S. Hallanan of the National Petroleum Council said the petroleum industry is moving rapidly to make greater supplies of heating oil available, although unlimited supplies are not in prospect.

As the Department of Commerce clamped down again on oil exports, to ease the fuel shortage, Representative Dewey Shore (R., Mo.) said here that current United States military oil supplies would be too low to sustain a major war effort more than two weeks. Short is chairman of a House Armed Services subcommittee, which is making a study of the military oil situation.

throughout the city within a matter of days.

New York's vast office buildings, such as the Empire State, the Rockfeller Center group, the Chrysler tower, and its huge retail stores, were not expected to be affected. They buy metered steam from the New York Steam Corp. just as they buy metered electricity. The corporation generates its steam from coal.

Likewise served by the corporation is the Broadway theatrical and night club district.

Oil distributing trucks will be escorted by policemen to guarantee that no one not on the priority list receives fuel oil.

The Mayor said the ban included theaters.

If the distributors do not abide by the priority list, the mayor said, the Board of Health will be empowered to declare a state of emergency and will proceed to limit by law the distribution of the fuel.

Sen. Taylor to Speak

Luray, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—The local World Citizenship Council announced today that Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) will speak at the Baptist Church here on February 8 at 7:30 p. m. The Senator will discuss the relation of Russa to the movement for world peace.

This Was January . . .

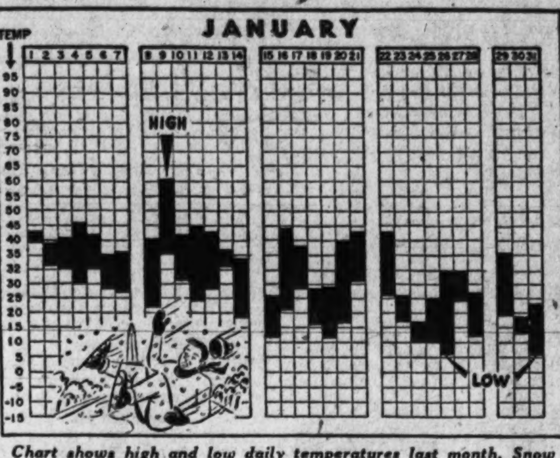

Chart shows high and low daily temperatures last month. Snow fell on January 6, 13, 23 and 24

It Was Above Freezing Once In Last Nine Days of January

January in Washington went out like polar bears and penguins, with the mercury rising above freezing only once during the last nine days.

The cold spell, however, did not rival a nine-day period in February, 189, when 34.2 inches of snow fell and 4 above zero on February 10 was the highest temperature.

In fact, January turned out to be a fairly normal month, despite the traffic-snarling 5.2 inch snowfall on the twenty-fourth, according to the statistically-minded Weather Bureau, with no records broken and only a minor one approached. The 6-degree low on January 26 was the second coldest for that date in Weather Bureau records.

Not so Hot as 76

High temperature, 61 degrees, was reached January 9, but that's not so hot when the weatherman points out it was 76 on the same date in 1937.

The District's average temperature for the month was 33.4, with the first half slightly warmer than usual and the last half a few degrees colder. A typical January, the weatherman says.

But there was nothing typical about a day in January, 1881, when the all-time local low of 14 below was registered. "Now there was a day!" he says with warm enthusiasm, rubbing his cold hands.

In the snow department January was "fairly light," partly because the past month's 11.7 inch total doesn't shovel up against the 31.5 inches recorded in January, 1922. Actually, snow fell only five days last month, not counting days on which there were traces.

The 8 inches the city had on the 24th can't hold a snowplow to January 28, 1922, when the city was buried under a 21-inch fall.

Wind Not Too Bad

Washingtonians weren't bothered much with wind in January, although it blew every day. Prevailing direction was northwest, which is typical and it stayed close to average January velocity—7.5 miles an hour.

Strongest wind hit the District the day it was warmest, Jan. 9, with the weatherman clocking it at 28 miles per hour. The day before it skimmed around the corners at a leisurely 3.7 mph.

As for sunshine, it, too, was normal. The Capital had sunshine about 50 per cent of the time. Over the years it has shone an average .46 per cent of the time in January.

16,000 Vote Shirkers Sued in Guatemala

Guatemala City, Guatemala, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The director of registration brought court action today against 16,000 local voters for failure to go to the polls in recent municipal elections.

Similar action will be brought against a total of 80,000 voters throughout Guatemala. Under present election laws, those who are able and fail to vote are liable to fines or imprisonment.

President Juan Jose Arevalo did not vote but was said to have given a valid excuse. No action will be brought against him.

New Penicillin Method Found

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—An improved technique for preparing penicillin has been developed at Fort Howard Veterans Hospital, physicians there announced today.

Elmer A. Gissell, 46-year-old pharmacist at the hospital, was credited with devising the new method, and doctors said it may save VA hospitals thousands of dollars annually.

Under the old method, a vial of crystallized penicillin had to be punctured with a hypodermic syringe containing a solution to dissolve the crystals. Doctors then used the syringe to inject the drugs in patients.

Hypodermic needles were blunted and frequently broken by that method, doctors said, and only physicians, nurses and experienced technicians were qualified to use it.

Gissell's system employs the frame of a bottle-capper equipped with a syringe holder, a stopcock to control the flow of the solution and two permanently fixed needles to puncture the lead and rubber caps on the vials. The rubber caps are self-sealing, thus keeping the vials sterile after the initial puncturing.

The device permits unskilled personnel to prepare large amounts of the drug and the storage of vials ready for immediate use by physicians and nurses. Doctors say the method not only curtails breakage losses but also reduces patient discomfort from needles

Over 940 G-Girls Vie for Role in Comic Strip

More than 940 entries were received by The Washington Post in its Mary Worth contest. A Government girl will be selected to serve as a model for the heroine in the next episode of the comic strip. The contest closed Wednesday at midnight.

The 25 or 30 finalists will be seelcted from their photos. These girls will then be asked to appear in person before the judges.

Girls in the contest are competing for a first prize of $200 from The Washington Post and a nine-day Bermuda trip, given by the World-Wide Travel Service Corp.

The winner will fly to Bermuda via Colonial Airlines and stay at the Hilton Hotels' Bermudiana.

Second prize winner will receive $50 in cash, and 10 runners-up will get $5 each.

School Bills Drawn For Va. Assembly

Delegate McCue Announces Measures Designed to Support VALC Report

Richmond, Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—Legislation to overhaul the State Department of Education will be put before the Virginia General Assembly probably next week.

E. O. McCue, jr., delegate from Charlottesville and chairman of the Virginia Advisory Legislative Council, said that bills also were being prepared for introduction carrying out other recommendations of the strongly worded recommendations on education, the VALC report, dropped on Governor Tuck's desk on the eve of the opening of the 1948 Assembly, which proposed:

Revamping of the State education department to put the board under a strong fulltime chairman and repealing of all laws dealing with the powers of the State superintendent of public instruction so he could devote his full time and talents to curriculum improvements.

Establishment of regional vocational schools to equip the 97.2 per cent of Virginia students who don't complete college courses to earn their living in trades and skills. The VALC said that the present vocational training plan amounted to little more than "hobby shops" attached to the individual schools.

An increase of 10 per cent in the localities' share of teacher costs from the present 30 per cent to 40 per cent.

A campaign to promote the dignity and appeal of the teaching profession; liberalization of the retirement system and reopening it to teachers who rejected it in 1942; a State-subsidized sick leave plan, liberalization of teacher scholarships, and a reorganization of the three State teachers colleges to bring them around to the function for which they were established—the training of teachers.

Meanwhile Virginia lawmakers went home today with plenty of problems and the big question—taxes—still unsolved.

Tax proposals are summarized as follows:

1. Governor Tuck's program: Increase in income tax rates to 2 and 3 per cent, with a 5 per cent levy on incomes in excess of $5000. Estimated increase: $4,075,106.

Corporate income tax: 5 per cent instead of 3. Estimated increase: $4,694,410.

Retail merchants' license: 20 cents per $100 sales above $2000, increased from 13 cents. Estimated increase: $830,826.

Wholesalers license: 20 cents per $100 or purchase, increased from 13 per cent: $349,632.

Public service corporations: ½ per cent addition to gross receipts tax. Estimated increase: $1,863,311.

Recordation tax: 15 cents per $100, increased from 12 cents. Estimated increase: $234,844.

Total result of Tuck program: $13,833,225 increase per year. However, not all increases would be effective the first year, so the total two-year expectation is $21,700,000 more.

Masons Plan More Circus Acts For Thrill Night

The atmosphere of the circus will prevail more than ever at this year's Masonic "Night of Thrills" which will be presented the night of June 18 in Griffith Stadium.

This phase of the program was definitely decided upon last night at a meeting of the Worshipful Masters Association in the Masonic Temple, 801 13th st. nw., with Roger G. Mills, general chairman, to map preliminary steps of the night of pageantry.

Mills, worshipful master of King Solomon Lodge, F. A. A. M., pointed out that with both adults and children getting a great kick from acts from the Big Tops, more of this type of entertainment would be added to the program this year.

Proceeds go to the maintenance of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, 6000 New Hampshire ave. ne.

68 Hurt at Home

Ice Goeth Before Many A Fall Here

Washington's icy weather contributed extensively to the toll from home accidents during the past week, the Red Cross Accident Prevention Service reported yesterday.

Falls, mostly caused by ice on steps and in yards, resulted in four deaths during the week. One broken arm, two fractured ribs, two dislocated elbows, a back injury and other injuries from falls sent 27 persons to the hospital.

Skiing and coasting accounted for a number of accidents to school-age children. In addition, one 9-year-old youngster swallowed a cigarette, a 4-year-old put a peanut in his nose, another child stuck a pencil in his ear and a little boy ate lye.

During the week, five deaths and 68 injuries were reported from home accidents in Washington. So far this year there have been 15 deaths from home accidents, as compared with 24 for the same period of 1947. There have been 365 home injuries this year.

President Truman yesterday signe da bill authorizing the acceptance of non-Federal land in the Gettysburg National Military Park, Pa., without cost, from the Evergreen Cemetery Association of Gettysburg.

In exchange the bill authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to give the association approximately 1¼ acres of Federally owned land within the park as a right of way through the Evergreen Cemetery property.

Louise F. Mann of 83 U st. nw., reported the theft of a pay envelope containing $97.19, which was grabbed when she was walking in the first block of U st. nw. at about 1'10 a. m. yestrday. She described the robber as a man about five feet tall wearing a dark overcoat.

Bakery Worker Robbed

Tommy Stathopoulos, of 4022 13th st. nw., told police he was held up by two men, one with a nickel-plated revolver and the other with a knife, and robbed of a pair of glasses valued at $35 and 75 cents in change. Stathopoulos said the robbery occurred at about 1:30 a. m. as he was entering the Certified Bakery, 631 S st. nw., where is is employed.

Chester A. Jackson, 44, of 3605 Warder st. nw., was in critical condition at Gallinger Hospital with a skull fracture, after being beaten late Friday and robbed of $5 by two passengers in his taxi in an alley in the rear of 21 M st. sw.

Max Levine, 60, owner of the Silver Star Hardware Store, 1702 7th st. nw., reported that he was robbed of $25 yesterday by a man who held an object resembling a gun wrapped in a handkerchief.

He described the holdup man as a light complexioned Negro, about 30, 5 feet 7 nches tall, 160 pounds, and wearing a light gray porkpie hat.

10% Increase In Taxes Voted In Alexandria

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

A 10 per cent increase in taxes on real and personal property was enacted by the Alexandria (Va.) City Council last night, just five hours before the deadline set for passage of the 1948 tax ordinance.

The annual budget was adopted December 30, but inadequate public advertising voided passage of the taxation measure at that time. The city has been operating with borrowed funds since then under an interim ordinance which expired at midnight.

Under the adopted ordinance act, taxes on personal property were increased from $2.80 to $3 for each $100 of assesed valuation. Real estate taxes rose from $2.50 to $2.75 for each $100 of assessed valuation.

A business and professional tax levy based upon gross receipts now takes the place of a number of flat license fees.

Congratulate Mayor on Birthday

During the meeting in City Hall, the council took time out to congratulate Mayor William T. Wilkins on his 70th birthday and present him with a bouquet of flowers. The occasion also marked the mayor's retirement from the Washington division of the Southern Railway after 52 years' service.

The gross receipts tax on businesses provides that, except for regulatory licenses, businesses will be taxed on gross receipts during the year rather than a uat rate or graduated rate. It calls for a minimum tax of $10 on all such businesses.

Rates set for the coming year are $1.03 for professional occupations and businesses, whether they have offices in the city or merely do business there.

For personal services, business services, repair services, and retail trade, a rate of $0.29 per $100 gross reecipts was set. Wholesale merchants, manufacturers, mills and processors will pay $0.21 on each $100 of receipts, and contractors will pay $0.39.

59-Cent Theater Tax

For amusements and entertainments the charge will be $0.59. The fee for soliciting agents was set at $1.03, the same as for professional occupations and businesses. Radio broadcasting stations will pay $0.39 on receipts from Alexandria merchants and slaughter houses will pay $0.21. The rate set for restaurants, eating places and night clubs was $0.29.

In spite of the new rate schedule, the city income will fall about $116,000 short of expected expenditures, city officals estimated. To meet its needs for the year, the city expects to borrow money from a fund or about $284,000, which had been set aside for capital improvements.

The revenue act calls for quarterly reports from persons whose taxes are based upon gross receipts as a means of forecasting the municipal budget in the following year.

The council agreed that the gross receipts tax on sellers of alcoholic beverages would be in addition to the required regulatory license fee.

Baltimore Girl Dies as Car Overturns at Muirkirk, Md.

The Washington Post

END OF THE SLEIGH RIDE—Police Pvt. Kyle McGhee of Sixth Precinct, examines splintered sled of 12-year-old William R. Beck, who was injured when he sledded under a moving auto

A 25-year-old Baltimore woman was killed yesterday when an automobile caromed off a parked truck, plunged down an embankment and overturned at Muirkirk, Md.

In District traffic mishaps, police extricated a 12-year-old boy who sledded under a moving automobile and was painfully pinned between the car's chassis and his sled.

Victim of the Maryland tragedy was Miss Virginia Sigman, who police said, was among a group accompanying a Washington man home after a late party in Baltimore. Removed from the wreckage by the Branchville Rescue Squad, she was pronounced dead on arrival at 8 a. m. at Leland Memorial Hospital, Riverdale, Md.

Maryland State police charged the driver of the car, Ardell R. Nicholson, 26, of 1925 Eye st. nw., with manslaughter and reckless driving. He was treated for head cuts, and later released under $1100 bond for police court hearing February 19 in Hyattsville.

Also hurt in the accident were Miss Chloe Ledford, 28, who was riding with Nicholson and Miss Sigman in the front seat, and Leonard Carr, 25, owner of the automobile, both of Baltimore. Carr, who police said was sleeping in the back seat, was treated for head cuts and a bruised shoulder. Miss Ledford suffered face and hand cuts and shock.

Police said the Baltimore car struck a truck and trailer parked 3 feet off the roadway, swerved across Baltimore blvd. and down an embankment to the railroad tracks, overturned and came to a stop before reaching the railroad right of way.

Nicholson, police said, was driving home from the party in Carr's automobile after his car developed motor trouble in Baltimore.

In the District, William Russell, Beck, 12, son of Mrs. Gladys Beck, of 4615 5th st. nw., was admitted to Children's Hospital following the sledding mishap, with multiple body abrasions and a cut ear. Police said he sledded into the path of an automobile operated by Preston S. Parker, 31, of 4832 N. Fairfax dr., Arlington, Va., at 4th and Farragut sts nw., at noon. Police, aided by bystanders, quickly worked him free from beneath the car.

Area News in Brief

Job Absences Caused by Colds Down From 5-10% to 2.4%

Colds are causing only a 2.4 per cent job absence rate here, Health Department "sample" surveys of business, industry and Federal agencies revealed yesterday.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, said it was "an excellent record" for this time of year, when absences usually run as high as 5 to 10 per cent.

But he warned citizens to continue these precautions: Dress warmly, keep feet dry, avoid crowds and overheated places, cover nose and mouth when coughing or sneezing, avoid unnecessary handshakes and wash hands before eating.

D. C. to Sell 30 Cars

Thirty condemned District autos—1937 to 1942 model Fords, Chevrolets and Plymouths—will be sold to bidders Friday, Paul Chalupsky, District property survey officer, announced yesterday.

Sealed bids should be submitted at Room 509, District Building, before 2 p. m. Friday, when bids will be opened, he said. Autos may be inspected at Central Garage, 210 John Marshall pl. nw., from 8:15 a. m. to 4:45 p. m., beginning tomorrow.

Fire Truck Breaks Down

Pvt. George McNeal of the District's 27 Engine Co., was heading for his firehouse in a converted tank truck yesterday when the machine let out a bang and a piece of the transmission dropped.

The truck, a former fire engine, is used to distribute about 300 gallons of gasoline to various firefighting equipment in the District. The breakdown, however, halted it for several hours until a tow truck arrived to haul it away from Florida ave. and Eckington pl. ne.

Oil Theft Hearing Set

Three Silver Spring, Md., veterans charged with the theft of a 55-gallon drum of fuel oil from a construction project, will appear before the Silver Spring Police Court Tuesday at 10 a. m.

Police said traces of blood were seen in the snow at the job and investigation disclosed that one of the three men was treated for a hand cut.

The men were identified as Robert Kuyendall, 26, and Edward F. Dayude, 21, both of 9760 Omaho Beach dr. and Duard L. Sentelle, 25, of 10017 Greenwick rd.

Food Condemned

Cornmeal topped the list of 1015 pounds of foodstuffs condemned and ordered destroyed here last week by Health Department inspectors. A total of 1378 establishments were inspected and one offender fined $50 in Municipal Court, Dr. R. R. Ashworth, director of the Bureau of Food Inspection, reported.

Housing Group Chartered

The Veterans Mutual Housing Association of Arlington yesterday was granted a charter by the Virginia State Corporation Commission.

Lloyd H. Brittain, 1009 South Rolfe st., Arlington, president, said the association plans to acquire the George Washington Carver and Paul Lawrence Dunbar housing projects for operation as low-cost non-profit veterans' housing. The two projects, consisting of 130 units, are now Federally owned.

ICC Rule Violated

Three men were found guilty yesterday on charges that they violated Interstate Commerce Commission regulations by attempting to solicit passengers at Union Station for rides to Pittsburgh and other points.

The men were Fred G. Abraham of 4502 Livingston st. se., Henry D. Vincent, 1905 M st. ne., and Arthur Atamian, 1516 Oates st. ne. Bond was set at $300 by Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott and sentencing for Thursday.

Matter of 'Orders'

The ideas of Sergt. Herold Wildfire, 26, of the Army War College, as to the wording of "general orders" led to his being fined 25 yesterday on a simple assault charge by Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson.

Corpl. Hubert Hardy of 931 Virginia ave. sw., who came to court with two black eyes and bruises on his face, told the judge that everything was going fine Thursday night when Wildfire was visiting the Hardy apartment until an argument arose about the orders. "Then he slugged me to the floor with both fists," Hardy said, "kicked me in the face, and started after my wife, Myrtle, with my guitar."

Hospital Raises $5000

Ten per cent of the $50,000 annual campaign goal set by Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, has been raised, Mrs. Morrison M. Clark, campaign director, reported yesterday.

A new feature of the campaign this year, she said, will be booths in banks in Kensington, Silver Spring and Rockville, where workers will accept contributions and memberships.

Tag Applications Due

Application blanks for 1948-49 District automobile tags will be mailed to car owners this week at the rate of about 10,000 daily. Tags will be issued only after applications are returned to the Department of Vehicles and Traffic. New tags may be placed on cars after March 1, and must be displayed after March 31.

Tobacco Bill Offered

By The Associated Press

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) has introduced a bill that would give growers of fire-cured Type 21 tobacco the same acreage allotment as last year. The bill was introduced at the request of growers who have protested a 28 per cent cut, contending that Type 21, produced only in Virginia, is yielding no surplus.

3-Way Census Held Probable In Arlington

A three-point census of Arlington County's population appeared probable yesterday after the County Board gave its approval to the move.

The survey, first since the 1940 census, would be conducted by the Arlington School Board, using school funds. School Board Chairman Barnard Joy, appearing before the five-member county legislative body, estimated the cost would be $15,100.

Approval of the county board is required before any local census may be undertaken.

Survey to Cover County

The survey, Joy said, will cover total county population, child population, and the number of Arlington dwelling units.

He said it was necessary to coordinate new school construction with population shifts and the growth of new suburbs, and added that such a census would provide the county with up-to-date population figures for computing State fund contributions.

Board Member Alfred Frisbie, in moving approval of the census, also asked that it get the official approval of the Census Bureau. Joy said this would be requested.

In other actions, Bankhead Davies, secretary of the Arlington Electoral Board, was authorized by the board to spend an estimated $10,776 to set up a file of registered voters in Arlington.

Would Purge Voter List

The list of registered voters, now containing 32,002 names, would be purged of deceased voters and of persons who have moved from the county, Davies said.

The board approved transfer of $6000 now allocated for Arlington's alcoholic clinic to cover a proposed county mental hygiene clinic at the Health Department, 1800 North Edison st. Virginia would allocate $12,000 for the project, County Manager A. T. Lundberg pointed out.

The board also:

1. Took under advisement an Arlington Bar Association resolution to raise the salary of Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy from $8100 to $10,000 annually.

2. Approved in principle the recently completed job classification and pay scale survey of all county jobs and agreed to meet Friday to complete action. About $60,000 of unbudgeted surplus was allocated to cover the increased pay scale until July 1.

Suit Threatens Bequests to Two Churches

Basing their contest on an obscure District law, cousins of the late Mrs. Lillian L. Nutting have filed petitions in probate court asking that large bequests to two churches here be ruled invalid.

Mrs. Nutting, who lived at 1351 Newton st. nw., died last July, leaving an estate of $116,000.

The petitions are based on a provision of the District Code making invalid a bequest to a church unless the will was made more than a month before the testatrix's death.

Mrs. Nutting's will was dated July 14, 1947, only 12 days before her death.

Mrs. Nutting was survived by 26 cousins here and abroad, 13 of whom claim to be first cousins.

The will provided six small bequests, ranging from $500 to $2500, to friends and cousins, and directed that the residue be shared by four local institutions.

The institutions and their shares are the Masonic and Eastern Star Home, one third; the Washington Cathedral, one third; the Church of the Nativity, Episcopal, one sixth, and the Home for Incurables, one sixth.

The petitions ask the court to declare the gifts to the Washington Cathedral and the Church of Nativity invalid.

It is also requested that the one half of the residue represented in these two bequests be distributed among Mrs. Nutting's first cousins.

Mrs. Nutting was the widow of Dr. Joseph Nutting, a well-known Washington physician. Her estate includes real estate valued at $11,732.

School Merger Urged at Hearing

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.)—Consolidation of Fredericksburg and Stafford County high schools in a single building here was advocated by Supt. T. Benton Gayle of Stafford at a public hearing last night as a means of saving money for the county and "getting a better school."

About 175 county residents attended the hearing at Falmouth High School and heard similar opinions expressed by Richard C. Haydon, assistant State superintendent of public instruction, and Dr. Fred Alexander, director of the State division of secondary education.

Haydon quoted figures of a State education department survey that indicated Stafford could save approximately $112,000 by combining its high schools with Fredericksburg in a single $900,000 project.

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—Wider participation by 4-H Clubs and Negroes in conservation activities is planned as part of the program this year in Virginia's 22 soil conservation districts.

Edward W. Mundie, conservationist for the Agricultural Extension Service and administrative tion Committee, disclosed in a officer for the State Soil Conservareport on projected 1948 activities that plans under way for a contest to encourage better conservation practices by Negro farmers.

He said Negro participation in district programs so far has been limited, adding that through last year conservation plans had been developed on less than 600 of the State's 23,109 negro-owned and operated farms.

Bar to Seek Help In Abolishing Md. Orphans Courts

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP). — The Maryland State Bar Association voted today to enlist the aid of the Governor, Attorney General and the Legislative Council in abolishing the State's Orphans Court system by constitutional amendment.

A report of the system adopted unanimously by the bar association dubbed the courts "quaint political survivals."

The amendment, which would dissolve orphans courts and place its duties in the hands of equity courts, was brought before the last legislature and was defeated.

The report, compiled by a committee headed by Clarence W. Miles of Baltimore, said its defeat was due to "pressure applied by politicians who desire to retain the Orphans Courts as sources of political patronage."

Drive Started On Obscene Music Records

Lieut. William T. Murphy, head of the police juvenile squad, announced yesterday a drive on allegedly obscene records following the arrest of a music shop operator and his clerk.

Max Silverman, 37, of 1371 Downing st. ne., operator of the Quality Music Shop at 1932 7th st. nw., and a clerk, William B. Scott, of 1167 Sumner rd. se., were arrested by Murphy and Pvt. William C. Rasmusen following an anonymous telephone call that obscene phonograph records were getting into the hands of children.

Silverman and Scott were charged with possession and sale of obscene articles and released on their own recognizance for appearance in the United States Attorney's office at 3 p. m. Tuesday.

Murphy said the city has been flooded with records the past 10 days that "leave nothing to the imagination and have a punch line at the end."

"We are not going to wink at these records. Anyone caught possessing them is liable to a $500 fine and/or a year in jail," under the law forbidding the sale of obscene articles.

Murphy said police "had a line on the distributor of the records, but not the name or address of the manufacturer."

Va. Girl Injured By BB Pellet Is Improving

Sally Estes, 14, of 25 Edgewood Terrace, Belle Haven, Fairfax, was said to be "much improved" yesterday after being struck in the right eye by a BB-gun pellet last week.

Her mother, Mrs. Alyce Estes, said the girl, a student at St. Mary's Academy in Alexandria, had been ordered to remain in her bed at home for "several more weeks." She said it was not yet known whether there would be permanent injury to the eye.

The shooting, which occurred last Sunday, was "not accidental," Mrs. Estes said, and blamed a 12-year-old Belle Haven youth. He will appear before Fairfax Juvenile Judge Harry L. Carrico in the next two weeks, court officials said.

Tuck Won't Enter Vepco-Union Case

Richmond, Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—Governor Tuck today declined to intervene in contract negotiations between the Virginia Electric & Power Co. and a union representing its foremen.

The Governor's statement followed receipt of a letter from the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL) which pointed out that notice of a "second conference" between local 1522 and Vepco had been given. But this conference was held with no representative of the Governor's office in attendance.

Under the State utility law, a period of arbitration can be called by the Governor following an unsuccessful second conference. If arbitration is refused a five weeks span is then necessary before any strike could become a reality.

The Governor contended that the controversy involves supervisory personnel and not employes.

63 Are Given Degrees At William and Mary

Williamsburg, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.). A defense of the "content, aims and purposes" of a liberal education was made today by Prof. Harold L. Fowler in a talk prepared for mid-year graduation exercises at William and Mary College.

Dr. Fowler, history professor at the college, said that recent criticism of a liberal education has had a "healthy effect" on the liberal arts curriculum, and that today "some of its strongest supporters" are to be found among "men of science."

In summarizing traits developed by a liberal education, Dr. Fowler singled out the "abilities to think effectively, to communicate thoughts, to make relevant thought, and to discriminate among values."

The graduating class includes 52 candidates for bachelor of arts degrees, 9 for bachelor of science degrees, and 2 for bachelor of civil law diplomas.

Lacy Gives Tips on Md. Income Tax

(This is the last of three articles dealing with the Maryland income tax.)

By John Trimmer

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 31 (AP).—Comptroller James J. Lacy has a tax collector's longing for better payments and has succeeded in awakening some Marylanders to the fact there is a State income tax law.

If you have been paying your taxes regularly as due, April 15 will be the same old story. That's the date the money goes on the line for the income tax. If you prefer the installment plan, you can pay one-fourth down and a similar amount each quarter.

The tax is 2 per cent on earned income and 5 per cent on unearned or investment income. Earned income is what you get for working. Investment income is what you get from dividends, rents, annuities and the like. It is the money you make on money.

State Offers Help

The State offers you help in filling out returns in two ways:

The first is from circuit-riding experts. They show up at announced dates at courthouses or postoffices in the smaller cities of the State.

The second way is from income tax division workers at permanent location. These spots include the division offices at Annapolis, in the Pythian Building in Baltimore and at Shipping Place at Dundalk.

In addition, you can always write for a form from the income tax division at Annapolis.

What kind of form do you need?

If your income was not over 5000 last year for work you did and you received no more than $100 from investments, you will probably want to use the short form—No. 503.

If you made over $5000 and had over $100 from investments, or were in business, you must use form 502—the so-called long form.

If you are a farmer, you probably will want Form 510 in addition to the long form. Form 510 provides a convenient way of showing profit or loss on your farm operations.

Forms For Nonresidents

Nonresidents who earn their wages in Maryland or do business here with over $5000 in sales or gross receipts also must file income tax returns. There are special forms for such pesons.

For Marylanders, there are certain advantages in using each form. The short form is simple, but if you have suffered any great business lossees during the 1947 year, you will find the long form saves money.

If you use the short form, you will receive a 10 per cent deduction for contributions to charity and the like. On the long form, contributions must be "explained."

Comptroller Lacy offers these suggestions to taxpayers.

Be sure to include payments with forms. Pay by check or money order—never in cash.

Be sure your check or money order is made out to the comptroller of the treasury. Every year thousands of Marylanders make them payable to the Collector of Internal Revenue.

Quarterly Payment Dates

Quarterly payments are due April 15, July 15, September 15 and December 15. There are penalties for failing to meet the installment dates.

If you fail to file a return, you will have to pay a penalty up to 10 per cent of the amount due plus interest.

If you make out your return falsely, you could be convicted of perjury.

Comptroller Lacy, under the law, will grant a reasonable extension of time for filing returns if "in his judgment good cause exists." But such extensions aren't encouraged.

Woman Is Found Dead in House Choked by Litter

Parkersburg, W. Va., Jan. 31 (AP). Sitting in front of a small gas fire, the wizened body of an aged woman was found here yesterday in a litter-choked house.

Police said her story paralleled that of the eccentric Collyer brothers in New York last year.

Coroner Richard W. Corbitt said sheriff's deputies, stumbling through piles of trash, found the body of Mrs. Mary A. Westfall, between 70 and 80 years old. She had been dead about 24 hours, Corbitt said, after freezing to death in the house where she lived with her daughter, Gertha, about 35.

Corbitt said the deputies broke in when Gertha refused to admit them as they went to serve a warrant. Gertha was taken into custody on a warrant charging insanity, sworn out by neighbors who had seen her picking over their garbage pails.

Services will be held at 2:30 p. m. at First Baptist Church here with the Rev. Charles Lyon Seasholes in charge. Burial will be in Woodland Cemetery.

Mr. Wright became unconscious early last night and died at 10:40 p. m.

Mr. Wright, who, with his brother, Wilbur, flew the first heavier-than-air craft at Kitty Hawk, N. C., on December 17, 1905, collapsed in his laboratory office here Tuesday afternoon.

Messages of condolence poured into the Wright home from all parts of the country.

President Truman wired:

"Please accept the deepest sympathy of Mrs. Truman and myself in your great bereavement. Few men have so profoundly affected the course of history as did Orville and Wilbur Wright.

"Few men have opened up to mankind such great possibilities for an increasing better world. They will be remembered always by their fellow countrymen with admiration and gratitude."

Wright's colleagues and all the people of the Nation share a "deep sense of loss" at the death, the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, top Federal scientific body of aviation, said.

"Orville Wright and his brother, Wilbur Wright, risked their lives that man mght fly," its message said. "In progress of civilization they little realized the profound effect aviation would have in altering the course of the history and the destinies of nations."

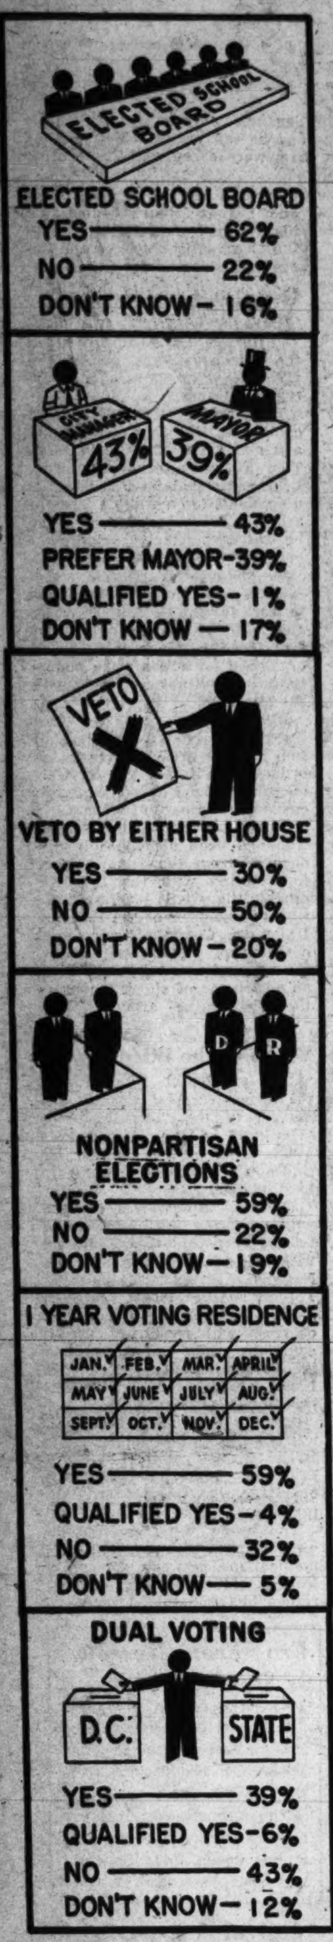
WASHINGTON: SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1948

7 in 10 Here Want District Home Rule



By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter
In collaboration with Jane A. Shepherd, director of The Washington Post Poll.

SEVEN out of 10 Washingtonians want home rule.

This is shown by new findings of The Washington Post Poll that 70 per cent of Washington residents favor home rule, 23 per cent oppose it and 7 per cent are undecided.

Congressional hearings on a home rule plan for Washington will begin at 10 a. m. tomorrow in the Caucus Room of the Old House Office Building. The plan calls for an elected city council and appointed manager to run the District, subject to veto by either House of Congress and the President on major local legislation.

The new poll results show the same percentage of District citizens favoring home rule as was disclosed by the 1946 plebiscite. The big development since 1946 is that District leaders at the Capitol have taken over leadership in the drive for home rule.

Natives Are Enthusiasts

WASHINGTON'S general sentiments on home rule showed up in answers to two poll questions.

The first question was:

"As you know, people who live in the District do not have the right to vote for city officials. How do you feel about this situation?"

The percentage results:

	Total	White	Negro
For home rule......	70	65	83
Against home rule...	23	30	4
Undecided	7	5	13

There is little difference between home owners and renters in attitudes toward home rule. Sixty-seven per cent of home owners favor it, as compared with 72 per cent of renters.

Native Washingtonians are as enthusiastic as those who have moved here from other States. Seventy-two per cent of native Washingtonians favor home rule.

Strongest opposition comes from those who are not natives but have lived in the District more than 10 years. Of this group, 28 per cent is opposed to home rule.

The second question:

"If the District had home rule, do you think the city would be better run, or worse run? In what ways?"

	Length of Residence
	All Groups	Under 5 years	5-9.9 years	10 yrs. & over	Native
Would be run better	54%	65%	53%	48%	60%
Would be run worse	14	7	16	18	15
Depends on type of govt., elected officials, etc.	7	8	6	8	3
Would be the same	3	2	5	2	2
Undecided ...	22	18	20	26	20

People who have moved into Washington since the beginning of World War II are most convinced the city government would be improved by home rule. Native Washingtonians are also somewhat more convinced of this. Most skeptical are those who are not natives but have lived here many years.

Democracy and Taxation

THE poll went into the specific reasons why citizens like and do not like home rule.

The poll showed 46 per cent of all residents believed home rule would be more democratic. Individuals in this group said things like, "Every citizen should have the right to vote; people in other places have the right to vote and it should be the same here; it's undemocratic now."

Others said they want home rule because they pay taxes but receive none of the benefits of democratic representation in their own city government. This group represented 10 per cent of the total.

Another 9 per cent felt that home rule would promote citizen interest in civic affairs and make officials more responsive to public opinion.

In the lineup against home rule, 13 per cent of all those questioned and 19 per cent of the white persons questioned said they were fearful of Negro domination under a home rule system. (Latest estimates show about 30 per cent of Washington residents are Negroes.) Two per cent opposed home rule because they felt there were too many transients, too many outsiders, too many Government employes or too many undesirables here.

Five per cent oppose home rule because they prefer the present District government. They said things like: "The city has been doing all right. I'm satisfied with the way it's running now. Washington has the finest form of municipal government in the United States. We have fine public service, the lowest per capita cost and no undue scandal. We're better off because most cities are corruptly run in the United States."

Administrative Effects

SOME who are opposed to home rule think the city would be better run if it had the vote, while others of this group are uncertain. Of those opposed:

8% think the city would be better run.
54% think it would be worse run.
10% say it would depend on the form of government, or on the elected officials.
7% say it would be the same as now.
21% are undecided.

Home owners do not differ significantly from renters on this question. Fifty-three per cent of owners say the District would be run better under home rule, as compared with 55 per cent of renters.

Of those who feel the District would be run better under home rule:

24% express a faith in the effectiveness of democratic process.
21% say elected officials would be more responsive to the needs and desires of the people they represent.
20% believe that city services and administration would be improved.
18% say District residents would take more interest in and responsibility for their city government.
2% say any change would be for the better—things are so bad now.
12% mention other ways in which District government would be improved.
12% give no way in which it would be improved.

(Adds to more than 100 per cent because more than one answer was possible.)

Of those who feel the District would be run worse under home rule:

44% say it would give Negroes too much voice in District government.
18% say politics would enter in if the District had the vote.
18% say they like it the way it is now, and feel the present form of government is satisfactory.
14% mention other reasons.
9% give no reason.

Only Third Can Vote

BESIDES gauging the overall sentiment on home rule, the poll checked into the home rule views of local citizens who have had the experience of voting elsewhere. The poll found that 60 per cent of Washington residents have never voted —22 per cent because they were native Washingtonians—and 40 per cent have voted at least once in their lives. The poll also showed that only 34 per cent of District residents have a legal right to vote elsewhere—hitting hard at the theory that Washingtonians do not need a vote because they vote elsewhere.

Then this question was asked:

"On the whole, would you favor or oppose home rule for the District?"

Here are the percentage results:

	Have voted b'fore	Have never voted b'fore	Native Wash'n
For home rule	64	73	72
Against home rule	29	15	21
Qualified opinion	1	1	—
Don't know	6	11	7

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.), first sponsor of the home rule bill, was told about the poll results. He declared the showing of 70 per cent of Washington residents in favor of home rule "is most encouraging to us."

"I'd like to say," he added, "that The Washington Post has done an extraordinarily helpful thing in conducting this poll and preparing the detailed information obtained. It clearly shows that the people who live in the District approve the efforts made by those of us who have studied the organization of the District government and have drafted the home rule bill.

"We recognize the bill isn't perfect. Our minds are open to constructive criticism and amendments. We feel that once the home rule plan is in operation, constructive changes can be made."

'Displaced' Will Object

AS the poll makes clear, the hearings can be expected to produce sharp conflicts on the merits of the bill.

Strongest opposition is slated to come from District and Federal agency officials whose operations would be widely affected by the bill. For example, the District Commissioners will probably indorse some of the reorganization features in the bill while questioning the home rule feature. Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, wants the District run by an appointed governor, with power to veto acts of the city council. Powers of his agency to buy public lands in the District would be shifted to the city government.

Washington's appointed, unpaid school board opposes the idea of having an elected board of education, whose members would be paid, which would take over control of public libraries. Washington's library and recreation boards are expected to oppose the provisions of home rule that would put them out of business.

Strongest pressure for the bill will result from the allied interests of Washington groups which want home rule and congressional groups which want to get out of the business of handling the District's petty legislative chores.

Wilbur S. Finch, head of the Central Suffrage Conference and chairman of the suffrage committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, has called on all supporters of home rule to turn out for the hearings.

The hearings will be held by a joint committee headed by Auchincloss and Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.). They are chairmen of the House and Senate subcommittees on District reorganization and home rule.

Veto Is Necessary

ON one point the residents of Washington show a desire for more self determination than the Auchincloss-Ball bill can constitutionally express. The bill gives each house of Congress and the President veto power over legislation proposed by the City Council. The reason for this requirement goes back to the Constitution, which gives Congress exclusive legislative jurisdiction over the District. Framers of the home rule bill wanted to give District residents the initiative in writing the laws under which they live, but the Constitution keeps Congress from

Insurance 'Boss' Recalls Roosevelt As Businessman and Rehabilitator

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

BALTIMORE, Jan. 30.—An old friend, in a reminiscent mood, told the story today of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Businessman.

It deals with what is, perhaps, the least-known phase of F. D. R.'s career, the time when he was a $25,000-a-year vice president of the Fidelity & Deposit Co. of Maryland, in charge of the New York office.

Former Senator George L. Radcliffe, who back in the 1920s was Fidelity's senior vice president and therefore Roosevelt's "boss," told the story on the occasion of the big fellow's sixty-sixth birthday anniversary.

Some of the things he said about Roosevelt as a businessman might cause surprise. About the last thing critics of the living Roosevelt would ever have believed was that he had any business sense whatever. They had in mind the fact that, as a candidate in 1932, he promised to cut Government expenses by one fourth, and then went on to become the Nation's most spectacular spender.

Radcliffe, asked about F. D. R.'s days with the Fidelity & Deposit Co., said:

"I believe that, with a certain amount of direction, he could have been an exceedingly valuable man in our business."

A Multitude of Contacts

ROOSEVELT'S assets, according to Radcliffe, were imagination, a fresh viewpoint, resourcefulness, and an extraordinary number of "contacts" all over the United States. Fidelity, the biggest outfit of its kind in the surety field, had need of such assets. But, as Radcliffe said, some "direction" was needed, and in the case of a man like Roosevelt it was also important to have a balance wheel and a treasury watchdog around.

Once Fidelity, with another surety company, bonded a big fisheries company for one million dollars. The company, which had a fleet of fishing boats operating off Newfoundland and its own processing plants, got into difficulties and failed. Fidelity and the other company took it over and ran it for several years—unsuccessfully. Among those on the new board of directors were Radcliffe and Roosevelt.

Years later, when F. D. R. was President and Radcliffe was a United States Senator from Maryland, they would talk about it.

"George," the President would say, "remember when you and I were in the fish business? Well, I'll tell you what we did wrong."

Then, Radcliffe recalls, Roosevelt would list the mistakes that had been made, and outline in one-two-three fashion all the things that might have been done to put the fisheries company on its financial feet. He had figured it all out, perhaps many times, and seemed delighted with his hindsight solution.

"Yes," Radcliffe would say, "but we still would have lost money."

Roosevelt would laugh, and accuse Radcliffe of being an incurable pessimist.

A Yen for Improvement

THIS story about the fisheries company—which incidentally, was liquidated—throws light on one of Roosevelt's outstanding characteristics: his passion for rehabilitating anything that was sick. Radcliffe saw this developing in the man while he was making the greatest fight of his life against infantile paralysis.

Roosevelt joined the Fidelity & Deposit Co. before this, just after making his unsuccessful race for Vice President in 1920 on a Democratic ticket headed by James M. Cox.

Van Lear Black, chairman of the board of Fidelity and also chairman of the board of The Baltimore Sun, had met Roosevelt when he was a dashing young Assistant Secretary of the Navy. He (and also Radcliffe) got to know him better during a Liberty Loan drive in Baltimore in 1918, when Roosevelt came over to give help.

Later, after the 1920 political campaign, Black thought that Roosevelt would be a good man to help Fidelity in its Nation-wide business. F. D. R. accepted the $25,000-a-year offer, bought some stock so that he could become a director as well as vice president, and started out on his new job along about December 1, 1920.

To celebrate the event, Black gave a dinner in Roosevelt's honor at Delmonico's. The guests were nearly all New Yorkers, but the food was sent up from Maryland—oysters, terrapin, and, as Radcliffe remembers, canvasback duck.

Roosevelt had not long had his feet under the desk of his new office in the Equitable Building when tragedy struck. In the summer of 1921 he boarded Black's yacht and cruised up to Roosevelt summer place at Campobello. He had complained of feeling logy and tired, and he took a plunge in Lake Glen Severn. Afterwards he suffered a chill and went to bed. He had infantile paralysis.

Eager to Talk Shop

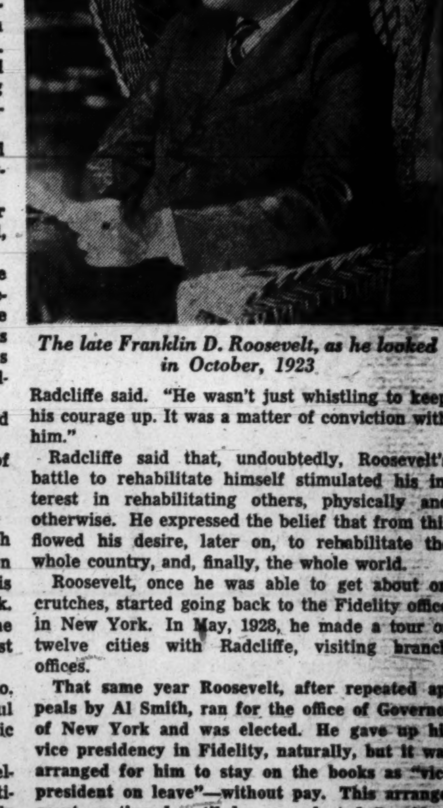
BLACK and Radcliffe later saw Roosevelt in New York, where he lay for a long time in bed in his mother's town house. The stricken man wanted to resign his vice presidency in Fidelity, but Black refused to let him quit. The thing to do, Black said, was to regain his strength. Anyway, Black insisted, he could continue to serve in an advisory capacity even as a convalescent.

Radcliffe, whose job as senior vice president took him around the country, called on Roosevelt from time to time. He found him, despite the seemingly hapless nature of his case, eager to talk shop and exploding with suggestions.

"Sometimes," Radcliffe said, "they were good suggestions. He had, as I have said, an amazing acquaintanceship. If he didn't know a particular person, he at least knew somebody who did know that person. Once he made a very big deal that could never have been made without him."

Radcliffe said that he never once heard Roosevelt complain while he was going through what his wife called his "trial of fire."

"He was completely confident that he would get well and be a vigorous and active man again,"



The late Franklin D. Roosevelt, as he looked in October, 1923.

Radcliffe said. "He wasn't just whistling to keep his courage up. It was a matter of conviction with him."

Radcliffe said that, undoubtedly, Roosevelt's battle to rehabilitate himself stimulated his interest in rehabilitating others, physically and otherwise. He expressed the belief that from this flowed his desire, later on, to rehabilitate the whole country, and, finally, the whole world.

Roosevelt, once he was able to get about on crutches, started going back to the Fidelity office in New York. In May, 1928, he made a tour of twelve cities with Radcliffe, visiting branch offices.

That same year Roosevelt, after repeated appeals by Al Smith, ran for the office of Governor of New York and was elected. He gave up his vice presidency in Fidelity, naturally, but it was arranged for him to stay on the books as "vice president on leave"—without pay. This arrangement continued until he was elected President in 1932.

In later years, Radcliffe was always amazed to find that Roosevelt could remember the names of virtually all the people who worked in Fidelity's New York office.

Radcliffe, as a Senator, had two major collisions with Roosevelt—first, when he voted against his so-called court-packing plan, and later when he defied FDR's "purge campaign" and helped reelect Senator Millard Tydings in Maryland.

The Roosevelt he talked about today, however, was the gallant cripple of the 1920s.

"Both of his legs were useless," Radcliffe said. "I don't know how he ever made it on these crutches. His face would be white . . . drawn . . . smiling."

More Wards, and Fewer Homes

27 Children, and No Welcome Mat

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

SEVEN women sat down at a conference table one day last week and tried to find some place for 27 children to live and be happy and grow up into useful citizens.

Every week they have a similar conference, except that each time there are more children to place and fewer places to put them.

Last week the children who needed homes were of all ages—from 1 to 13. They were Negro and white, Catholic and Protestant. The thing they shared in common was a condition of being a ward of the Board of Public Welfare.

They arrive at that condition in a number of ways. One girl was orphaned when her entire family was wiped out in a freak accident last year. A young boy has a mother who is slowly dying of cancer. His father has "disappeared." There are no other relatives.

These are the saddest cases. There are also children with perplexing behavior problems; children with parents who can't control them; children whose parents must give them up because the housing shortage has beat them.

Alarming Statistics

THE PROBLEM of the Foster Care Section of Public Welfare's Child Welfare Division is to place these children so that their lives won't be further dislocated by the experience of "foster" care; so that this same care will be a remedy.

This is a touchy situation even without complications—and there is an increasing number of complications. One is the squeeze play of unemployment and inflation: Since October there has been a steady increase in the number of children becoming wards of the board, and a decrease in the number of children taken off the board's hands.

Another complication is the capacity of the Children's Receiving Home. The Foster Care Section uses the home as a shelter for children until it finds a place for them to stay. But the police also use the receiving home for delinquent children awaiting court action. The home can accommodate 100.

When that figure is reached, the Foster Care Section has to find other quarters for some of its wards. Says Miss Helaine Todd, senior supervisor of the Foster Care Section: "The people think we can store children in warehouses like flour."

Girls Are Preferred

THERE IS still more to the picture. Not many persons seem to be interested in being foster parents these days. And the ones who are interested seem to want girls far more than boys. Many specify exact ages of children they will accept, and many specify religious affiliation.

The Foster Care people feel that religious harmony is a good, even essential, part of a child's home life, and never argue that point. But, when they are hard pressed, they do sometimes try to convince foster parents that instead of insisting on a 2-year-old they might, just once, try a child over 6 who needs a home just as badly.

In one recent month there were 81 inquiries to the Welfare Department about taking children; out of that number the Foster Home Section placed children in only six new homes. And some existing foster homes are being closed because the foster parents are leaving the city.

There is also the eternal problem of the board which the Welfare Department can pay—a rate which congressional red pencils keep at $45 a month per child.

That sums up the situation which the Foster Care conference faces each week.

Only for Truants

BUT WHILE the conference tries its utmost to place many of its wards in foster homes, there are some children, with close family ties and memories, who can thrive on institutional life.

The district, however, doesn't have any institution just for children who are dependent on the public weal. They have to go to one of the institutions designed primarily for juvenile delinquents; there are few vacancies in private institutions here.

The Gallup Poll

'Ike' Helped Dewey And MacArthur Most

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

WHAT Republicans gain most, in the race for the GOP nomination, by General Eisenhower's bowing out?

An analysis of the second choices of Republican voters who wanted to see Eisenhower run indicates that Governor Dewey, General MacArthur and Harold E. Stassen receive the largest number of Eisenhower second choice votes.

However, the three men do not make impressive gains by the General's bowing out because Eisenhower's strength was never as extensive among regular party members as it was among independents and wavering Democrats.

Regular Republican voters never showed much enthusiasm for the General. Out of party loyalty they were ready to support him against Truman, if the race narrowed down to those two. But only about one-fifth of the regular GOP voters favored the General's nomination in preference to other party leaders.

A popularity poll on the nominations was completed just before the General took his name out of the race. A list of eight Republicans who have been talked about most frequently as possible nominees was handed to voters, and they were asked to indicate their first and second choice.

Eisenhower had 19 per cent first choices among Republican voters. For second choice these 19 per cent divided: 5 per cent for Dewey, 4 per cent for MacArthur, 3 per cent for Stassen, 2 per cent for Taft, 1 per cent for Vandenberg.

Two per cent expressed a preference for a Democrat as second choice, chiefly President Truman and Secretary of State Marshall, and 2 per cent said they were undecided about their second choice.

The following table gives the poll results with Eisenhower included, and with his name excluded and his second choices distributed:

	Including Eisenhower	Excluding Eisenhower
Dewey	33%	38%
Eisenhower	19	—
Taft	13	15
Stassen	12	15
MacArthur	10	14
Vandenberg	5	6
Warren	5	5

The Red Tape Murder of a DP's Soul

By Fred Hechinger

PLAINVIEW, Tex., Jan. 31.—This is a report of one single European tragedy, but the reader may multiply it many thousand times.

What makes this case so poignant and close to the home of American consciences is that it happened way out here, in Texas—and in Munich, Germany. It involves the murder of a hopeful boy, and the killer is red tape.

It is a particularly horrid murder because the victim is still alive and may remain alive for a long time (or perhaps just a few days), but his soul and his hope are dead.

Here are the records of the case.

The first witness is William Marshall, president of Wayland College at Plainview. Last year he authorized the selection of a talented displaced person of college age to be brought to Wayland for free education at the Baptist school.

The second witness reported a few weeks ago. He is Capt. Jack Moses, Baptist chaplain of the American air base at Munich. He picked young Visvaldis Paukulis, parentless and displaced native of Latvia, for the scholarship. The consulate promised to proceed without delay.

Visvaldis went to the Munich immigration center, stayed for several weeks, completed his processing for travel. The American boys at the air base responded with typical generosity, collected the money for his passage. Everything was set.

Vanished Homeland

THEN young Visvaldis was called to the United States Consulate. He was informed that he would not be able to go, "because all who went to the States as students must have a country to return to." This boy has lost his country. It is now part of Russia. One of the witnesses asked whether Visvaldis' (and all the others') passport some 30 years from now would list "displaced" as his nationality.

The Air Force boys "appealed." They took the case to the Military Government, but received the same answer. The best they could get was a promise that the case would be reopened in six months. It was hoped that the policy regarding DPs might have changed by that time. "Policy" is a cruel word.

This correspondent regrets to add to the testimony that the same office which first assured Visvaldis that he could go to the United States finally turned down his application There is no malice in this report, for it is obvious that a kind and reasonable official heart has reluctantly been conquered by the rule-book.

A Rare Obituary

THIS case is peculiar in that the victim issued a statement after his soul was killed. It is in a letter of December 3, 1947, from Paukulis in Munich to President Marshall. It is a rare document and should be read into the Congressional Record.

". . . My joy and happiness was undiscribable," the boy wrote. "The letters were to open the door to my future. Satisfy my longings for knowledge and education. Bring me out of this war-torn Europe, where famine, disease and death have made themselves the rulers. Give me home and chance to live.

"But look what happened! Very seldom was I so near the fulfilment of my dreams. I didn't know and couldn't even imagine that someone is already waiting there to say just a plain NO.

"At the first moment I didn't believe my own ears, but when the explanation followed I felt like a man being pushed down from the cliff into the sea. 15 minutes later I was in the street again, disappointed, confused and hardly able to stop the tears into my eyes. . . . Why? Just because there was a law. A law just as cold as it could be killing . . . Because I happened to be a Displaced Person without a home or place to live. Because I am unfortunately a Latvian nationality. . . . This law doesn't know grace. It ties the hands of those people who would sincerely like to help me. It doesn't feel.

Comforting Barricade

"MAN made this law with purpose to feel comfortable and undisturbed behind its walls and I feel sorry for myself that it took me such a long time to realize the existence and thickness of these unbreakable strongholds . . .

"There would be a reason and a goal. Now I am sitting alone at the seashore giving the last farewells to those who were luckier than I. Two years I waited. Two of my best years for education have gone into salvage. Time which will never return . . .

"My heart has to be brought into the country of freedom and liberty. As long as I physically shall exist, the fight will never cease, for I know the sun is there! It may take me years and years to break the clouds . . .

"I owe you much gratitude for your kind letter and interest you showed in my case. I am very thankful, too, to our chaplain, Jack Moses, who is doing his best to help me to get to the States and preparing me for the studies in your college. Let us hope that Congress will improve the immigration law in this session and fulfil the dreams of many young ambitious men, who'd like to become valuable citizens of the United States of America."

80,000 Signatures

THE letter is signed "V. Paukulis"; but there are some 80,000 invisible signatures below. They belong to "unaccompanied, displaced children." They implore; they hope; they wait; and they die—spiritually and morally. In time many will really be dead.

The case of Paukulis vs. The Rule is neither new nor unique. But it shows one single victim, and the specific instance has more meaning than the plight of anonymous masses.

Visvaldis Paukulis is a distinct person, although "displaced" and of no country. He is not a statistic. Perhaps I know him. He may be one of thousands whom I recently visited in their hopeless asylums in Germany. He may be one of those who have been haunting me.

I release his letter, his case, his file, his legal murder—to haunt Congress.

Dutch Relinquishing the Indies

'Spice Isles' Becoming New United States

By Relman Morin

A NEW nation, built on the American plan, is about to be created from "the emerald belt that girds the Equator"

It will be composed of 10 Indonesian states, an island empire that stretches more than 3000 miles from the western tip of Sumatra to New Guinea.

These were the fabulous spice isles that Columbus was seeking when he found America. For more than 300 years they have been known as the Dutch East Indies.

The rule of the Dutch, in the complete sense, is coming to an end now. By the terms of an agreement recently signed, Dutch sovereignty is to be replaced by "the United States of Indonesia."

The 10 sections of the long archipelago will be represented in a federal government. Each will retain a high degree of self-government. Each will send representatives to the central government, on the basis of population for one "house" and on the basis of equal representation in what will correspond to our Senate.

Until a constitution is written, the territory will be administered by an interim regime in which the Indonesians and the Dutch are both represented. January 1, 1949, is the target date for setting up the real government.

It will represent some 70 million people, the bulk of whom live on Java and Sumatra, the Celebes and Halmahera.

16th Century Secret

THE signing of the agreement brought an end to one of the most romantic stories in the history of colonization anywhere. It began late in the sixteenth century.

At that time, only one country, Portugal, knew the route from Europe to the "Indies." It was a carefully guarded secret because of the enormous wealth, in spices, precious metals and jewels, which was known to exist in the archipelago.

(In later years the Indies became an even greater treasure trove when oil and rubber came to be necessities of modern life.)

Dutch mariners, braving the terrors of the imaginary "sea of monsters" and slipping past the savage Portuguese cruisers that patrolled the seas, eventually found the route to Java.

They were closely followed by the British. Traders in both countries organized an "East India Company." The Spaniards established themselves in the Philippines with Manila as their capital.

Embroiled World

THEN began a bloody struggle between the four European countries for that rich prize—monopoly of trade with the rulers of the islands. It lasted for a century.

It embroiled China, Japan and the kings of Ceylon and Burma. It touched off a revolt against the Chinese royal house. It was the direct cause for the closing of Japan to all foreigners, creating the most complete isolation the world has ever seen.

Whole settlements were wiped out in the "Amboyna Massacre," and the destruction of the Portuguese fort at Malacca. A Japanese emperor slaughtered more than 50,000 Japanese at Shimabara—because they had been converted to Catholicism, a foreign faith.

In the end, the hard-bitten Dutch sailors won.

Portugal was stripped of her possessions and virtually expelled from the Orient. The Spanish hung on at Manila, but they failed to control the seas and never were able to extend their power. The British retired to India and concentrated their efforts there.

Fabulous Returns

BY THE end of the seventeenth century, the South China Sea was, in fact, a Dutch lake.

From that time until 1941, the Dutch were never successfully challenged. They administered an archipelago that stretches across an area slightly longer than the distance from Seattle to Miami.

It yielded untold millions in oil, rice, rubber, copra, spices and metals. Before a synthetic compound was found, it produced practically all the quinine in the world. Without restricting agreements, it could have supplied, single-handed, practically all the sugar and pepper the world consumes.

Then came Pearl Harbor, followed almost immediately by Japan's swift assault on the Indies. It rolled right over the archipelago.

And now the new era in the life of "the emerald belt" is about to open. It probably would have opened anyway. Long before the war the Indonesians were beginning to ask for self-government.

They were supported, in many instances, by far-sighted Hollanders. Something similar to dominion status for Indonesia, within the framework of the Dutch empire, was under consideration.

Leases Honored

THE expulsion of the Dutch during the war, plus Japanese armament left after V-J day, gave the Indonesians the opportunity to try, by force, for independence.

A state of civil war has existed on Java for 30 months. The other Indonesian states—as differentiated from the "Republic of Indonesia," a regime in central Java—long ago announced their intention to cooperate with the Netherlands government in organizing the new nation.

Plebiscites will determine if some areas are to be independent states or part of the Indonesian Republic.

Dutch advisors will remain even after the United States of Indonesia begins to function. By means of the truce, property leases held by foreign firms, and all the economic agreements written before the war, will be honored.

But the colonial status of the Indies has ended. A new nation is in the making.

Hainan Pays Taxes by Day And by Night

By Harold K. Milks

HOIHOW, Hainan Island (AP).—Unhappy farmers of this tropical island pay taxes to the Chinese government by day and to the Chinese Communists by night.

During the war, however, they sometimes were forced to pay three sets of taxes. Here is how it worked, says a former planter who tired of serving two demanding masters and moved to Hoikow:

"The Japanese ruled Hainan, formally, during the war, and they collected taxes.

"But at nightfall, Chinese guerillas who fled into the mountains when the Japanese landed came out of hiding and as representatives of the central Chinese government, they too levied taxes—a cow, or goat from one farm and grain or rice from another.

"Once they were gone, a third 'tax collector' would appear, representing the bandit gangs now called Communists. He, too, collected under the threat of grave harm to anyone foolish or brave enough to resist."

Refusal meant a burned farmhouse, looting, a beating or a bullet.

Extension of Communist influence, particularly in the interior of Hainan Island, has increased the practice of double taxation.

Not only are the Communists making taxation calls on farms, but in some parts of the island they are establishing local governments complete with tax collectors.

Reports reach Hoihow regularly from the interior telling of the arrival of Chinese speaking a "foreign tongue"—the usual description for mainlanders as contrasted to the natives of Hainan.

Why, say the farmers, raise a crop or a herd if you have it taken away by the night raiders or the government tax collectors?

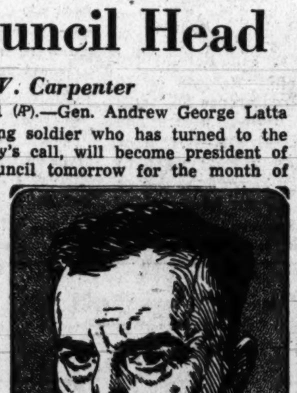
So now Hainan has to have assistance from outside to keep its people alive.

'Very Important Responsibility'

Canada's Top Soldier Is U. N. Council Head

By Francis W. Carpenter

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Jan. 31 (AP).—Gen. Andrew George Latta McNaughton, a straight-talking soldier who has turned to the ways of diplomacy at his country's call, will become president of the United Nations Security Council tomorrow for the month of February.



A sketch of Gen. Andrew G. L. McNaughton by AP Newsfeature Artist H. E. Munhall

General McNaughton sat as a full Council member for the first time on January 15, but he is no stranger to the U. N. Since 1946 he has been Canada's member of the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission.

The Canadian delegate has seen two wars and is intensely concerned with making the U. N. work. He told an interviewer that he felt the position of president is a "very important responsibility."

McNaughton paid tribute to his predecessor in the president's chair, Ambassador Fernand van Langenhove of Belgium. The Canadian said Van Langenhove set an example "that can be followed with great advantage."

Health Gave Out

FOR the greater part of his 60 years, McNaughton has been a student and an active participant in military affairs. His career was capped by his choice to command, as lieutenant general, the First Canadian Army overseas. Bad health forced his return to Canada in 1944 on extended leave. He retired in September, 1944, with the rank of full general in recognition of his services to Canada.

In November, 1944, he was named Minister of National Defense, which post he held until August 1945. A month later he was named chairman of the Canadian-American Joint Defense Board and the following April he was appointed Canada's delegate to the U. N. Atomic Commission.

McNaughton saw service in World War I, going overseas with a Canadian artillery regiment in September, 1914. He was wounded twice, mentioned in dispatches three times, and in 1917 was awarded the Distinguished Service Order. At the armistice he was a brigadier general commanding the Canadian Corps heavy artillery.

He has been honored by his country for his service. In 1919 he was made a Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. In 1935 he was made Commander of the Bath and in 1946 he was made Companion of Honor and Grand Officer of the Order of Leopold.

McNaughton carries himself as if he still wore his uniform, striding along swiftly and erectly. He keeps his grey-black hair cut short and trims his little gray mustache close.

He is about six feet tall and has brown eyes which grow serious and thoughtful as he speaks of the immense tasks facing the United Nations.

Like every other U. N. delegate when he first arrives, McNaughton is looking for a place to live. He took up residence in a midtown hotel while Mrs. McNaughton and members of his staff look for a home. He expects to be here at least two years while Canada is on the Security Council.

General McNaughton was born at Moosomin, Saskatchewan. He was graduated from McGill University in 1910 as Bachelor of Science and again from McGill in 1912 as Master of Science.

As president of the National Research Council from 1935 to 1939, he contributed to Canada's scientific progress. He was joint inventor of the cathode ray direction finder in 1926.

In 1914 he was married to Mabel C. S. Weir. They have two son and two daughters living. A third son, Squadron Leader Ian McNaughton, Royal Canadian Air Force, was killed in action in June, 1942.

Secret Trial Dooms 2 Spanish Reds for Organizing an 'Army'

By Alburn West

MADRID, Jan. 31 (AP).—A story of Communist organization and activities in Spain, never before told officially, was disclosed in a recent court-martial of 23 men and women accused of military rebellion.

Two of the men, Agustin Zoroa Sanchez, who came to Spain from Argentina in 1944 and was regarded as the party's chieftain, and Lucas Nuno Bao, his right-hand man, were executed. Three other men sentenced to death received commutations to 30 years. The others, including seven women, were sentenced to from four to 30 years.

Testimony, and the government's charges, put together a picture of Communist organization for propaganda, a clandestine army, radio communication and close links between party organizations in Spain and France. Nothing concerning the trial appeared in Spanish newspapers.

Some of the defendants were believed to have been arrested last April in a week-long round-up. At the time a reliable source said police seized two Communist printing plants and several thousand copies of Mundo Obrero, a Communist paper distributed monthly.

In a previous sweep in November, 1946, when Zoroa was taken, police seized two shortwave transmitters in suburban homes.

Admitted Connections

ZOROA admitted he was a member of the Central Communist Committee of France and secretary-general of the Madrid area, but denied he was the head of the Spanish party.

He also admitted that he had received various deliveries of 60,000 pesetas (about $6000) each from France. The money, he said, was used for his own and party expenses.

The prosecutor charged that Zoroa directed acts of terrorism, bombing of food stores, derailing of trains and a reign of terror in the mountains designed to discourage the people from taking their produce to markets.

Zoroa conceded that certain leaflets distributed by guerillas had come from his office.

Five defendants admitted entering Spain from France. They were Eladio Amador Garcia and Manuel Hernandez Leal, who received death sentences later commuted to 30 years; Caimiro Gomez Miguel and Teodoro Carriscal Anaga, given 30-year terms, and Eduardo Huerta Bravo, sentenced to four to 12 years. Only one, Gomez Miguel, denied that his return was connected with the Communist Party or the Republican government in exile.

Defense Asks Mercy

THE day-long trial was highlighted by clashes between the court and Zoroa. Late in the proceedings Zoroa was sent from the courtroom.

Repeatedly, the defendants challenged the right of the court and claimed trial by civil court. The defense attorney, an army lieutenant, said he believed the defendants to be guilty of certain acts against the state, but that he was asking leniency for them because they came from low-class, uneducated families.

Zoroa said he came to Spain to work for the Communist cause and later became head of what he called the "Communist army," organized for action at an opportune time but not connected with the guerillas.

Nuno Bao, executed with Zoroa, said he was secretary of the Madrid area and took his orders from Zoroa. Amador Garcia admitted he kept the party's codes and important papers.

Jose Luis Fernandez Albert, who had been dishonorably discharged from the Spanish navy for fighting with the Loyalists during the Civil War, said he was an organizer of the National Union, a Communist-sponsored coalition of clandestine parties. He also admitted he had been an instructor of shock troops of the clandestine army of the Madrid area.

Bomb Cache Cited

THE prosecutor charged that Hernandez Leal was the organizer of the "Cazadores" or "Hunters" of the Madrid area and a chief of the bandits. He said small bombs were found in Leal's home.

Carriscal Anaga was charged with operating the party's radio transmitters, and Gomez Miguel with being liaison man with the National Alliance of Democratic Forces, another leftist coalition. Juan Jose Bermes Crespo was charged with receiving propaganda by radio and supervising its distribution. Jose Menendez Lopez was accused of distributing Mundo Obrero.

Antonio Menendez Menendez was charged with being secretary general for propaganda and Francisco Huercano Ortiz with operating the party's printing press.

The seven women sentenced were charged with carrying communications between the party leaders, hiding radios and giving refuge to Communist leaders.

U. S. Isn't Buying Chicle

'Chewing Gum Boom' Ends for Mexicans

By Ruth Mulvey

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 31.—Travelers coming north from the jungles of Quintana Roo and Campeche bring with them alarming stories of depression and even starvation among the natives of those states.

Another bubble has burst. The war-inflated chicle industry has been abandoned by foreign commercial interests. This year's government subsidies undoubtedly will be the last, and 30,000 people in the chicle industry face deprivation.

After years of wartime prosperity in the industry, United States buyers cut off their purchases of Mexican chicle last June 30 because of its prohibitive price: 450 pesos for 100 pounds against 388 pesos for Guatemalan chicle.

The principal buyers had been the Mexican Exploitation Co. and Wrigley's, which bought a total of almost 10 million tons a year at a cost of 40 to 50 million pesos.

Bank Was Leery

AFTER the boycott, the Mexican government underwrote the current crop of 1,600,000 kilos through the reportedly reluctant Banco de Commercio Exterior. Now, according to Archeologist Carlos H. Frey, a six-year resident of the area, the product is piling up in rotting heaps.

"No one believes the boom is over, he said.

With war restrictions lifted, United States gum companies have reverted to the use of synthetics. One of the best-selling brands uses only 5 per cent chicle. Experts consider that there is enough Mexican chicle in warehouses north of the border to last United States gum manufacturers five years.

The only possibility of absorption, it is held, is through small gum manufacturers in the United States. However, since their "aggregate maximum capacity" is only 350,000 kilos yearly, it would take three years just to consume this year's crop.

Chief sufferers in the situation are the 30,000 chicleros in the states of Campeche and Quintana Roo. The utter poverty they had always known blossomed into prosperity during the war. One man, working a chicle patch with his 14-year-old nephew, earned 10,000 pesos in a season. This is a country where good pay for a school teacher is 180 pesos a month.

Spurn Farm Wage

THE PEOPLE cannot bring themselves to believe that the good times are gone, and they continue to harvest the chicle. Agricultural wages of 3 pesos a day are unacceptable. They would rather starve, they say. And it seems that they will.

Many people in the chicle region have never seen milk. Salt is a luxury. They live almost exclusively on "pozol" (a meal made from corn) and on the meat of hogs, chickens and animals they catch in the mountains.

Poverty is greater than in almost any other part of Mexico.

Because there was no oil for lamps, the night classes planned as part of the national campaign against illiteracy could not be held there. Medical facilities are almost nonexistent.

Yet the chicle country is rich in deposits of salt, gypsum and China clay. There are vast stretches of well-watered pasture land, and whole forests of mahogany, ebony and cedar that could survive 100 years of cutting.

Honestly, It Can't Be Trisected

Here's the Angle, Folks: Desist!

From "The Trisection Problem," by Robert C. Yates.

Tons and tons of newsprint have been given over to people who "at last had trisected the angle." The refutations usually kept the printers just as busy next day

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

DEAR good people of Washington:

Will you, for pity sake, lay off?

We mean, will you lay off trying to prove to us that you can trisect the angle by Euclidean methods. We can't take it any longer. We can't get near our mail boxes any more. The postman is complaining. It's been sheer hell around here.

Granted, it was our fault for starting it. It began—the latest siege, that is—on January 5, when we printed an Associated Press dispatch from Chicago telling of a mechanical engineer who showed how he trisected an angle by a method which took only a minute or so.

After that, the deluge.

All of Washington, it seems, took up ruler and compass, drew diagrams and mailed them to The Washington Post. Most of the communications were "proofs" that the angle can be trisected in accordance with Euclid's rules.

We should have known better at the outset. It always happens this way. Whenever the problem is mentioned, there is an outburst by the "solvers." As if a starter's gun had been fired, they hasten to prove to the layman, through the newspapers, what they have not been able to prove to the mathematician.

One Against World

MOST of the solvers are convinced that they, after 2000 years, have been the first to turn the trick. Many are sure that there is a conspiracy to deny them the credit. Usually no amount of explanation can convince the solver of his error.

The above is the opinion of experts, to be found in more or less those words in every mathematics book that touches on the subject. The Washington Post is in a position to attest to the truth of those observations. We've been down that road in the last three weeks.

What follows, then, is set down without any real hope of convincing the unconvinceable. It's just to explain why we will, from this moment on, refer to the wastebasket, unread, any and all future communications that purport to prove that the problem can be done.

We have good precedent for this arbitrary attitude. As Krasner and Newman recall in their superb book, "Mathematics and the Imagination," as long ago as 1775 the French Academy was so overwhelmed with pretended solutions of this and the two other classical problems of antiquity, that they adopted a resolution to accept no more—apparently on grounds of self-preservation.

That Playful Plato

TO START at the beginning: First, the problem stems from the days of the Greek mathematicians. Along with it were the problems of squaring the circle and duplicating the cube.

Second, it was and is a sort of a game, to which arbitrary (at least they sound arbitrary to us) rules were applied. They were said to have been set by Plato. They permit the use of only two tools, a compass and a straightedge, used for drawing a line (but not marked for measuring off segments) and theoretically having only one side—a linear dimension only.

It was as if the problem were given to hold oneself off the ground, using only bootstraps and belt but outlawing rope, ladder or outside point of attachment.

One may ask why such rules were prescribed, and the answer is to be found deep in the roots of Platonic or even Pythagorean philosophy. The unmarked rule and compass were conceived of as "pure" or "absolute" instruments—the tools of the gods, simple or refined to the point of sublimity. (The mechanical devices of Archimedes were frowned upon in those days as being debased, or departures from what were almost religious forms).

Third, the problem can be solved in scores of ways—but with other tools. Most of the methods are centuries old and they are no better or worse now when they turn up in letters to The Washington Post than they were when first discovered.

Names Are Original

A GENERAL angle can be trisected by a marked, or graduated, ruler; by any number of curves or conic sections (Hippias in the fifth century B. C., Nicomedus in about 200 B. C., Pappus about 300 A. D. are a few of many who used these methods); by pantographs, mechanical linkage devices, a three-footed compass; T-square and carpenter's square; a thing that looks like a tomahawk; a cone; many methods of approximation and an endless stream of mechanical gadgets with weird names.

(For example, the linkage device which Alton P. Hall of 2200 U pl. se., made out of venetian blinds—The Washington Post wrote about it and him on January 6—is practically identical with the compass of the French mathematician, C. A. Laisant, developed in 1875.)

Fourth, some specific angles—angles of certain degrees—can be trisected with only the Euclidean instruments.

Fifth, and finally, it is not always possible to trisect a "general" angle—any angle constructed at random—under the rules of the game; that is, with Euclid's tools.

This is stated with finality, and we propose to entertain no further argument about it. There is good reason for this dogmatism. It is, in a mathematical sense, impossible.

It Can't Be Done

IT IS meaningless to say that digging a tunnel through the center of the earth is "impossible." Somebody may do it. But it is a far different thing to state dogmatically that something is "mathematically impossible."

No one in his right mind would deny that it is impossible to multiply 5 by 5 and get 26. Similarly, it is mathematically impossible to find or build a square on the hypotenuse which does not equal the sum of the squares on the other two sides (we're talking about Euclidean geometry of plane surfaces). No sane person would dispute the proposition, for it has been proved conclusively, finally, forever and beyond any logical possibility of disproof.

There are just as final, logical, conclusive and irrefutable mathematical proofs that the instruments of Euclid, the compass and unmarked straight-edge, are inherently incapable of trisecting the angle.

We do not here propose to state these proofs, for they are long-winded affairs. The Library of Congress can dig several of them up for you, if you're interested. In general, however, they boil down to these facts:

All simple geometry problems, as Descartes pointed out, can also be done by algebraic means. The "pictures" of geometry also can be represented by algebraic expressions.

A problem such as bisecting an angle involves a quadratic equation in algebra; a problem of trisecting an angle means a solution of a cubic equation—the extraction of a cube root.

But no equation involving a power higher than 2, when pictured in a geometric representation, can be drawn or constructed by a rulle and compass. "The straight-edge and compass together are capable of making only those geometrical constructions which are algebraically equivalent to a finite number of the operations of addition, subtraction, multiplication, division and the extraction of real square roots." (Robert C. Yates, "The Trisection Problem").

Not, be it noted, the extraction of cube roots. And there's the nub.

Gauss Let It Ride

AT THE AGE of 19, the great mathematician and physicist, Karl Friedrich Gauss (Disquisitiones Arithmeticae, 1801) stated the impossibility of trisecting the angle but did not supply the proof. P. L. Wantzel, in 1837, was able to give a rigorous demonstration, using discoveries in algebraic analysis and number theory.

What has come to be considered the classic demonstration was made by the German mathematician, Felix Klein, in 1895. There have been several others of different kinds since.

Now for a quick look at a few of our local "solvers":

A.J.M. of the U. S. Naval Station, P.H.K. of Bethesda, B.L.P. of Bethesda and W.C.P. of St. Elizabeth's, all submit a method which was almost certainly known to both Plato and Aristotle, but rejected by them as violating the rules.

In one way or another—some crassly, some subtly—they have in effect put two marks on the straight-edge, making it a marked ruler and a very different thing, with different algebraic and geometric properties than Euclid's instrument for drawing a line of indefinite length.

The same was done by a student at St. Albans School, but he knows—thanks to an able instructor—that the method, though handy, is not Euclidean. So also does Joseph Jiri Kral, 77, Bohemian-born, erstwhile grand old man of international statistics of the Commerce Department. Kral says this method was first offered by the Dutch mathematician, Willebrord Snell, in the seventeenth century.

Theories Assumed

H. F., M. A. B. and G. H. D., using very similar approaches, one to another, come up with a second "solution." The last two neglected to give their proof, but we think we know what they mean. They each produce three fine isosceles triangles, but the vertex angles subtend arcs of different sizes. If they drew their diagrams with more care, or tried out the system on angles of other sizes, they could see the error by inspection.

Rev. I. E., who sends in a method developed by a carrier for The Washington Post, admits that he has been unable to work out any proof. This is scarcely strange, since the construction failed to trisect the angle. If he tries it out for different size angles, and measures the chords of the resulting arcs, he will see.

We trust this is all perfectly clear. If so, and most particularly, if not, please don't bother to write. We aren't having any more. We feel as did the French Academy of Sciences, which, according to Henri Poincare, apparently refused to look at further solution on these grounds:

"We have considered the probability that an unknown savant should have found out what has been vainly sought for so long, with the probability that there is one nuisance the more on the earth; the second appears the greater."

Only Poincare didn't see any such mild word as nuisance.

Counterfeit Smokes Cheat The Cheater

PARIS (AP).—French cigarette smokers would walk a mile for just one smoke of any American brand, but not one step for a package of the imitations that are flooding this country's under-the-counter trade.

Coming in packages bearing phony United States revenue stamps, photostat statements of manufacture and imitations of American trade marks, these cigarettes taste like a mixture of old rope, sawdust and burning hair.

A 95-franc (85 cents) tax on American or British cigarettes prohibits their legal importation, so smokers turn to the black market where a package may leak in from United States Army stores in Germany. A package costs about 180 francs ($1.50) at current black market prices.

The new phony smokes involve the double crime of blackmarketing on the black market.

Army authorities traced the fabrication of one such forgery to the Russian zone. Soon the idea of faking the better brands of cigarettes spread to Italy, where operators carefully melted off the seals, emptied the precious contents and refilled the packages with weeds of doubtful orgin.

This was good business, but it only doubled the profits, because the important package was gone once it was sold. Now the counterfeiters use machines that make the phony packages, and their appearance in Paris night clubs is increasing alarmingly.

Issue's Too Hot to Hold

Taxpayers Likely To Grab Gold Ring

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

THAT paper tax cut Congress has been shuttling to the White House for a year may clink in your pockets by June. It probably won't be that outsize 6½-billion-dollar tax bill Republicans are about to spin through the House.

But unless all election year signs go agley, it may have the clink of hard money anyway. Which means Joe Taxpayer could feel it and spend it and not just read about the cut he might have gotten if the President had said "Yes" instead of "No."

You can't quite put your finger on it yet—how much it will be, when you will get it or who will make the most noise about giving it to you.

All you can really bank on is that both major parties, in a presidential year, are playing politics with an issue too hot to hold.

Too Many Near-Misses

IN A nutshell, Republicans have been passing too many tax bills that never became law to fool the country once more with a near miss.

Another Knutson bill of the 1947 variety, that passed Congress twice, was just as often vetoed and the veto sustained, could be a political liability to the GOP, not an asset.

That's why Senate Republicans very probably will trim the Knutson bill down to a size they can justify budget-wise—a bill that won't drain all the surplus and slide into that nightmare of all good Republicans—"deficit spending."

If the surgery is successful, enough Democrats will come over to wipe out the thin margins by which the last two vetoes were sustained—if, in fact, the President returns another veto.

If the operation fails, Republicans are not above trying tax reduction twice in the same session. And you can bet any second bill would be massaged down to balanced budget size, with enough Democrats satisfied in advance to insure an overrider.

At least that's what they're saying in the lobbies, where taxpaying time is always time to cut taxes—on paper.

Only this time there's more to it than talk. Many a Republican vote cast for the Knutson bill in the House tomorrow will be a vote in fact for quite another measure—one that has at least a chance of becoming law.

Some, including influential Republican members of Harold Knutson's Ways and Means Committee, wanted to work the bill down to realistic size before the House test. But Knutson had a voting majority.

One for the Voters

THE story can be different in the Senate. The Senate has a way of writing its own tax bills, without a premium on authorship. Senate Republicans want a tax cut they can deliver to the voters, and not just to the press.

The hard-headed House leadership feels much the same way about it, if you can read between the lines of their Knutson bill support.

For example, Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.), said the other day you could count on one thing: "We are going to pass something that will become law."

Martin didn't say it would be the Knutson bill or the Senate bill. He said it would be the "conference bill."

Now the conference bill is something else again. It's the bill the President has to take or leave. It's the bill a small group of House and Senate managers work out by themselves when they compromise the House and Senate versions.

Two Can Play at It

THE GOP has no monopoly in this game of tax cutting in an election year. Two parties can play at it, and do. However it was meant, the tax chapter in the President's State of the Union message was an almost perfect document politically. It had only one flaw—its very cleverness. To House Democrats, who weren't consulted, it sounded too pat.

The President proposed $40 tax cuts for all, chiefly benefiting the lower brackets. Then, sticking by his guns that this is not the time to reduce revenues, he asked a 3.2 billion tax on excess corporate profits to offset the cut.

With no advance notice of what was coming, congressional Democrats split wide open. Most of them were pining for an orthodox tax cut to trump Knutson's ace. They recalled that two years ago the Administration itself took the lead in repealing excess-profits taxation.

Before Democratic leaders could plaster the pieces and more cuts of their own into a motion to recommit the Knutson bill, the damage had been done.

The damage was this: By abandoning his position against any tax adjustment until the country is out of the inflation crisis, the President gave a push to tax reduction sentiment in his own party.

Other Votes to Come

ALL LAST WEEK, House Democratic leaders tried to plug the dike. They may have succeeded in averting a general party bolt to the Knutson bill in tomorrow's House vote.

But there are other votes to come, on quite a different measure. They will come on the face-lifted Senate bill, and again on the conference compromise. If that is vetoed, they will come in both Houses on the overriding motion.

And then the whole process could be repeated again in a second tax reduction round.

The House demonstrated last session it would not sustain a veto of a four-billion-dollar tax cut. The Senate missed overriding by only five votes.

With just the right bill, and strategic wooing of tempted Democrats, the result could be different this time.

Somewhere in the merry-go-round's whirl the taxpayer could grab the gold ring.

Law Irks Women Dockwallopers

SAKATA, Japan (AP).—Japanese amazons have got it in for those legislators who passed that sissy new labor standards law.

The law says women workers can't carry more than 40 kilograms (88 pounds). You ought to see some of these Japanese women on the docks here sling around bales of rice—each of which weighs 132 pounds.

Why, say these women laborers, they can't even lift one bale if the law is strictly enforced, and most of them think nothing of shouldering three bales at a time.

A Truman Souvenir Bites Honest Man

By Tom Twitty

THIS is the story of the absent-minded executive and the New York souvenir finder whom the White House considers the answer to Diogenes' search.

The executive was President Truman and his absent-mindedness at the time this story started last May 19 was due to the desperate illness of his mother, who died several months later.

On May 17, President Truman flew to his mother's side at Grandview, Mo. A "little White House" was established in Kansas City's Muehlebach Hotel.

President Truman arose early May 19 and read in the Kansas City Star that the small town of Worth had been devastated by a tornado, and how the citizens of surrounding towns had banded together to aid the stricken community.

He sat down at the desk in his penthouse suite, pulled out the usual pad of Western Union blanks and dashed off in longhand a telegram to Dr. Uel Lamkin of Marysville, Mo., leader of the Good Samaritan movement:

"Congratuations on what Marysville, Grant City and surrounding towns did for Worth yesterday. That is the sort of good neighbor policy we want all over the world.

"HARRY S. TRUMAN."

Then he wrote a fatherly message to his daughter Margaret, who was in Pittsburgh to open her first tour as a concert singer. The gist of this message was that there was little hope for Margaret's grandmother, but that the decision as to whether she should cancel her tour and come to Missouri was up to her.

He shoved the message blank back in the desk.

The elderly Mrs. Truman made a remarkable comeback, however, permitting the President to return to Washington about a week later. On July 2, the following letter was received by Charles G. Ross, White House press secretary:

"Dear Sir:

"I am inclosing herewith two copies of telegrams which the President apparently sent from Kansas City and which I found in the desk of the suite in the hotel when I had occasion to send a telegram myself.

"I would like to have kept them for souvenirs but the fact is they do not belong to me and very probably should either be in your files or destroyed by you.

"Very truly yours,

"R. L. SAUNDERS."

Saunders is a New York vice president of the Texas Co. and a resident of Richfield Park, N. J.

On July 7, Ross wrote Saunders that "were Diogenes on earth, I would certainly tell him that his search was ended." Inclosed was the copy of the telegram to Doctor Lamkin, sent with the "compliments of the President."

Saunders said last week that he discovered the carbons of President Truman's messages from two weeks to a month after the President left Kansas City.

He laughingly declined to state his political affiliation on the ground of "secrecy of the ballot," but was glad to reveal that the telegram and Ross' letter are framed and hanging in his den.

Out of the Sea as Scrap

Old Battlewagons Feed Furnaces

By Hilliard A. Schendorf

The war record of the battleship New Mexico still ornaments its conning tower, which has been cut off and left in the snow for a burner to reduce it to scrap

NEWARK, Jan. 31 (AP).—Three sister battleships are on their way to Valhalla, and their steel will feed this country's gaunt scrap reserves.

Over-age and obsolete, the New Mexico, Idaho and Wyoming, all 38,000-tonners, are being cut up by the New York salvage firm of Lipsett, Inc.

The New Mexico and Idaho were commissioned in 1918 and 1919, respectively, too late to see action in the First World War. In the last war both played important parts, fighting the Japanese all the way from the Aleutians to Okinawa.

During World War II the Wyoming fired more antiaircraft ammunition than any other United States ship, but not at the enemy. She was a training ship. In the First World War the Wyoming, commissioned in 1912, was attached to the British Grand Fleet and took part in the internment of the German navy at Scapa Flow.

Lipsett estimates the three will yield 66,000 tons of vital steel scrap.

Only a Hulk

ALREADY the superstructure and deck of the New Mexico, which fought the "cold battle" of Newark Bay to reach her last resting place, are cut away.

The city of Newark, opposed to making its port a "boneyard of ships," blocked the channel with two miniscule fireboats to keep out the decommissioned dreadnaught. The blockade was withdrawn only after the Navy promised not to make any additional plans for scrapping at Port Newark.

The deck of the Idaho is disappearing and crews are scrambling over the superstructure of the Wyoming, as all lie close together at a Navy pier leased to Lipsett.

Typically, Lipsett needed five bazookas—great torches which bite through solid steel.

"Will a week do?" asked a salesman. "They're in Pittsburgh."

"Get 'em on a plane tonight," snapped Office Manager Jim Londino.

Don Smith of Bayonne, a burner for Lipsett, was on the Idaho as a shipfitter, second class, during the last war. Is he sorry to be cutting her up?

"No," says Smith—Smitty to the gang. "She's lived her life, and now it's a good thing she can help out the country with the steel that's in her."

A Skittish Vessel

LIPSETT scrapped the former French luxury liner Normandie after it burned at a New York pier. Cutting up the battleships is "apple pie" compared to that job, says Londino.

"The Normandie was 65 feet above water," he explains, "with one deck stacked on the other. These battleships are only 26 feet out of the water, and when you rip the deck off you're down to the hull.

"The Normandie was 1100 feet long, and the battleships are only half that."

In addition, the Normandie had to be checked daily with supersensitive strain gauges to avert the danger that the ship might buckle and sink. The battleships, built to navigate with gaping chunks shot away, can be cut down without such concern.

Like the Normandie, the battleships are being lightened in the bow by weighting the stern. As the bow rises, sections ahead of water-tight bulkheads will be cut off. Finally there will remain only one compartment.

If that still is too heavy for a powerful traveling crane to lift out of the water, Lipsett will use a technique it developed in scrapping the one-time French ship. It will build a new bulkhead across the last compartment, cut off half, then lift out the other piece.

The last section of the Normandie weighed only 60 tons—all in a day's work for the cranes.

Dwindle Rapidly

LONDINO estimates that the New Mexico will yield the greatest amount of scrap steel—25,000 tons. The Idaho has a smaller double hull below the water line, and its guns were removed by the Navy. It should provide 21,000 tons.

The Wyoming was being converted to a cruiser when the Navy decided to sell it for scrap, and the outer hull and guns were already off. It is tagged by Lipsett for 15,000 tons.

The Normandie yielded 43,000 tons of scrap.

The scrapping is going ahead so fast that the ships are carved down to the water line in two months, and at the end of four months they will have disappeared altogether.

The Normandie took eight months to scrap.

In addition to steel, the battleships are yielding boilers, motors and generators. All of the machinery in the Normandie was either fire-damaged or of odd foreign sizes, so it was cut up, too.

Fire Chief Exonerated

The complete exoneration of Fire Chief Clement Murphy on charges of misconduct and demoralization of his department came as no surprise. Most of those who followed the hearing carefully are convinced that no effective case against Mr. Murphy was made. Some of the charges, including the accusation that Chief Murphy was intoxicated at a fire, were not sustained by the evidence taken. We do not think that the special trial board had any reasonable alternative to clearing Mr. Murphy on the basis of the evidence brought out.

Nevertheless, the outcome is scarcely a credit to the District government. Remaining skepticism is reflected by the action of Representative J. Glenn Beall, chairman of the House District Subcommittee before which the original charges against Mr. Murphy were made, in calling for a copy of the trial record and all the affidavits in the case. It will be remembered that the first investigation growing out of Capt. Joseph W. Conroy's charges was made by the corporation counsel's office and that when that office recommended trial board action, the Commissioners suppressed its report and lifted the case out of the hands of the corporation counsel.

Some experts believe that the charges against Mr. Murphy were framed in such a way that a fair hearing was impossible. Many of the incidents of alleged misconduct investigated by the corporation counsel's office were not mentioned at the trial. After the trial got under way 4 of the 13 counts against the fire chief were dismissed. Special Prosecutor Daniel B. Maher undercut the testimony of several prosecution witnesses by announcing his "surprise" over some parts of their testimony. When Mr. Maher cross-examined the fire chief, there was little evidence of prying into the case. It was not until midway in the trial that the Commissioners gave "immunity" to witnesses appearing against Mr. Murphy. One can scarcely avoid the conclusion that, while the board has done its duty on the record before it, the Commissioners succeeded in preventing a complete airing of the charges. The ill effects of such maneuvering may be overcome to some extent if the fire chief follows the recommendations of the board to sit down with his critics in the department and work out a personnel assignment policy that will meet with general approval.

To say the least, the trial of Mr. Murphy has illustrated the serious inadequacy of the District's machinery for handling cases of this sort. If Congress takes up the matter, we hope that it will be with the object of giving the District an efficient investigating unit, perhaps patterned after that of New York. But, of course, the first requirement for success of any investigative system must be a disposition on the part of top officials to permit it to operate in the public interest.

Silence Is Iron

By a decree issued last Tuesday the Kremlin has forbidden any verbal intercourse on any subject between any foreigner and any citizen of the Soviet union who is not an official of the foreign office, or a railroad, telegraph or postal employe, or a hotel worker or a clerk in a state store. Hereafter, then, if any visitor to Russia—say, an American novelist in search of material for a series of syndicated newspaper articles—should greet a native as follows:

"Good morning, little father, don't you consider this weather pleasantly mild for the season in these latitudes?" the Russian will be obliged to reply in something like the following formulary:

> "Gospodin, if you will submit that question in writing to their benevolencies at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, who knows but that they may be pleased to answer you?"

In short, every Russian, not included in the categories already noted, will be enclosed within a special, private personal iron curtain, and will be punishable under criminal law for any leaks or holes that may be detected in it by the M. V. D. Just how this decree will affect the domestic relations of those Americans, Britons and other foreigners in the Soviet Union who are married to Russian wives or husbands, we must leave you to conjecture, but perhaps our Chilean friends, who have interned 25 Russian diplomats as hostages for one Russian-born daughter-in-law of their former Minister to Moscow, may succeed in getting the question clarified. (At any rate it indicates a degree of amicable cooperation between the Chilean government and its representatives abroad that some of our own diplomats may have reason to envy.)

Although this story about the Kremlin's new order for 200 million made-to-measure iron curtains was duly circulated by the Moscow correspondents of the American news services and was published in many American newspapers, you may very easily have missed it. For, to judge by the headlines, most of the copy desks missed it, too. One eminent New York morning newspaper, for example, advertised it to its readers as follows:

RUSSIA TO CHECK ITS AGENCIES IN DEALING ABROAD

Our own headline in The Washington Post, we are happy to say, was slightly more explicit. It said:

MOLOTOV HEADS
WORLD LIAISON FOR RUSSIANS

This made us a little curious to see how the story might have been handled by the New York Daily Worker. But as far as we could observe, the Daily Worker had ignored the story entirely, although on page 11 of the issue of January 29 we observed a strange and possibly significant item about the proper treatment of freshly ironed curtains. It concluded with these words:

> Avoid as much handling as possible while still damp, as these wrinkles are apt to stay in and spoil the appearance of your work.

Turning On The Light

No. III

Congressional inquiries should be dedicated to enlightenment and not to persecution.

Can the courts protect citizens who are called before congressional investigating committees and treated unfairly? Many persons, thinking so, have carried their complaints to the courts. In general, however, the courts have upheld the power of congressional bodies to conduct their own investigations in their own way.

The issue of witnesses' rights against an investigating committee's demands arises, of course, when the witness is cited for contempt. In its early days Congress itself ordered the arrest and confinement of recalcitrant witnesses. Since 1857 such cases have been tried in the courts under an act making it a criminal offense to refuse to testify before a congressional committee. Every witness cited for contempt of Congress is thus assured a judicial hearing, but seldom do they find any relief.

The reason for this is readily apparent. Under the Constitution Congress exercises the legislative function within a tremendously broad scope of granted powers. To perform this function properly it must have the power of inquiry, and the power of inquiry necessarily carries with it the power to compel the giving of testimony.

The classic Supreme Court decision on this point came in Anderson v. Dunn. The argument for denial of the power to punish for contempt, the court said, "leads to the total annihilation of the power of the House of Representatives to guard itself from contempts, and leaves it exposed to every indignity and interruption that rudeness, caprice, or even conspiracy, may meditate against it." The court was following the unassailable logic of a great constitutional authority, Justice Joseph Story, when he asked: "If the legislature possesses a right of choice as to the means, who can limit that choice?"

In a later flagrant case the court did agree that the investigating power of Congress was not unlimited. The House of Representatives ordered an inquiry into the nature and history of a real estate pool. A partner in the firm of Kilbourn & Latta refused to answer certain questions about the private affairs of his business. When his citation for contempt reached the Supreme Court, it decided: "No person can be punished for contumacy as a witness before either House, unless his testimony is required in a matter into which that House has jurisdiction to inquire. . . . Neither of these bodies possesses the general power of making inquiry into the private affairs of the citizen."

Tempting though it is to seize this case as a precedent for judicial restraints upon the contempt power of Congress, we think it is a weak reed on which to lean. Later Supreme Court decisions have made it clear that even where no intention of legislating or of bringing impeachment proceedings is stated in a resolution ordering an investigation, such a purpose on the part of Congress may be presumed. Congress may investigate now with only a vague thought of possible legislation in the future. And "a legislative inquiry may be as broad, as searching, and as exhaustive," the court has said in another case, "as is necessary to make effective the constitutional powers of Congress."

It is possible, of course, that the Supreme Court may again restrain some extreme misuse of the investigative power to pry into personal beliefs and private affairs, as it did in Kilbourn vs. Thompson. But it would be a crime against democracy to impose on Congress any restrictions that would hinder such inquiries as those which exposed the Galphin claim scandal in 1850, the Credit Mobilier scandal of 1872, the Teapot Dome scandal of the 1920's, or the Bennett Meyers scandal of 1947. The investigative power of Congress is the strongest check upon corruption in the executive departments. It is the most effective means of focusing public opinion upon conditions of national concern within our community life. Under our constitutional system it cannot be, and should not be, restrained in any substantial manner by the judiciary. We think the correction of abuses will have to come from within the Congress itself.

Orville Wright

It was by a very curious irony that news of the violent death of Mohandas Gandhi at New Delhi, India, should have divided the first pages of yesterday's newspapers with news of the death of Orville Wright from natural causes at Dayton, Ohio. These two men, so near to being exact contemporaries, represented opposite poles of value.

It is wrong, we believe, to consider the revolution of which Gandhi was the prophet and martyr merely as a manifestation of western nationalism transplanted to India and an ingenious and successful rebellion against British rule. If it had not gone far deeper than that, Gandhi could not have captured the imagination of the world nor have earned in the end the awe and reverence of his own adversaries. Gandhi's mission, as he conceived it, was to reassert the supremacy of the spirit; hence his doctrine of Satyagraha, which means the opposition of spiritual power to material forces. Gandhi's revolution involved a repudiation of almost everything that is meant by modernity, but especially the industrial revolution, with its division of labor and methods of production which he believed to be destructive of all spiritual values. He preached a return to village economies and to household handicrafts.

The Wright brothers belonged to an era and to an environment in which such notions would have been incomprehensible. They were intelligent and practical young men, not interested in metaphysics or even in theoretical science, who had become passionately engrossed in a particular problem of mechanics. It is unlikely that they speculated much about the historical consequences that might follow from the successful solution of their problem; they probably accepted as axiomatic the notion that every important invention must work in the end toward the improvement of human life.

Wilbur Wright died before the airplane had passed the experimental stage and before the unimaginative military hierarchies, here and abroad, could understand its potentialities as an instrument of death. But Orville Wright lived to read of abrupt destruction in Europe of those monuments of civilization erected by the patient labor of centuries and what had happened to Hiroshima and Nagasaki. He lived to read of planes and of missiles that could be flown to their targets over half the earth without pilots. How he might have felt about these matters we cannot, of course, even surmise. Perhaps, like the men who direct such operations, he was blind to everything but their practical and technical aspects; perhaps he wondered if it might not have been better for the world if the momentous experiments at Kitty Hawk had ended in failure. If so he could have consoled himself with the reflection that, with or without the Wright brothers, the coming of the airplane was predestined.

That is to say that many others since Daedalus and Icarus had dreamed the same dream as the Wright brothers; but this dream could never have become a reality without the Zeitgeist which had taken possession of the Western World some centuries before their time. It was Gandhi's dream to supplant this Zeitgeist with another. The sequel to the Indian revolution has shown that he led farther than many of his disciples were willing to follow, but it is not impossible that Gandhi dead will be a more potent apostle than Gandhi living. At any rate, our own generation has been able to observe that where the historical influence of great inventions is immediate, the historical influence of great ideas may be slow. But that is no reason for supposing that it is any less profound.

CAB Salaries

No one seems to want the most important job the Government has to offer in civil aviation. While undoubtedly there are many reasons for the chain of refusals the President has encountered in his quest for a new chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, the overriding consideration seems to be financial. This was demonstrated dramatically again Wednesday when George P. Baker declined the post. Mr. Baker, who served as a member of the Presidential Air Policy Commission and is a professor of transportation at Harvard, had tentatively agreed to take the CAB chairmanship providing he was allowed to retain his teaching connection to supplement his income. That, of course, would have been in conflict with governmental regulations. Hence the interesting anomaly of a teacher turning down a $10,000 Government job because he could not afford to accept it.

The sad fact is that, governmentally speaking, civil aviation is in a bad way. In addition to the chairmanship, there are two other vacancies on the five-man CAB. Theodore P. Wright, the able head of the sister Civil Aeronautics Administration, also has submitted his resignation, as has one of his deputies. It seems logical to conclude that the President will experience the same trouble in filling these posts that he has had with respect to the CAB chairmanship. Aside from the unfortunate effect of leaderless drifting on civil aviation policy, the spectacle of the President being forced to plead for replacements is such as to hold the entire Government service up to ridicule.

Congress could help materially to meet the immediate problem by passing a deficiency appropriation to bring salaries of CAB members up to the $12,000 figure specifically authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Act of 1938. Going beyond this, we think, Congress ought to adopt the recommendation of the President's Air Policy Commission that CAB salaries be set at $15,000 for future years. Significantly, an Administration survey shows that the present $10,000 governmental salary is worth only $4800 in terms of 1939 dollars.

Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

CAB Vacancies

It seems to me that President Truman is not being well advised with respect to filling existing and prospective vacancies on the Civil Aeronautics Board. On the basis of considerable familiarity for a number of years with the board and its work, I venture the suggestion that the President is looking too far afield for new, efficient members of the board.

In the first place, accepting the regrettable report that Commissioner Branch intends to retire, the oldest commissioner in point of service, is Oswald Ryan, an experienced, competent, aggressive and progressive student in the field of transportation and public service industry. If appointed, he would make a very competent and experienced chairman of the board. Ably assisting him, with an experienced point of view, would be Commissioner Lee, so that the existing nucleus of the board would rest upon both ability and experience.

With respect to the three prospective vacancies, I respectfully suggest that they can be best filled from competent and experienced members of the present CAB staff. The board has, over a long period, developed a body of examiners thoroughly familiar with the work of the board, and upon whose careful and experienced efforts much of what the board has already done has depended. True, they do not have wide public prominence, and their appointment would be without larger political significance, but they are amply competent to carry on the work, and would at once bring to the board's problems, infinitely greater technical experience than could come from any outside appointment presently available.

What the board needs for the future is not board members with great public reputations, but, instead, board members who by their present experience in the actual work of the board can fully understand the immense amount of work and detail, which constitutes by far the most valuable and essential part of the duties now facing this important agency.

My respectful suggestion to the President, therefore, is to fill the board vacancies from the present board staff, just as the President presently did in the Post Office Department, and with such widespread public satisfaction. And, by the way, with the retirement of Commissioner Branch, who came to the board from the Postoffice Department, the selection of an experienced postal official as a member of the board might be a very wise and fruitful act.

Aid To Education

John E. Swift, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, in a published statement said, "Probably the most amusing statement in the (Protestant) organization's manifesto is its absurd allegation that the Caholic Church is blocking Federal aid to education."

The hearings upon the bills to grant Federal aid to public schools in the States for more than 20 years, clearly shows that the National Catholic Welfare Conference sent its spokesman to oppose all Federal aid to public education in the State schools supported by the general tax funds. The Catholic leaders took the position that Federal aid would mean ultimately that the Federal Government would control and administer public education in the States contrary to the provisions of our Constitution.

However, the National Catholic Welfare Conference changed its attitude on these educational bills just as soon as the parochial schools were included in the benefits of the Federal appropriation bills, and not until then did it change its attitude. Does the National Catholic Welfare Conference mean to tell us that it no longer fears Federal control of public education just because parochial schools are included in the benefits to be derived from these appropriations?

Dog Pound Authority

Members of the Anti-Vivisection Society of the District of Columbia, of which I am one of the vice presidents, view with misgiving the proposed change in the status of the District Pound, as set forth in a House Resolution now pending before the Auchincloss Committee.

Our opposition to this contemplated change is based on the fact that it would weaken the authority and tie the hands of Poundmaster Marks, who is not only an admirable administrator but a sincere and conscientious protector of animals.

Owners of lost and strayed cats and dogs need to be constantly on the alert lest their once cherished pets fall victims to the insatiable demands of medical laboratories for living creatures on which to experiment. Animals are frequently kidnapped to be sold to vivisectors.

Under the protectorate of Poundmaster Marks the pathetic inmates of our District Pound have their best chance of being either reclaimed by their former owners or of kindly care until they are mercifully put to death.

Hotel Rentals

It appears that some Eightieth Congress chickens are already coming home to roost. I refer to the anguished cries of GOP leaders over Philadelphia hotel plans to boost rates for the convention, and to the Ives-Baldwin proposal to restore controls on residential hotel accommodation at June, 1947, levels.

People who have been pushed out of their apartments by various business interests in certain downtown areas may well ask: Why, specifically, the recontrol and rolling back of residential hotel rentals? Why not subject all landlords who convert apartment dwellings to business offices, rooming houses and "furnished" apartments to the same recontrol?

Since the residential hotel is the sacred preserve of so many Congressmen and Senators, it is not too surprising that the residential hotel operator, who obeyed a quite normal human impulse in taking advantage of the (de) Housing Act of 1947, is to be singled out and his fingers whacked. The Philadelphia hotel operators are meting to GOP leaders in the same measure what the latter meted to the general public in their real estate lobby-dictated housing bill, and it jolly well serves them right. A little object lesson along the same lines to collaborating and listless Democrats would not be amiss.

Saving Fuel

We all appreciate free advice on how to save fuel, but why doesn't the Government practice what it preaches? The other morning I visited the showroom of the WAA and the temperature must have been at least 75 or 80 degrees, and some of the employes were working in their shirtsleeves. The same situation seems to prevail in other Government offices which I or my friends have had the occasion to visit in wintertime.

Rules For Speculators

If we would dispel the clouds of rationalizations, half-truths and self-interest in the present controversy over speculation on the commodity exchanges, the following outstanding facts are plainly visible:

1. Practically all the productive enterprises supplying the needs of our civilization require risk taking or speculation on the part of someone.

2. Speculation can be socially useful, socially harmful, or socially neutral.

3. Commodity speculation on the futures markets takes on the elements of all three of these social effects according to the particular circumstance. It is socially beneficial when used as insurance in hedging operations which enables processors to make long-term commitments for their products. It is socially neutral when only small amounts are committed above and beyond that required for true hedging operations. It is socially harmful when the futures markets attract large amounts of amateur gamblers' money. The inherent rumor-ridden, mob-like psychology of this uninformed fraternity forces prices upward or downward beyond all reason based on economic facts. It also absorbs "risk" money badly needed for productive work in other sectors of our economy.

4. That the present commodity markets are loaded with "get rich quick Wallingfords" is evidenced by the fact that there are at present on the broker's books commitments for several times the annual production of most any given commodity. For that portion above the true hedging operation on the futures market the broker is simply a "stake-holder" or croupier raking in the "house percentage" from the various speculators bidding the market up or down in accordance with the prevailing psychology of the moment. Forced liquidations of the gambling shoestring operator greatly accentuates any downswing. Their pyramiding and plunging in periods of optimism greatly increases any upswing. Such overcompensations are inherently bad in a market dealing in the necessities of our economy.

Taking such factors into consideration, legislation should be initiated somewhat along the following lines.

1. Write rules that will confine all futures trading to the various types of hedging operations used by processors and producers to protect themselves against price variations, thereby making the futures market in effect an insurance organization similar to Lloyd's of London.

2. To minimize the presence of the "nervous money" of the shoestring speculator or the wildly pyramiding gambler, margin requirements should be kept high or the speculator should be required to establish definite financial responsibility for a certain maximum in futures much as the insurance operator on Lloyd's is required to do.

Under such a law, broker's offices would become considerably less palatial and "customer's men" would experience a wave of unemployment. In the long run it would be much better for society as a whole if the amateur speculator were forced to exercise his gambling proclivities on such relatively harmless forms as playing the ponies, poker with his peers, or better still, on such socially beneficial forms as buying the stocks of new speculative productive enterprises or in the building of rental housing where risk money is badly needed in our economy.

Meaning Of Devaluation

By Andre Visson

New Free Franc

THE FIRST—and natural—reaction of the American public to the announcement of the devaluation of the French franc was that it was good news. We are going to pay less for French wines, cognac, perfumes and dresses. And we are going to be able to make a trip to France, where the prices last summer were really prohibitive. Ten dollars for a hotel room was high enough. But $10 for a meal was exorbitant. And how could one pay $80 for a woman's hat, the American version of which—according to the best authorities—could be obtained in New York for $40.

Now when we go again to France we shall expect to spend one third of the money it cost us last summer—provided the French prices have not gone up too much. Both as tourists and as purchasers of French goods, we are certainly going to effect some important savings. But the real importance of the French devaluation to us is not in such immediate savings. It is elsewhere.

The devaluation of the French franc is a precondition to the stabilization of the French currency without which the Marshall Plan cannot have any effective results in France. And the free market for foreign currencies which will be introduced, together with the new official rate for the French franc, is the greatest possible blow which the French middle-of-the-road coalition government could inflict on the guided, semisocialistic economy which the French tried to establish after the liberation. It is the official recognition of the failure of the guided economy.

That is why the French Socialists were reluctant to accept the principle of a free market for foreign currencies. And when they finally did accept it—deciding that they would abstain from voting—they insisted that the French government should give evidence of at least some state control by calling for the exchange of all 5000-franc banknotes ($41 at the old official rate, $23 at the new official rate, and probably about $15 at the rate which is expected to be quoted on the free market).

THE AIM of recalling 5000-franc notes is obvious. It is supposed to give the French treasury an opportunity to identify the owners of the funds which were derived mostly, if not exclusively, from dealings in the black market, who have until now escaped all taxation. The French government, determined to assure the return to a liberal economy, found it possible to give the Socialists this manifestation of state control.

The exchange of 5000-franc notes will not too greatly affect French business circles. Its main victims will be the French peasants who hoarded the money received in payment for food sold on the black market, and the intermediaries who bought the food or dealt in foreign currencies and in gold. Their number may be considerable. But no political party in France, as anxious as it may be to get their votes, can defend them publicly.

The Communists, of course, may be an exception. They are not embarrassed by either moral principles or contradictions in the party line. They applauded the exchange of currency accompanied by a forced loan and even the disguised confiscation of part of the savings in Soviet Russia two months ago. But they criticize as "capitalistic tyranny" and as a capitulation of France to the "American dictate," the French financial reform, which is infinitely milder than that made in Moscow.

Finally, the devaluation of the French franc was indispensable to France's adherence to a western European customs union. France could not enter such a union as long as her currency was quoted at absolutely unrealistic, fictitious rates.

Why then, we may wonder, are the British so disturbed by the French financial reform and why have they been making such desperate last minute efforts to postpone it? It has been generally suggested that the main reason for the British opposition is their fear of French competition with British goods on the international markets. At the new franc rates French goods will indeed be cheaper.

But the British had a much more serious reason for opposing the French financial reform. Living in a much more guided economy than the French, they see great danger in the new French free market for foreign currencies. The quotations on this market will expose the fictitious rate of sterling which the British have until now been able to maintain only because of the efficient functioning of their controls on both prices and wages.

Quotations of British and American currencies on the unofficial Paris market before the devaluation of the franc a substantial depreciation of the pound. The black market buyers were paying 330 francs for the dollar and only 740 francs for the pound, which made it worth on the Paris black market about $2.25 compared with the official rate of $4.03. And this black market which was the "real" market for foreign currencies, will from now on be the free market on which every Frenchman will be able to buy and sell foreign notes.

The British do not have the same need for devaluation of their currency as the French have had for more than a year. The British can now sell abroad at the present rate of their currency all the goods they can produce. But they will probably be unable to join the European customs union unless and until they adjust the official rate of their controlled currency to its real value, as the Italians and the French have done. In other words, they will have to take a step in the direction of greater economic freedom.

Matter of Fact

An Arithmetical Tiff Hurts ERP

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

A TRAGI-COMIC row is in happy progress between the State Department and the Budget Bureau. The bureau, which is one of the most powerful and least publicized agencies of the Federal establishment, is now rather often described as "The Little Kremlin" at the State Department. And this is because the bureau was largely instrumental in inserting into the ERP bill the features which Congress has most disliked.

In brief, the Senators and Congressmen studying the European Recovery Program have found three main defects in the bill. First, they objected to the inclusion of an authorization to spend a global sum of 17 billion dollars over four years. Second, they objected to the proposed system of administration, which would have called in effect for the creation of a new branch of the State Department. And, third, they are now riled by what they regard as the faked computation of the authorization of 6.8 billion dollars for the first 15-month period of ERP. All these objectional features have been and are blamed on the State Department.

Objections one and two have now been removed—the first, by simple excision of the 17 billion total by Senator Vandenberg; and the second, by replacement of the administrative system outlined in the bill by a system designed for Vandenberg by the Brookings Institution.

Lovett Fought 'Guess'

NEVERTHELESS, it is worth noting that the 17 billion total was included in the bill by the Budget Bureau over the protest of Undersecretary of State Robert Lovett and other members of the departmental staff.

The Budget Bureau demanded an over-all total. The department opposed including such a total, on the ground that no accurate estimate of the four-year cost of ERP could possibly be offered. The bureau then took the matter into its own hands, arriving at the 17 billion figure by striking a rough average. And, after this, to the delight of the State Department, Senator Vandenberg in turn took the matter into his hands, and knocked the figure out of the bill.

As for the originally proposed system of administration, that, too, was the Budget Bureau's somewhat extreme interpretation of Secretary of State Marshall's original specifications. What has now emerged from the Brookings Institution is not so very far from what the department wanted in the first instance.

Finally, there is the much misunderstood matter of the amount of appropriation for the first 15-month period of ERP, which has recently been raising such a ruckus. Until just prior to the opening of the congressional session, the State Department and Harriman Committee experts expected that Congress would be asked for 7.4 billions.

This total comprised three sums—first, 600 million dollars to meet obligations already contracted by European governments for imports from this country, prior to initiation of ERP; second, 6 billion to be expended during the first 15 months of ERP, and, third, 800 million dollars of forward contracts, for 1950 delivery, to be made during these first 15 months. The present startlingly different result emerged after Budget Bureau processing.

How to Add Up to 40

FIRST, the bureau knocked out the 600 million for foreign obligations as not allowable (thus insuring that ERP's customers would get off to a bad start). Second, the bureau's experts pointed out that the United States Treasury is distinctly slow pay. Out of every billion dollars worth of goods and services purchased by the Government in the next fiscal year, about 250 millions' worth will not be paid for until three months after the year has ended.

Therefore, they argued, ERP might consume six billions of goods and services in the 15-month period from April 1, 1948, through July 1, 1949. But the Treasury would only have paid for 4.5 billions' worth of these goods and services when the next fiscal year closed. Therefore, only this sum of 4.5 billion was included in the 1948-1949 budget, conveniently bringing the total United States budget under the 40 billions desired by the President.

To be sure, all these facts, including the need for 1.5 billion dollars additional later on to meet slow-paid ERP bills, are all clearly noted in the budget message. Senator H. Styles Bridges must have been a trifle less than frank when he charged fraud against the Administration.

The procedure adopted by the Budget Bureau is the standard procedure of the Government, as also in the case of including the 17 billion global total. And, as chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Bridges should both have noticed the explanation of this curious procedure in the budget message and have known Federal practices well enough to recognize what was standard and familiar.

Nevertheless, the controversies over these trifling points have seriously damaged ERP's chances. Surely this might have been avoided by better coordination. Surely, also, the mere triviality and technicality of these controversies suggest the utter absence of any adequate sense of urgency in the Congress.

Loading Medical Gun

By Alton L. Blakeslee

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (AP).—Human blood is becoming a kind of medical shotgun that promises tremendous advances toward controlling diseases and prolonging life.

The pellets for this "shotgun" are the scores of tiny chemical substances that make up the miracle of blood, each one doing a specific job in the body. Half a dozen of them already have been put to valuable uses.

Others, still hidden, offer chances of striking in new ways at tuberculosis, heart disease, cancer, mumps and allergies. The search for them will be part of the huge new Red Cross blood program, already under way, that calls for nearly 400 city and suburban blood-collecting centers and hundreds of mobile units gathering and supplying blood in rural areas. The goal is at least 3,700,000 pints of blood annually.

Whole blood and dried plasma—the straw-colored liquid part of blood—will be made available free for anyone needing them because of hemorrhage, surgery, childbirth, shock, burns or disasters.

Aid to Surgeons

THE benefits from such a network of blood banks can be enormous, but the exciting potentialities from blood research may bring even greater benefits. The list already is improving.

Plasma, after the red and white cells are separated out, is being used as a substitute for whole blood, and is particularly beneficial in shock.

A protein, serum albumin, from plasma also aids in shock or hemorrhage, and has many uses in surgery and medicine whenever the doctor wants to combat the edema or "dropsy" that may complicate serious illness or operations.

Another tiny protein makes measles a milder disease, often preventing serious complications. It also helps in preventing hepatitis, a liver inflammation.

One fraction contains fibrinogen, the needle-shaped particles that form blood clots, and another substance that further helps speed clotting in hemophiliacs or "bleeders." Fibrinogen also is a natural plastic substance, and is made into fibrin foams or sponges to stop bleeding and into thin transparent plastic films extremely useful in brain or nerve surgery.

Red blood cells, without plasma, are used to treat some cases of anemia, or may be made into a paste or powder to aid the healing of wounds.

War Speeded Work

THESE discoveries, most of them made in wartime when there was enough donated blood to permit such research, "have only scratched the surface of the potentialities," says Dr. Charles A. Janeway, professor of pediatrics at Harvard University and chairman of the committee on blood and blood derivatives, advisory board on health services, of the National Red Cross.

Looking at clots of purified fibrinogen under the electron microscope, scientists are delving into the secrets of the fine structure of blood clots. Albumin is helping show what happens to the kidney in nephrosis.

Other blood substances may supply leads to a better understanding of heart disease, tuberculosis or cancer. From blood may come protective substances against mumps, which can have serious effects on adult men, and against German measles, which can cause deformities in unborn children when it affects pregnant women.

Blood of persons recovering from certain diseases could be stored separately, until there was enough for experiments to find antibodies or substances that might combat the diseases, Dr. Janeway said.

Rh negative blood can be kept ready for transfusions anywhere to babies doomed to trouble or death if their blood is attacked by Rh antibodies. These antibodies may form in the mother's blood if she has Rh negative blood and receives some Rh positive blood either by transfusion or from the unborn child. Rh studies will be furthered by statistics gathered from blood donors.

The mechanism of allergic disease, or what happens in allergies, is being studied now in animals with blood substances from other kinds of animals, and human blood may become important in this field of diseases later on.

Tiny Ore Barge

THE bloodstream is a busy river filled with billions of tiny floating delivery barges that do a host of vital jobs. Some carry enzymes or hormones, dropping them off at the right places and right times. Blood research may bring better understanding or even control over these complicated chemica activities.

One blood protein, only recently found, is a delivery ship that carries iron from its storehouse in the liver to the bone marrow, where the iron is incorporated in the red blood cells manufactured there. No use has yet been found for it in treating any diseases, but this type of discovery is probing deeper into the secrets of blood.

If enough blood is contributed for research, blood may have 50 different uses within a decade, Dr. Janeway said. The knowledge gained may lead to methods for studying other kinds of cells, tissues and organs of the body to learn how they do their work in health, and what happens to them in disease and aging, he added.

DR. W. A. SELLE of the University of Texas Medical School will use radioisotopes from the atomic oven for research in allergy—the kind of reaction that causes hay fever, asthma and other ailments.

With the tagged atoms, he hopes to learn the exact role of histamine in allergy. Histamine is a poisonous substance resulting from injury to cells, and where it goes and what it does may be traced through the isotopes. His work is being financed with a grant from the American Allergy Foundation.

A synthetic compound, histadyl, helps some persons who get bad reactions from taking pencillin, streptomycin or other drugs, Dr. M. H. Mothersill of the medical department, Lilly Research Laboratories, told an American Chemical Society meeting. Sometimes the reactions, such as skin rashes or sickness, force persons to discontinue taking a drug that would help them. In most persons tested, the addition of the new drug got rid of these side effects, he said.

The plastic industry may bring a day when shoes need no longer be shined, when the baby will have a plastic carriage and ready-cut meats will come in transparent plastic packaging, Dr. Robert S. Aries of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn predicts.

The industry is still only in its second phase of growth. And production will double within the next 10 years, he said.

Earl C. McCracken of the Agriculture Department, reports in the journal Science that pure water can be cooled to about 18 degrees below freezing without forming ice. There is a catch. The water must be kept entirely quiet. It will freeze immediately if stirred or otherwise disturbed, or if a tiny ice crystal is dropped into the chilled water.

Nutrition experiments indicating that with a complete diet added protein must be accompanied by some added calcium, are reported in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, a scientific journal. The report concerns rat experiments by Dr. Henry C. Sherman, Constance S. Pearson and M. S. Ragan of the department of chemistry, Columbia University. When calcium was not added to balance the additional protein, some of the rats showed the kind of nervous troubles that come from calcium deficiency.

Whitney Reveals a Short Memory

ONE DAY last month the president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, A. F. Whitney, went to the White House for an engagement with President Truman that had been arranged by an official of the Democratic National Committee. Emerging, he told newsmen, "The President and I had a wonderful chat." And at a news conference held in the headquarters of the Democratic National Committee reporters quoted him as saying that his union would support Mr. Truman for reelection, and that he expects to take a "very active" part in the campaign.

The incident evoked comment which recalled previous acrimony between Mr. Truman and Whitney. But to let it pass as merely a case of politics making strange bedfellows would be to miss a large significance. It is worth while to recall the background.

Twenty months ago, on May 25, 1946, Whitney's union (with another) went on strike. After railroad operations had been paralyzed throughout the country for two days, President Truman went before Congress asking for emergency legislation which, he said, was "necessary for the preservation of our Government."

In support of his request Mr. Truman said: "This particular crisis has been brought about by the obstinate arrogance of two men. They are Mr. Alvanley Johnson . . . and Mr. A. F. Whitney . . . Eighteen other unions . . . are ready to run the railroads . . . What we are dealing with is not labor as a whole. We are dealing with a handful of men who are striking against their Government and against every one of their fellow citizens."

'Caught' in Senate

MR. TRUMAN'S request for emergency legislation was made at 4 o'clock of a Saturday afternoon. Within three hours the House, moved by the angry forcefulness of Mr. Truman's request and by the spirit of emergency, passed the legislation by the votes of 306 members, with only 13 dissenting.

From the House the bill went immediately to the Senate. In that body was the same infection from President Truman's indignation and the same sense of emergency. In that spirit, Democratic Leader Barkley, acting formally and properly in support of a request from the Democratic President, asked immediate consideration of the emergency bill.

Some Senators, however, noticed that the bill contained provisions which made it rigorous beyond anything Congress would be likely to pass in any normal condition.

While it was limited in scope to strikes in industries basically affecting the country's whole economy, and also limited in time (to six months following formal termination of the technical state of war), it would be a precedent which some Senators regarded as extreme and dangerous. One provision would "authorize the President" in such strikes as the railroad one "to draft into the armed forces of the United States all workers who are on strike against their Government."

Effectively Buried

AMONG those who felt the bill went too far, Republican Senator Taft was conspicuous. Largely because of his alertness and leadership, the measure was postponed until the following Monday. In this, aid came from the fact that during the delivery of the President's address to Congress, the strike was called off.

During the ensuing week the Senate removed from the measure the provisions which were regarded as too extreme. Ultimately, the measure was never enacted.

While all this went on and afterward, Whitney used words about the President as angrily bitter as the President had used about him. Newspaper accounts of a meeting he addressed in New York May 30, 1946, quoted him as sayin., in a context that made the words especially demeaning, "You can't make . . . a President cut of a ribbon salesman."

In divers statements and interviews he was quoted as saying that Mr. Truman was a "political accident" and a "one-termer"; that "Mr. Truman never will be President again after 1948." This, on Whitney's part, was not a mere prediction. It was accompanied by strong expressions of determination to prevent reelection of Mr. Truman, with assertions of confidence that his union, with others, could and would do this.

The public read that, and much more of the same, during the summer of 1946. Today, the public reads that Whitney and his union will support Mr. Truman, that he expects to take a "very active" part in the campaign; that he and Mr. Truman are now in amity; that the two had a "wonderful chat."

Veto Remembered

THIS little history, among other aspects, puts President Truman and a Republican aspirant for the presidency, Senator Taft, into a strange relation as respects labor leaders.

Mr. Truman, on an angry impluse created by a railroad strike, asked Congress for what was probably the most drastic labor legislation any President ever asked of any Congress. Taft took leadership in preventing this from being enacted.

Subsequently, Taft took leadership in writing, with great care and over many months, an extremely painstaking labor measure, the Taft-Hartley bill. This President Truman vetoed, and Congress passed it over his veto.

Today, labor leaders give credit to President Truman for vetoing the careful bill, and forget his sponsorship of the hasty one. They oppose Taft because he wrote the careful bill, and forget his part in saving them from the hasty one.

Czechs Evenly Split on U. N.

PRAGUE (AP).—Czechoslovakia's official public opinion poll, conducted by the department of statistics, finds that 38 out of every 100 Czechoslovaks believe the United Nations will succeed in an effort to prevent a third world war and that 30 out of 100 are sure United Nations will fail. The other 32 said they felt no certainty either way.

Sixty-five per cent said they were eager to hear the latest news about the United Nations, and 22 per cent said they had no interest.

Fifty-two per cent knew that United Nations sessions were held in the United States, but 26 per cent thought that the meetings had been held in France or Switzerland, and 22 per cent said they were in other countries, or didn't know. Young people showed up best in these answers.

Fifty per cent of the men interviewed and 32 per cent of the women said they were dissatisfied with the work of the United Nations up to now. Twenty-three per cent of the men and 10 per cent of the women said they were satisfied with United Nations accomplishments.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Eccles 'Took It' Like a Good Sport

By Drew Pearson

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has fired a lot of people lately, but he hates to do it face to face. Frequently he delegates the unpleasant job to others.

The demotion of Marriner Eccles as Federal Reserve chairman—which cost Truman a lot of resentment both in the South and among FDR's old friends—was left to Presidential Assistant John Steelman.

Eccles, one of the few surviving Roosevelt executives in the Administration, was struck speechless by the news. And, like Francis Biddle, who was fired as Attorney General through a phone call by Steve Early, Eccles felt the President owed him a personal explanation. So he asked for and obtained an interview.

It was not a happy session.

Eccles pressed Truman as to whether it was his old critic, Treasury Secretary Snyder, who had demanded his scalp.

"I give you my word, he did not," replied Truman.

"Well, who did?" persisted the Utah banker who has guided Federal Reserve policies for so many years. "You yourself say you have complete confidence in me and are satisfied with my record."

Truman admitted that someone else had tipped the scales against Eccles but refused to tell who it was. Later it was reported that Lewis Douglas, Ambassador to Britain and head of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., had put in the final stab, while the knife was turned by George Harrison, president of the New York Life Insurance Co.

The insurance companies have long bucked Eccles' policy of keeping up the price of Government bonds through his "open market committee," which stands ready to buy Government bonds if the insurance companies and other big buyers lay off buying in order to force prices down.

Mr. Truman was nervous throughout the conference and obviously wanted to get it over. He recalled that when he took office Eccles had offered to resign.

"I can't understand you, Mr. President," shot back Eccles. "I can't reconcile your statements of confidence in me with the action you have taken. Also, I don't like the abrupt way this has been handled. The least you could have done would have been to inform me of your wishes sooner. Had you done so, I could have retired gracefully."

Eccles left the meeting in a huff.

His anger subsided, however, after conferring with friends, who urged him to pocket his pride and accept the vice chairmanship. The big bankers, stockbrokers and insurance companies wanted to get him off the board, these friends advised. He owed it to the country to stay on the firing line against the inflation interests.

So, when Eccles walked into Mr. Truman's office for a second interview, he exuded cheerfulness.

"I've decided to accept your offer, Mr. President, and continue in the capacity as vice chairman," he said brightly. "I feel I am doing the best thing. I suppose it is easy to fly off the handle in a situation like this and get your name in the papers, but I prefer to buckle down and help carry the load."

"I'm glad to hear it," responded Truman. "To show you that I've got nothing against you, I'll write you a letter so that the public will know the confidence I have in you."

"I'm still a little curious about several things," Eccles interposed. "One is—why I wasn't notified of this sooner. Had that been done, the chances are I would have arranged my affairs and left the board. Also, I'm a little surprised about Tom McCabe not telling me that he had been offered my job. I know him quite well."

Truman replied that the answer to the first question was that he didn't "definitely" make up his mind until recently.

"I decided about a week ago, and this is the first chance I've had to talk to you. As for Tom McCabe—maybe he was requested not to tell."

"Well, I wouldn't be truthful if I told you I liked the way this has been handled," Eccles repeated. "However, I understand your position. And I agree with you that it is a good policy to rotate the board chairmanship. I said so as long ago as 1935.

"Then, again, I guess I've become a symbol that proves embarrassing to you at times. Certain groups are for me and certain others against me. There seems to be no middle ground. That isn't my fault. I've given the best of my ability to doing a job as I think it should be done. So if you think my stepping down will help matters, I'm willing to abide by your decision."

Note — Democratic National Commiteemen wrung their hands over the appointment of conservative Republican Tom McCabe to take Eccles' place. "Every appointment like this," moaned one official, "makes Truman look more like Taft. It wins no Republican votes and loses a lot of Democratic votes to Henry Wallace."

A Southern Reaction to Douglas

SNIFFING the political winds from up North, Mississippi's hard-shelled Senator James Eastland hoisted a storm warning the other day and gave notice that he would oppose Justice William Douglas as President Truman's 1948 running mate.

"I think it is a shameful thing," opined the gentleman from Mississippi, "that politicians . . . would attempt to put the Supreme Court of the United States in politics. (It) will cause the people to think that every decision of Mr. Justice Douglas is swayed by political considerations."

He was referring to a news report that Douglas had already been picked for Vice President by the New York politicians.

"Our people are tired of politicians who plan and plot and politicalize the highest court of this country," Eastland roared on.

Whereupon a Republican Senator, Wayne Morse of Oregon, quietly rose and asked unanimous consent to insert in the Congressional Record a "great speech delivered by a great American."

"The speech," Morse explained, "was delivered by a great justice of the United States—Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas."

'T. R.' Desk Rides Again

PRESIDENT TRUMAN got quite a kick out of telling visitors the other day how the late President Roosevelt put his famous gadget-cluttered desk out of commission by accidentally dropping a lighted match or cigaret into one of the drawers.

The President was talking to three New York Democrats, Paul Fitzpatrick, State Demoratic chairman, and two aides, George Daly and Larry Doyle, when Daly, who once covered the White House as a newspaperman, remarked that the desk wasn't the same one Roosevelt used.

"Yes," agreed Truman, "Roosevelt dropped a match or cigaret and burned one of the drawers."

The present desk, he explained, is the original Presidential flat-top, brought to the White House in 1902 by another Roosevelt—roughriding Teddy Roosevelt.

A Jolt for the Middle Class

'Good' Families Breed 'Bad' Boys

By Judith Crist

MIDDLE-CLASS families, with an "it can't happen here" attitude toward juvenile delinquency, recently reecived a jolt from the Crime Prevention Bureau of the Detroit Police Department. The bureau charged that 80 per cent of youngsters brought to its attention come from "good" families.

This finding was included in a study of the bureau's statistics for August 1 to December 1, 1946, covering 2137 boys between the ages of 10 and 17. The study, entitled "Boys in Trouble, 1946," was prepared by Dr. William W. Wattenberg, associate professor of education and educational psychology at Wayne University.

The typical boy who came to police attention was not the "Dead End Kid" of popular imagination. He was "a pretty average sort of boy"—with one exception; his parents found little time to participate in his activities. Yet more than 90 per cent of the boys said they liked their homes, only 3.37 per cent expressing definite dislike. As few as 4 per cent disliked their fathers, only 1.5 their mothers. Twenty boys in all disliked both parents.

More than half the boys were of "average" physical development; only 36 were termed "sexually abnormal." Two thirds were of "average" appearance; 558 were classed as "neat and clean," and 132 as "slovenly."

About every fifth boy was a mischievous or Peck's Bad Boy type. Sixty-eight were studious and 66 obviously quarrelsome. The rest were "normal."

Can't Blame Slums

THEIR dwellings, the officers found, were "much better than expected." Only 15 per cent of the boys came from substandard and overcrowded homes; three quarters came from racially homogeneous residential neighborhoods. "Boys in trouble," the report stated, "thus are seen to be a problem of the whole city and not of the 'slum' districts alone."

Handicrafts, games and collecting were the most popular hobbies, with fishing the favorite outdoor sport. More than three quarters belonged to no organized youth group and a bare minority reported regular church attendance. Yet only one boy in five expressed an active dislike of school, with a large majority definitely favoring education.

More than half the boys did not work. Of every 10, 1 had no chores around the house, 6 had a few, 2 had "occasional" duties and only 1 had "many." The overwhelming majority of parents either gave their son an allowance or handed him money when he asked for it.

The boys proved themselves "a pleasure-loving crowd," since the money they earned or received from their parents was spent—on shows, by more than half, shows and sports by a quarter and on dancing and music, hobbies and miscellaneous fun by the rest.

Most of the boys, the study showed, seemed, when not engaged in misdeeds, to get along well in their neighborhoods. Half of them belonged to neighborhood gangs.

Few 'Only Children'

THE FAMILIES were fairly large, only 9 per cent of the boys being only children. Most had adequate incomes. Sixty-two per cent of the homes were intact, although the number of broken homes for these boys was three times as great as for all boys in Detroit.

Although a majority of the parents cooperated with the police, the chief weakness of the home was found to be neglect, rather than hostility. Only one boy in 30 reported that any one at home picked on him. Only 12 in 30 were given a share in family problems.

Chronic sickness was present in almost 8 per cent of the homes. In 17 cases both parents were alcoholics, in 14 the mother, in 105, the father. But in 1961 families no member drank.

No over-all effect of the "feminine influence" in families was found. The death of the mother, however, doubled the likelihood that the boy would get into trouble. Boys who have sisters were somewhat more likely to be involved in drunkenness and auto theft. Boys with no sisters were slightly more prone to be involved in sex offenses and disorderly conduct, which includes such items as window peeping, using obscene language and molesting women.

Boys in families of children of only one sex were found "considerably more likely" to get into trouble than only children or those having both brothers and sisters.

...But Not in Election Year

40 Pct. Rent Jump Likely Eventuality

By Clarke Beach

MANY GOVERNMENT economists say rents are going to rise sooner or later until they reach levels comparable to other cost of living items.

They estimate rents will wind up probably 40 to 60 per cent higher than before the war.

Congress, however, is preparing to postpone the ultimate showdown on rent increases. Influential members of both Houses say there is no doubt rent controls will be extended this session, probably with allowances for some upward revision of present rates.

Many members last June grudgingly agreed to the present act extending controls to February 29 of this year. They were determined then that that was to be the last extension. But last summer's upsurge in the cost of food and other living items have alarmed them.

If all rent controls are allowed to lapse in March, the legislators foresee possible wholesale rent rises, evictions, tenant resistance and demands for higher wages. They dread not only the widespread suffering, but also the dire political consequences in an election year.

The President has repeatedly called for extension of rent controls. Congress now has the ball.

Overwhelming Sentiment

AS to how the Nation feels about it, perhaps the most illuminating information comes from the rent advisory boards. Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods has received from 410 out of 667 of them recommendations regarding future rent policy, and 335 recommended extension of controls in their areas.

Only 38 advised that controls be abolished, and 37 recommended that a general rent increase of a limited amount be granted in their areas.

Congress is faced with a host of problems in writing a new rent control extension act. For one thing, an appeal is pending before the Supreme Court from a Cleveland Federal judge's decision that the present act is unconstitutional. The act is based on the premise that there is a national emergency, but the judge declared that peace has come and there is no emergency.

Another thorny point is this: By setting the termination date of February 29 for rent controls, the act encouraged tenants to agree to "voluntary" rent raises of 15 per cent to obtain leases for the rest of 1948. Those who accepted the raise will feel they have been tricked if other renters are allowed to keep the old rate.

The guess of one well-informed congressional adviser is that Congress will grant a 15 per cent raise to all landlords who did not obtain it after June 30, 1947.

Under the partial controls now in effect, rents advanced more than 5 per cent from June to mid-November, according to the consumers' price index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The rise was almost as fast as the average of all items, including food. Yet rents had risen only 1 per cent from the summer of 1942 until last June, when the "voluntary" raises commenced.

The bureau's figures, nevertheless, indicate that rents even now have risen only about 15 per cent above the 1935-1939 average. The average rise of all items is 64.9 per cent.

There is another set of official statistics, however, that indicates that the "median" rental of dwelling units has risen 36 per cent since 1940. That is the sample housing survey conducted by the Census Bureau last April (before the "voluntary" rent rise.)

Officials of both agencies say there is no discrepancy. The census figures cover not only old housing but also new and converted houses and apartments, which are not under rent control. Rents on the latter class of dwellings, according to experts in the office of the Housing Expediter, are 60 per cent higher than those on old units.

The BLS figures do not reflect increased rental expenditures by families which have become more prosperous and have moved to better homes.

A Large Loophole

HERE are some of the reasons the general level of rents has been rising, despite partial controls:

1. Builders have been able to set whatever original rent they wish on new or converted housing since February 1, 1947.

2. Owners who rent their houses for the first time can set their own rents. More and more, landlords are including charges for furniture and utilities.

3. The Housing Expediter has issued 19 orders decontrolling all or a part of defense rental areas (centered on cities and towns), comprising 30,708 units. He has granted 155,207 landlord petitions for rent raises, allowing an average rent increase of 20 per cent. About 500,000 dwelling units were affected.

4. The "voluntary" rent rise, amounting in nearly all cases to the full 15 per cent allowed by law, was accepted by tenants in 1,634,855 dwelling units.

The ultimate level of rents when all are uncontrolled will depend, say the economists, on the adjustment between the supply and demand for housing. But, just as in their opinion the dollar never again will buy as much as it did before the war, they think the general rent level will someday be anywhere from 4 to 24 per cent higher than it is now.

It's Getting Hard to Find Foster Homes

Last week, in the case of a 6-year-old boy named Bill, one of the women cried, "Don't put that boy in an institution. He needs the warmth and affection and firmness of a home background."

But nobody wants Bill, and some place has to be found for him by next Thursday. The foster home he is in is closing up.

Bill's mother is dead. His father tried to be both parents, but he had a very poor job and couldn't take care of Bill. Finally he decided his son would be better off if the District looked after him.

Bill feels as though his father has rejected him. And the case supervisor is afraid that if Bill goes into an institution he will feel that the world has rejected him, and withdraw into himself until he is a psychological problem.

Sevenfold Problem

THERE was another case of seven children in one family, the oldest 12. They are being committed to care of the board because their mother, who is going blind, simply can't care for them. They are a "family bunch" of kids, so much a community in themselves that they have never felt the need for neighborhood companionship.

And because of their mother's failing eyesight, she hasn't noticed how boisterous they are. She hasn't controlled them properly. Separated, their strong family ties will be broken. Together, unused to discipline, they make a foster parent's hair stand on end with their exuberance.

The Foster Care Section hopes to place them by twos and threes so that gradually they will adjust to discipline without losing all family ties.

But first it has to find the homes.

Foster parents are adults who are willing to stand in the role of a parent to a child or children with whom they have no blood ties. They must be willing also to safeguard the child's interests, both in emergencies and in everyday living, and be prepared to give the child back to its parents or relatives when they are again able to provide a home. The agency tries to match age, health and way of living as far as possible in placing children with foster parents.

If you think you can help in the foster home problem which the Public Welfare Department now faces, call Mrs. Helen Cooper at National 6000, extension 851.

Library Has Largest Foreign Collections

Oriental Culture Having Renaissance Here

By Emily Towe

AN island of Oriental culture is flourishing in the shadow of the Capitol dome.

In the Orientalia Room of the Library of Congress are the largest collections of catalogued Japanese and Chinese books outside those two countries.

There are relics yellowed by the centuries yet bearing witness to the East's early proficiency in printing; volumes once cherished by Chinese royalty; an eighth century Buddhist charm preserved in the original pagoda as it was ordered by a Japanese empress.

Librarians with Oriental features pass noiselessly through the corridors, finding space for the thousands of volumes pouring in since the war. The Washington Document Center and the Interdepartmental Committee for the Acquisition of Foreign Publicatinos have transferred much material to the library. A library staff member is now in Japan speeding shipments. Chinese books and periodicals are arriving more slowly.

There are 245,000 bound volumes in the Chinese section, 60,000 in the Japanese and large collections in the India and Near East sections.

By The Washington Post.

The Japanese section of the Orientalia Room, with Librarians Andrew Y. Kuroda and Mrs. Katsuyo Takeshita on duty

A Millennium Old

HAND-BLOCKED print titles many volumes. Delicate ivory clamps bind others together. There are encyclopedias carefully copied by hand.

A miniature pagoda four inches high, fashioned more than a thousand years ago, is considered one of the most precious in the antique collection. Inside is a Buddhist charm on its original paper—a relic that historians say "is the first certain and clearly attested record of printing with wooden blocks on paper."

This charm was one of a million ordered about 770 A.D. by a pious Japanese empress. She had vowed that she would show her gratitude to Buddha upon the conclusion of an 8-year civil war.

Though the Orientalia collection did not reach division status in the library until 1928, the Chinese collection was started in 1869 with a gift from Emperor Mu-tsung of commentaries to the Thirteen Classics.

The oldest specimen of printing in the Chinese collection is a Buddhist invocation sutra of 975 A.D. The scroll was recovered from the foundations of the Thunder Peak Pagoda on the shores of West Lake, Hangchow, when that structure collapsed in 1924.

Another item of unusual value is the only known copy of the Sung Keng-chih t'u, or "Pictures on Tilling and Weaving." These are 45 woodcuts, each with an explanatory poem composed by Lou Shou about 1145 A.D. and carved on stone in 1210. They were printed in book form in 1237. The reprint in the library was made in Japan about 1676.

On one shelf are 41 original volumes of the Yung Lo Ta Tien, world's largest encyclopedia, compiled in 1403-08 in 11,095 volumes. Only 370 of these handwritten volumes are now in existence. The library also has a copy of the world's largest printed encyclopedia, the Ku Chin Tu Shu Chi Cheng. It has 15,040 volumes and was printed in 1728.

Postgraduate Work

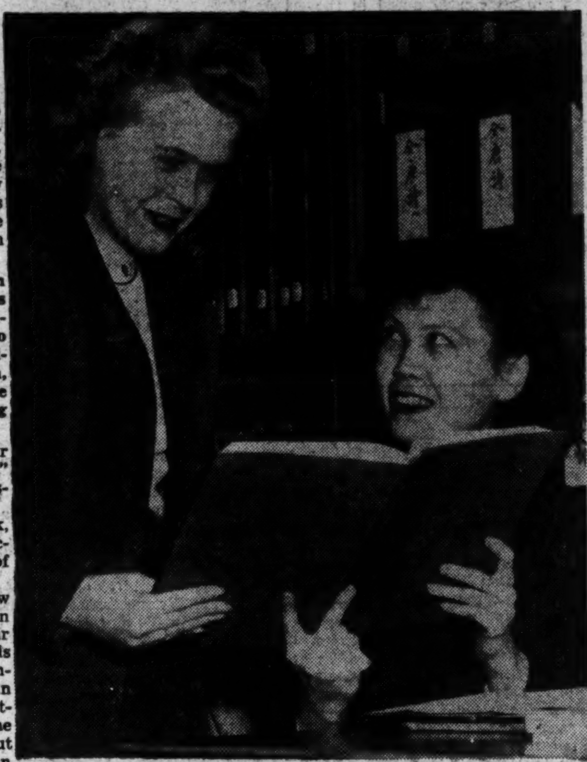
WHO uses the Orientalia Room? Many men and women who learned the languages in the service are keeping up their studies. Government workers with an eye on overseas duty are naturally interested. And many students have turned to this field because of the Far East's prominence in the news.

A postwar service has been the translation of love letters to former GIs from their Oriental sweethearts. Mrs. Katsuyo Takeshita, an American-born librarian in the Japanese section, blushed as she recalled some early experiences in translating such letters orally.

"I decided it would be better to write out the translations," she smiled. "It saves embarrassment all around."

Most of the translation work, of course, is on Government documents and other material of general interest.

Another librarian is Andrew Kuroda, son of a Presbyterian minister, who was reared near Tokyo and did not come to this country until he was 24. He commented on the great difference in the contents of Japanese textbooks and magazines since the war. Instead of mythology about the Emperor's descent from a sun goddess, he said, the Japanese now are told about racial origins on the Asiatic continent.



Agnes Liang (right), a cataloguer in the Orientalia Room, helps Mildred Campbell, a student, of 28 Burns st. ne., with her Chinese language lesson

Eternal Feminine

HE THUMBED through some women's magazines published recently in Japan and called attention that though the type runs from right to left the interests of women are not very different over the world. The cover of the magazine was an Oriental glamor girl and inside advertisements proclaimed the powers of various powders, lotions and creams.

Kuroda pointed out that the library's large collection includes many volumes banned in Japan. In one book issued before the war, a switch in characters called Hirohito "Dog Emperor" instead of "Great Emperor."

Many of the Oriental books are made available to students in other parts of the country through an inter-library loan service. In turn, the volumes of a number of university libraries are available to Washington readers. The library's photostatic and microfilming equipment helps spread the coverage.

Dr. Arthur W. Hummel, chief of the Division of Orientalia, believes that the war may have unlocked a new treasure house for Americans by focussing their attention on the peoples of the East.

"Now is our opportunity to discover what they have to offer in constructive knowledge," he says, "and there is much in the field of classics and general culture."

The Magazine Rack

By Katharine Graham

"THE place is Washington and the season spring," announces Junior Bazaar a bit prematurely, but it makes a pleasant contrast to cold reality.

Sixteen pages of local scenes were taken last fall by Fashion Editor Anne Campion and her assistant, Mary Snow Ethridge, daughter of Louisville Publisher Mark Ethridge, in Blair House, the State Department and along familiar local streets. Thanks are given by them to Mrs. Geaney, hostess at Blair House; Jane Lingo and Betsy Porter, 16-year-old daughter of Paul Porter, for their help.

Several beautiful young things who could make a tidy living modeling were discovered here by their joint efforts. Sally Ann and Joan Gardiner and Nora Martins, daughter of the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, open the pages, followed by Miss Mary Termohlen and Mrs. Clarence F. Norment, whose husband is in the Interstate Commerce Commission. Other beauties are Joan Exnicios and Nancy Anderson, daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture, who appears in an extremely handsome color shot.

In a double page spread, "They Work in Washington," is a group of young and somewhat less snappy-looking individuals whose virtues are alleged to lie in their jobs rather than in their "new look."

George Y. Wheeler 3d, program director of WRC, and his wife, Jane, who runs a children's television program, are snapped in their library; Philip Graham of this paper rather hogs the camera while his wife, who writes a magazine column, lurks in the background.

Across the page, Stewart Alsop is shown in the middle of writing what appears to be a powerful diatribe; Hugh Morrow, assistant to the Saturday Evening Post's Washington editor, and his 25-year-old wife, author of a syndicated column, are shown at their desks, and Eunice Kennedy, 25-year-old executive secretary of the National Conference on the Prevention and Control of Juvenile Delinquency, looks very official. Mary Johnston, diplomatic and foreign relations reporter for Robert S. Allen, rates a page of her own.

"So You Want to Be a Diplomat" was written by Dorothy Main Whitley, a junior in the School of Government at George Washington University, and another double page spread is devoted to the Catholic University Theater, which Julian Bent, jr., says has gained wider fame and respect and has grown with greater rapidity than any of its innumerable counterparts.

THE ATLANTIC has an exciting thriller in "Marooned in the Clouds," the story of the American C-53 which crashed on a Swiss glacier on its way from Munich to Istres, France, in November, 1946. Among the eight passengers and four crew members who survived was Marguerite Gaylord Tate, a passenger and mother of the pilot, who describes the days and nights spent in icy and harrowing expense awaiting rescue. Even the reader is exhausted by the time help arrives, it's so graphically written.

"The Impact of Protestantism Today," by Reinhold Niehbuhr, and the anonymous "I Changed My Name," by a man who gives reasons for changing his "forthrightly Jewish" name, are also good reading.

A magazine's lot is often not a happy one because of early deadlines, and several of them were caught out on limbs by General Eisenhower's withdrawal from the presidential race. Ernest Lindley, in '48, idly speculates about a general in the White House, but there are other compensations in the issue.

Bill Mauldin, cartoonist and author most recently of "Back Home," is profiled by fellow veteran E. J. Kahn, jr., of the New Yorker, who tells the story of Mauldin's own rehabilitation in terms of his cars, which Mauldin has always regarded with awe. Immediately after his discharge Mauldin acquired a De Soto, which he turned in for a Pontiac which was shortly replaced by a large and glittering Buick. "Just a few weeks ago, Mauldin sold the Buick and bought himself a Jeep." "It somehow seems a shame," remarks Kahn.

Most remarkable thing about "Acey Moore," the contented Pullman conductor, whose story is also in '48, is how he met his worst experience, the capture and imprisonment of two inebriated ladies who were celebrating their discharge from the Wacs by cavorting nude in the aisle of the good conductor's train.

Poll Favors Elected School Board

giving District residents final power to write their laws.

The "veto" provision was placed in the bill to make it constitutional. As things are now, a District law comes into being when each house of Congress has passed it and the President has signed it. The home rule program would put the present machinery into reverse, by saying that lesislation proposed by the city council could become law only if neither house of Congress nor the President disapproved it.

Another strong reason for the "veto" feature is the belief of sponsors that without it home rule would never pass Congress.

Whatever the reason for the veto, 50 per cent of Washington residents are shown to be against it in the poll. The veto feature was approved by 30 per cent, and 20 per cent had no opinion.

Here is how individuals voiced their dislike of the veto: "If we're going to have home rule we should have the final say; the council should be capable of making its own decisions." Those who favored the veto did so in these terms: "The Nation's Capital is Congress's responsibility."

Compensatory Features

BECAUSE a limit must be placed on the number of questions in a poll, the survey did not bring out two features of the home rule plan which offset the veto.

One is that the city council would be given all the ordinance-making powers now held by the District government. Such ordinances would become law without having to clear through Congress. The second is that the council would have final power to write the annual city budget. While the budget would be sent to the proposed Joint Congressional District Committee for review, that group could only recommend, not make, changes.

The types of legislation that would have to clear through Congress under home rule include major changes in laws, revenue and taxation measures, changes in the charter and proposed bond issues for public works.

Responses of Washington residents varied on other features of the Auchincloss-Ball bill:

The voting requirements were approved generally, but by a slimmer margin than the general home rule proposition. The bill would let District residents who have lived here a year or more vote in the local elections. The bill also says they can vote here without losing their right to vote on national affairs in a State.

THE WASHINGTON POST POLL made its home rule survey late in December. All interviews were held in the home. The residents questioned were selected to give proportionate representation to all groups living in the District. Interviews were held in all parts of the city, and the calls were made in both daytime and evening to insure representation of working people.

This question was asked first on the election plan:

"I'd like to ask your opinion of some of the points in the plan. First, all people who have lived in the District a year would be eligible to vote for District officials. Do you approve or disapprove of this?

The results:

	All Groups	Have lived in District. Less than 5 years	5-9 years	10 yrs. or more
Approve	59%	65%	70%	55%
Would approve if they were going to stay, etc.	4	2	4	4
Disapprove	32	30	20	35
Don't know	5	3	6	6

This question followed:

"District residents who have kept their right to vote in other places could still vote there in national and State elections. Do you think they should be allowed to vote here also for District officials?"

The results:

	All Groups	Those who have voting residence elsewhere	Those who have no voting residence elsewhere
Yes, should be allowed to vote here	39%	49%	35%
Yes, if they plan to live here, etc.	6	7	5
No, should not be allowed to vote here	43	35	46
Don't know	12	9	14

Chief reason for opposing the double voting privilege is a misunderstanding about what it would mean in any one election. Twenty-nine per cent say a person should have only one vote, shouldn't vote twice in the same election. A few say that people who have maintained voting residence are not so interested in District affairs (4%); that these people should vote for local officials where they come from (3%); that they are out-and-out opposed to home rule (2%).

Elected Board 'Carries'

THE proposal for an elected school board was backed by 62 per cent of those polled. Auchincloss said "that is most encouraging, because we have been getting a large number of letters on the school board plan." Opposition to electing school board members was voiced by 22 per cent, and 16 per cent had no opinion.

The vote was closer on the question whether Washington's chief executive under home rule should be a manager appointed by the city council or a mayor elected by the people. (In the home rule bill the top administrator would be a council-appointed manager. There would also be a mayor, but he would be a member of the council, elected by it to serve as presiding officer and to represent the city in ceremonies.)

This was the question on manager versus mayor:

"According to the plan, people would vote for members of a city council. The city council would then hire someone trained in city government to carry out the District laws. Do you think it is a good idea to hire someone trained in city government for this job, or would you rather have an elected mayor?"

The results:

Good idea	43%
Rather have a mayor	39
Qualified	1
Don't know	17

In a final question, the poll showed strong support for the plan in the home rule bill to make District elections strictly nonpartisan. Here is the question:

"People running for office in the District would not run as members of any political party, like Republicans or Democrats, but as individuals. Do you think this would be a good idea?"

The results:

Yes	59%
No	22
Don't know	19

U. S. Success Hangs On Greek Offensive

By Homer Bigart

ATHENS, Jan. 31.—Whether the American aid mission to Greece succeeds or fails depends heavily on the promised spring offensive of the Greek army.

Unless the army achieves final victory over the guerillas, Americans will be forced to conclude that there is a basic and perhaps incurable rottenness in Greek civil and military administration, and that the Balkan phase of our attempt to contain communism is a losing gamble.

In a war with Russia, Greece would be untenable. Among the Americans here there is a growing conviction that we should tell the Greeks quite frankly that we will not send American combat troops into another Bataan. Nothing short of this will make the Greek government realize that the Greek army and no one else is going to crush the rebel threat.

Barring open Russian intervention, the Greek army is perfectly capable of this. Communist aid to the rebel forces of General Markos from across the northern frontier always has been exaggerated. No one but a Greek has been killed in this civil war; no one but a Greek has been captured.

With the new increases, and not counting the National Guard, the Greek army will outnumber the guerillas at least six to one. The outcry in Athens that the guerillas are better armed has been labeled "tommyrot" by American military observers.

Afraid to Prune

ONLY by crushing the guerillas can Greece achieve freedom from the paralyzing fear that has frustrated every attempt by the American aid mission to lead this nation toward some semblance of economy and stability.

With so much of the country actually held or threatened by guerillas, reconstruction projects have been abandoned or curtailed. Jobs are so scarce that Premier Themistokles Sophoulis has rejected the American proposal to lop off one-third of the government's top-heavy payroll, fearing that unemployed civil servants will turn Communist.

Every scare, real or imaginary, inspires further inflation. Labor is demanding higher wages, which if granted will send prices soaring again.

Theoretically, the workers are denied the right to strike. Last month Parliament, in a moment of hysteria, approved a decree providing heavy punishment, including death, for all persons "attempting to halt the carrying out of productive work or services." But the government does not dare to enforce this atrociously harsh decree, and already it has been challenged by the printers' union.

In spite of the seeming hopelessness, the American aid mission is tackling some of the more glaring weaknesses of the Greek administration. Perhaps the most scandalous maladministration has been in the distribution of supplies from America. Not one of the 17 ministries was specifically responsible for the distribution of these supplies.

Thus 20 to 25 per cent of the 375 million dollars worth of goods brought in by UNRRA was still lying in the warehouses when the American aid mission took over in July. Much of it has not yet been moved.

Collars Don't Fit

IN FAIRNESS to the Greeks, it should be said that a lot of stuff stays in warehouses because, as the French say, it is inutile. And in fairness to UNRRA, it should be said that UNRRA was a rush program designed to prevent starvation. Thus it was inevitable that some silly things were shipped here.

These items include, for example, 20,000 pairs of horse collars much too big for the scrawny Greek animals, and heavy plows completely useless in a country where farmers use a walking plow. A fugitive decimal caused UNRRA to ship enough strychnine to kill everybody in the Balkans.

To add to the confusion, the Greeks had few civilian servants with enough technical knowledge to tell a soup-kitchen stove from an incubator. It is a fact that Greeks mistook British-made stoves for incubators—probably because the trademark on the crates depicted a chicken—and sent them to the Ministry of Agriculture.

A Mere 100 Volumes

Army Tackles Historical Job Nearly as Big as Fighting War

By Lee Grove

"HOW did we do it?"

To answer that question for its own professional guidance and for civilian students of World War II, the United States Army is embarked on a 100 volume history. Unlike foreign armies, our Army has never had a comprehensive history of its performance in war. And seldom, if ever, have our military historians had access to enemy records.

This time, possession of German records enables us to see both sides of the picture. The Japanese records are not complete, because of the efficiency of American bombers and the burning by the Japanese of their own papers.

The first volume of "The U. S. Army in World War II," "The Army Ground Forces, the Organization of Combat Troops," a 540-page work, is already published. The final volume is scheduled for June, 1952. A volume on the Okinawa battle will be published this spring.

An Early Date

This early publication date is in contrast to previous American military histories. Prior to the Civil War no effort was made to prepare such accounts. Afterward, the Government published the records that seemed likely to be used by historians.

The history of World War I is not yet complete.

The present history will describe the involved effort to organize, train, equip, transport and care for the largest army the country has ever supported. About 34 volumes will be devoted to combat history.

Brig. Gen. Harry J. Malony, who with Kent Roberts Greenfield, former Johns Hopkins University professor of European history, heads the division, explains:

"If we blueprint the method and show the results, we will show how it was done for those who do it the next time, and if we never have to do it again, we will have left a record of how it was done in that last unique experience."

Was No Record

DR. GREENFIELD explains that "at the approach of World War II many officers remembered what they did during the last war, but remembered it confusedly. There was no record they could go back to, to see what they had themselves done.

"The practical Army officers wanted this," says Dr. Greenfield "They were willing to meet the conditions imposed by professional historical scholarship."

Dr. Greenfield talked to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower about it.

"I told him I was reluctant to take the responsibility unless certain conditions were met, chief of which was access to the records," he said.

"He paced up and down for 40 minutes. I though he was thinking about whether the Army wanted the history, but he was thinking about how to implement the request for access to the records."

Memo From 'Ike'

THE result was a memorandum for the directors of general staff divisions and the chiefs of special staff divisions from General Eisenhower, making accessible all records "except only when to do so would in fact endanger the security of the Nation . . . The foregoing directive will be interpreted in the most liberal sense with no reservations as to whether or not the evidence of history places the Army in a favorable light."

Less than three months after the United States entered the war a presidential directive established the groundwork for the history.

"The main objective," President Roosevelt said, "is to preserve for those who come after us an accurate and objective account of our present experience."

The Army established historical sections in commands at home and abroad, and in 1943 a historical branch in the Office of the Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, to supervise the project.

Just Tons of It

TONS OF material have flowed into Washington since the end of the war. About 150,000 square feet are stacked high with records, including 150 tons of operational records for the ground forces alone. Source material from the European theater alone weighs more than 34 tons.

The staff numbers about a hundred persons, of whom less than 40 are actually writing; the others being research workers, translators, reference and clerical members.

Dr. Greenfield gives especial credit to two young colonels, Allen F. Clark, jr., and John M. Kemper.

"Those two West Pointers have been the life of the project from the beginning," he says, "Kemper in planning it and Clark for seeing its possibilities."

Fought Pendergast Machine

Creel Did Much More Than Grind Out 'Dope'

By Frank L. Dennis

REBEL AT LARGE, by George Creel. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. ($3.75).

THIS autobiography is as provocative as a 1948 Supreme Court opinion, as entertaining in spots as Will Rogers, and as revealing as a politician's diary.

Creel's traducers, who are roughly as numerous as Republicans, as well as his admirers will find this volume rewarding. For it turns out that George Creel is more than simply the chief United States World War I propagandist and writer of magazine pieces. Behind the gay facade are the heart— and brain—of a very useful American.

Before realizing that George Creel is 70 years old, it came as a surprise to this later-generation reviewer to find that the author is a successful pioneer in the fight for honest State and municipal government. His record as a worker for civic reform in Denver and Kansas City has long since been lost sight of in the fame of his place on the national scene.

Boy in Independence

LIKE Harry S. Truman, George Creel was a boy in Independence, Mo., but unlike him, he fought the Pendergast machine in Kansas City. Moving to Denver as the editor of a crusading newspaper, he battled with some success against political corruption, against domination of the State by absentee-owned mining companies, and against entrenched greed anywhere he saw it.

GEORGE CREEL
. . . more than propaganda

His Washington service was principally as the director of World Wars I's version of the OWI, and subsequently as principal Washington correspondent for Collier's at various times.

These middle-aged persons who remember his war service as simply the creation and propagation of lies will find an answer in this book, if they are interested. Allowing for the prejudices of the author, it must be said that Creel makes a very convincing case for himself.

Likewise he discusses candidly the charges made against him that he profited personally by his Government connections. This timely discussion is part of a chapter called "The Crash of Standards," in which he writes with sadness of the "deterioration in (public) character if not an actual disintegration."

The historian, whether of today or of the future, will find his estimate of Woodrow Wilson fruitful reading. Likewise his estimate of Franklin D. Roosevelt, with whom he also was on fairly intimate terms—until even so dyed-in-the-wool a Democrat as Creel could no longer stomach all the boondoggling.

Inside Stuff

THE book is studded with nuggets of "inside information," such as the cause of the break between Woodrow Wilson and Colonel House and that between Roosevelt and John L. Lewis. It likewise is sprinkled with numerous incidents and anecedotes as varied as Creel's venture as a "heavy" in an early-day Western movie and his campaign for Governor of California against the tide of pension planners and Utopians.

He closes on a note worth at least a second thought:

"Today we are spending millions on a Voice of America that, it is fondly hoped, will persuade Russia to 'understand' America. Why not a drive to make Americans understand America? A crusade that will raise patriotism above 'liberalism's' sneers, lifting all eyes to the shining arch of democratic achievement, and away from the mean search for flaws at the base? We are a great people, and out of the glory of the Republic's morning, what may not be expected of the noon? If we are given a recovery of pride, courage and faith, what height can dismay our climbing feet?"

'It Might Have Been Memorable'

Romance, Realism Meet in Canada

By Sterling North

FRESH WIND BLOWING. By Grace Campbell. Duell, Sloan & Pearce. 233 pp. $2.75.

THERE are so few Canadian novelists of distinction that encouragement should be given every writer of merit who can be discovered in the friendly nation north of our border. For that reason I wish I might feel more enthusiasm for Grace Campbell's picture of Canada in wartime.

MISS CAMPBELL

The characters of her two previous books have been for the most part Scottish-Canadians, a sturdy folk whose traditions she knows well. Her "Thorn-Apple Tree" was an idyll of pioneer days in Ontario. "The Higher Hill" pictured Canada at the time of the War of 1812.

Now using less nostalgic material, she attempts a blend of romance and realism in modern Canada.

Kirk and Kari, twin brother and sister of an Irish mother and Scandinavian father, live in the valley of Qu'Appelle in Saskatchewan. We see them first on their farm, follow them from high school to college, see Kirk train for the airforce and leave for England, and share the family's fear for his safety.

From this point on the story becomes that of Kari in Montreal. Her love for Jeff, the English pilot, her honeymoon with him in the lovely Laurentians, her job, her friends and single enemy, her long and agonizing wait when he goes back to war. The last third of the book has more depth and suspense than the earlier portions, sometimes approaching real distinction.

Grace Campbell is at her best when describing the wild beauties of her native Canada. Her weakest departments are characterization and dialogue. This is a somewhat awkward novel which in the hands of a more mature stylist might have been memorable.

THE PURSUIT OF ROBERT EMMET. By Helen Landreth. Whittlesey House. 407 pp. $3.75.

HERE is a factual account of the life and death of an idealistic and dedicated young Irish patriot who wrote his brother in 1803, "I can serve my country as well on the scaffold as in the field."

Robert Emmet's name rings nearly as many bells as that of the later Charles Stewart Parnell in the minds of the citizens of Eire. He it was who risked his life, his comfortable inheritance and his love for the beautiful Sarah Curran in a futile attempt to storm Dublin Castle on the bloody night of July 23, 1803.

The haze of mystery which has always surrounded that event is due largely to the fact that for more than a century no student was given access to the Emmet papers locked in the Irish State Paper Office at Dublin Castle. Thus it was impossible to prove or disprove the contention that William Pitt himself desired such an uprising for the political benefit which would accrue to himself and to England when the leaders revealed themselves. Stirring up minor rebellions for just such purposes was for many years a specialty of the British, and there is little reason to doubt that the uprising of 1803, like the one which cost the Irish 50,000 lives in 1798, served the ulterior purposes of the British Crown, already shaken by the loss of the American colonies.

England fought democracy with bare knuckles in those days. Troops were quartered on any one suspected of sympathy with the United Irishmen, shop windows were smashed by undisciplined English soldiers; martial law was proclaimed at the lifting of a pike. Hundreds were hung, thousands sentenced to as many as 500 or even 1000 lashes, shiploads were deported.

Young Emmet tried to raise help for the Irish cause in France, then returned to Ireland to foment and organize the uprising of 1803. French help did not come. Agents and spies were everywhere. Emmet trusted naively in men who carried information of his every move to the Castle.

How he tried, failed, fled and was finally captured is in itself the substance of an exciting book. But add the details of his touching love affair, and his heroic death and you have the stuff of classic tragedy.

Helen Landreth is sincerely and openly a partisan of Emmet and his cause. She will not endear herself to Orangemen with this book, and she may annoy some Tory diehards in England. But she can scarcely be accused of religious bigotry, for though her faith seems to be Catholic, her hero was a Protestant.

MARDI GRAS. By Robert Tallant. Doubleday. 269 pp. $3.50

MARDI GRAS DAY. With 30 drawings and lithographs by Ralph Wickiser, Caroline Durieux and John McCrady. Holt. 87 pp. $3

THE revelers who will drink and make love and pay seven prices for a dinner or hotel room in New Orleans on February 10 might be amused to learn that they are celebrating one of the oldest and most pagan of the fertility rites celebrated by western civilization.

TALLANT

In New Orleans today, of course, the matrons who would rather see their daughters queen of Comus, or Rex, or the Twelfth Night Revelers or any other important Krewe than to have them achieve scholastic honors, skill in the arts or sciences, or even beatification might be slightly annoyed to learn that the costly process of "bringing out" their debutantes is in effect merely offering them to the goat-hoofed god Faunus.

Robert Tallant, who goes briefly into the historic background of Mardi Gras (literally Fat Tuesday) starts his book as though his principal interest were in decorating a cake. He recites the wonders of the parades and balls between Saturnalia and Lupercalia, climaxed by the all-out hell-raising and expensive costumery and float decoration which tops Shrove Tuesday.

Today, of course, all is reasonably decorous. We are even assured (and this is the funniest thing in the book) that Mardi Gras is far, far from being a commercialized come-on to bring several million dollars a year to the merchants of New Orleans.

One thing you never say (says Tallant) is "Mardi Gras Day." That would be as redundant as saying "Tuesday Day." But the second book on the subject this year (by three artists who know the festival well) is called "Mardi Gras Day." The drawings and lithographs by these three artists are delightful—far more illuminating of the real spirit of the festival than the uncaptioned photographs in the Tallant volume.

THE UNITED NATIONS. By Herbert Vere Evatt. Harvard University Press. 154 pp. $2.50.

WITH RUSSIA continuing to demonstrate little except her world-wide nuisance value in the United Nations (through vicious use of the veto 22 times in the Security Council and non-cooperation in the Little Assembly), and with Great Britain through the slimmest of technicalities seemingly sabotaging the partition of Palestine, a mere innocent bystander might well ask whether the United Nations as it stands can long endure.

Herbert Vere Evatt, brilliant Australian, who has continuously fought for a more democratic and effective organization, believes that despite all the frustrations of the past two years, the United Nations can be made to operate effectively. In fact in many departments it is already making excellent progress.

It was unfortunate, but absolutely necessary that the United Nations Charter be written while war was still in progress. Unfortunate because it emphasized the importance of the Big Powers; necessary because otherwise there would have been no charter.

Evatt gives Roosevelt credit for the astute political insight in hastening the Breton Woods and San Francisco conferences, rightly believing that if we did not get cooperation from Russia while we were still fighting Germany, we would get no cooperation in the period of distrust which follows all wars.

Evatt says further that it was wise to divorce the making of the peace treaties from the U. N., since tying the Versailles Treaty to the league was what gave Wilson's enemies a chance to sabotage his plans after World War I. But unless we soon write and sign those treaties, little progress can be made in the U. N.

How Australia and other small nations attempted to liberalize and make democratic the Big Power dominated Charter; how they have fought ever since to help the sadly limping organization overcome Big Power rivalries, and how the organization can perhaps be made to function in the future is the substance of this book.

Every paragraph and every sentence is packed with practical but technical suggestions impossible to summarize in a short review.

But as even the brave and hard-working Evatt admits sadly, little can be done without the "Good Faith" which every member pledged in signing the charter. Without international goodwill no such organization can possibly secure the peace.

Short of a proposal for real world government, Evatt's suggestions furnish what little optimism is permissible in a bleak world divided by an ever more impenetrable Iron Curtain.

New, Telling Argument in Favor of MVA

THE MISSOURI VALLEY: Land of Drought, Flood and Promise. By Rufus Terral. Yale University Press. 274 pp. $3.75.

THIS is one of the most compelling arguments yet advanced for a Missouri Valley Authority. Terral is a persuasive advocate for a single over-all agency to bring order out of chaos in controlling the Missouri's rampages and tapping the valley's resources. His persuasion is buttressed by scores of examples of why the present piecemeal and often contradictory efforts by divergent Federal agencies and private interests are not good enough.

Yet Terral's are no store-bought conclusions. As an editorial writer on the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, he has had a first-hand opportunity to observe the appalling waste that is the product of confusion. His advantage is that he sees the Missouri Valley as a whole as well as by component parts. He marshals his arguments comprehensively and presents them powerfully. They march to inevitable consummation in an MVA.

In this treatise Terral regards the present compromise Pick-Sloan plan as a mere marriage of convenience, a "fake MVA." But while he looks to the TVA as the prototype of a Missouri Valley Authority, he does not blindly accept it as a panacea. Rather he appraises it critically, noting the weaknesses and suggesting correctives.

Terral envisions a Missouri Valley whose resources are made available to the whole people, a valley protected from floods, its water supply assured, with greater irrigation and more scientific farming, more electric power, lower freight rates and more industry, and general abundance. To this end he goes far afield from the river itself to review the area's history from the days of free land and profligate overgrazing, through the fights over water rights to the dust bowl.

Essentially his approach is that of a conservationist, a conservationist who notes alarming omens of a return of the dust bowl in continued irresponsible misuse of land. The Missouri Valley, as "the largest semidenuded area on earth," constitutes the Nation's No. 1 conservation problem. Mr. Terral has not overlooked the opportunity to impress candidly upon his readers how the soil of America is eroding away.

Warren Hits Many Notes With These

THE CIRCUS IN THE ATTIC AND OTHER STORIES. By Robert Penn Warren (Harcourt Brace; $3).

TWO novelettes, including the title story, and 12 short stories, which appeared in magazines during the last 16 years, have been collected in these 275 pages.

They are about Southerners (like the author), or about teachers (like the author), but in form and mood and in the characters they are as varied as 14 pieces of short fiction could possibly be. Bolton Lovehart is slave to his mother and victim of his wife; Jeff York loves his scrubby farm to the death; nitwit Silas Nabb turns the other cheek once too often; the professor changes his mind; the Hardins try to keep up the price of tobacco.

To some extent Warren is an old-fashioned writer. He supplies a beginning, middle and end; he drops easily into colloquial speech; he makes use of the grass-root stuff of American life.

But in another sense Warren is as new and modern as next week, for he tells a story wonderfully, he pumps his boys and men and women full to bursting with the breath of life, he weaves his plots solely out of his people. If he believed the moon was made of green cheese, it wouldn't matter to me, for he is that rare thing, a writer. He pictures the strange and incalculable ways, the pathetic weakness, the ignorance, the prejudice, the lamentable inhumanity of humanity.

Dr. Rhine Says Telepathy Could Point Way to Peace

By John J. O'Neill

THE REACH OF THE MIND, by Dr. Joseph B. Rhine. William Sloane Associates

DR. JOSEPH B. RHINE, professor of psychology at Duke University, Durham, N. C., father of the scientific "extrasensory perception" investigation of telepathy, clairvoyance and other manifestations of "psi," is on the trail of the greatest discovery in this field. Should he make it, the world might be a far better place to live in.

The goal at which Dr. Rhine is aiming seems reasonably simple —making the person who receives a telepathic impression know he is right when he is right. Or he wants to create a direct connection between the conscious and subconscious realms of the mind.

When this is accomplished, declared Dr. Rhine in his new book, "The Reach of the Mind," the uncertainty will be taken out of telepathy and the right signal will be called every time.

May Mix Signals

TELEPATHY and allied phenomena take place in an unconscious realm of the mind, and when the transmission from mind to mind is achieved it percolates through in a somewhat nebulous way in the mind of the receiver from the unconscious to the conscious realm, and there is no certainty that the order in which the conscious mind catches glimpses of the signals is the order in which they were received.

It is frequently observed that if the scoring were done not on the response to the signal transmitted at a given moment, but on a preceding or following signal, the average score would be much higher.

This means that the right signal was received, but in some cases it was delayed in the subconscious or in other cases it came in advance. This lag or lead caused the receiver to call the right signal, but at the wrong time, so it was credited to the improper transmitted signal.

Might Be Lost

"OBVIOUSLY," stated Dr. Rhine, "the real effect of E. S. P. could easily be lost completely in such a displacement."

The writer observed a subject who did manifest, in an informal test, a strong certainty that he was right in two impressions he received. He had been droning in varied repetition "star, circle, plus, waves." Once, after calling "star," he sat up straight and called to the transmitter, two rooms distant, "and, by gosh, that one is a star."

Later he interrupted his calls to shout, "Circle, and you can set that one aside because that one is a circle." His score was somewhat above average, and on those two he was right. He explained, "I had my eyes closed, but when I called 'star' I saw part of the design of a star outlined in light, and later I saw the outline of a quarter of a circle."

Would Reveal Secrets

IF THE MIND could open an introspective window into the unconscious realm, "every one possessing E. S. P. could demonstrate it with perfect efficiency, for no response would need be registered until there was a conscious certainty of the operation of the 'psi' function."

"Consider what would happen," stated Dr. Rhine. "The effect would be to turn a searchlight on all the secrets of man and nature. If the mind, limited as it is now, can identify a specific card in a deck located a thousand miles away, what would prevent any knowledge, hidden anywhere in the world, from being reached by such an ability. The subject needs only to know when he is right . . .

"The consequences for world affairs would be literally colossal. War plans, and crafty designs of any kind, anywhere in the world, could be watched and revealed. With such revelation it seems unlikely that war could ever occur again. There would be no advantage of surprise. Every secret weapon and scheming strategy would be subject to exposure. The nations could relax their suspicious fears of each other's machinations.

Sees End of Crime

"CRIME on any scale could hardly exist with its cloak of invisibility thus removed. Graft, exploitation and suppression could not continue if the dark plots of wicked men were to be laid bare . . .

"No lurking disease, no impending epidemic, no obscure source of danger to society could hide from the extrasensorial insight directed to discover it. The location of the hidden wealth of the world, mineral and non-mineral, could be charted. What problem of the universe could be left unsolved?" . . .

This picture, Dr. Rhine insists, is conservative and the reality of the development when it comes will be far more fantastic than any prediction that can be made concerning it.

Odds and Ends About Books

Panel to Pick Titles Of 'Lasting Merit'

AWARE that many excellent books are overlooked in these days of high-pressure merchandising of fat and gaudy historical novels, a "Reviewers' Panel" has been chosen to select each month one or two "books of lasting merit" for special promotion in the bookstores of America. The first selections will be announced in March.

The panel of five critics will consist of Orville Prescott of the New York Times, Amy Loveman of the Saturday Review of Literature, Fred Babcock, literary editor of the Chicago Tribune; Joseph Henry Jackson, literary editor of the San Francisco Chronicle, and the author of this column.

All of us have agreed to serve without remuneration in the interest of bringing to the attention of the public books more worthy of acclaim than many of the titles railroaded onto the best-seller lists.

THIS SEEMS to be a tough winter for the novelist, Howard Fast, already under the shadow of the Thomas Committee's displeasure. Fast was a party to an out-of-court settlement of charges brought by Harry Barnard, who insists that Fast's novel, "The American," concerning John Peter Altgeld, has more than superficial resemblances to some parts of "Eagle Forgotten," his own nonfiction biography of the Illinois liberal. Fast and others involved are reported to have paid Barnard a settlement. Duell, Sloan and Pearce (Fast's publishers until his recent switch to Little, Brown) will reissue the Barnard biography.

CHARLIE GORHAM, who knows book publishing from the inside, will chip some of the gold leaf from his previous profession in his new novel, "The Gilded Hearse" (Creative Age) . . . Harold E. Stassen is pushing Carl Van Doren's "The Great Rehearsal," and incidentally the cause of world federation . . .

Traced to Mother's Jitters

Some Babies Are 'Born Neurotic'

Dr. Earl L. Reynolds of the Fels Institute, which is making a unique study of human development, takes an X-ray of the physical growth of one of the Bremer triplets

By Ken Davis

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP).—A jittery mother can make her unborn child a nervous wreck, scientists at Fels Institute believe after exhaustive studies of Ohio mothers and fathers.

Dr. John I. Lacey, head of the institute's psychopysiology division, explained it this way:

"When a prospective mother becomes nervous or upset, there is a change in the function of her endocrine glands and in the composition of her blood.

"Such changes are passed on to the fetal bloodstream and act in a stimulating or irritating manner on the brain and nervous system of the baby."

Human development probably is charted more closely and at greater length at this comparatively unknown institute than at any other place on earth. Fels researchers begin studying their subjects when they are yet unborn, perhaps six months before that event.

By the time their subjects are born, they have exhaustive records of their heart actions and movements through delicate instruments which simultaneously record the heart and nervous reactions of the mother.

These records are continued in regular sequence throughout the first 18 years of their lives and will be extended intermittently in the years beyond. Probably nowhere else are human records kept so diligently, so completely and on the same persons over such a long period.

Roots of Happiness

SAMUEL S. FELS, a Philadelphia soap manufacturer who wondered what made his friends tick, founded the institute 18 years ago. Dr. Lester W. Sontag, the institute's first and only director, explained its activities thus:

"The institute is an expression of Mr. Fels' interest in people and of his conviction that better health, better social adjustment, greater happiness and more effective social organization can be attained only through an expanded knowledge of man and of the factors influencing the functioning of his body and the shaping of his motivation and personality."

Fels himself laid the basis for the institute's work—the "longitudinal method" of experimentation, keeping records over long periods on the same subjects.

"The only trouble," smiled one of the staff, "is that human beings live so long. With guinea pigs or white mice you can run through several generations in a hurry."

Most Fels scientists do not anticipate appreciable progress for a couple of decades, but already, in 18 years of research, they believe they can distinguish a few of the blaze marks along the right path.

They believe, for instance, they are penetrating the mystery surrounding the tieup between mind and body. Through the most extensive and complicated series of physical measurements and records ever attempted, they feel they have added one more refinement in the age-old attempt to assay the relationship of physical makeup—the distribution of such tissues as fat, muscle and bone—to behavior and personality.

Resilience of Women

PEOPLE are not what they seem from the outside, says Dr. Earle L. Reynolds, who heads the institute's physical growth division.

"For example," he explains, "two girls may have exactly the same outward measurements and weight. One is athletic, energetic, fast-moving, aggressive; the other slower-moving, not particularly energetic, perhaps of a retiring nature.

"X-ray examination of those girls might reveal entirely different interior distribution of fat, muscle and bone. Possibly the aggressive girl would have a greater proportion of muscle and less fat than the more timid girl."

Dr. Lacey has found that women, advertised as the weaker sex, snap back faster and relax better from nervous stress than do males. This sidelight developed from a series of tests designed to determine individual reactions to nervous stresses as expressed through the functions of the autonomic nervous system.

This system cares for involuntary nervous responses—blushing, regulation of the flow of blood in response to heat and cold, blood pressure and many others. Emotional upsets play a part in causing such psychosomatic diseases as migraine, essential hypertension, peptic ulcers and asthma.

"The existence of sex differences in such phenomena as physiological relaxation and recovery," said Dr. Lacey, "may provide a clew to sex differences in the incidence of diseases."

Beneficial Flogging

IN THE institute's psychology section, Dr. Alfred L. Baldwin says you can't tell a good parent from a bad one without knowing their children.

"Different children react differently to the same treatment," he said. "We have an instance where parents literally horsewhipped their children for infractions of family rules.

"Now, according to all progressive educational standards, horsewhipping children for any reason is bad, even ruinous. Yet the children of these parents are turning out splendidly."

Dr. Baldwin does not advocate horsewhipping as a means of rearing children.

Fels scientists are interested in giving parents healthy children on which to practice the proper methods of upbringing, and Dr. Sontag reverted to the dangers of nervousness in prospective mothers in declaring that infants born of "mothers undergoing severe emotional stresses" . . . "are to all intents and purposes neurotic infants when they are born."

"Such an infant," he said, "is from the beginning a hyperactive, irritable, squirming, crying child, the result of an unsatisfactory fetal environment.

"He has not to wait until childhood for a bad home situation or other cause to make him neurotic.

"In certain instances of severely disturbed maternal emotion which we have observed, the infant's bodily functions were severely disturbed and major feeding problems resulted. Experience with other similar cases suggests that many of the feeding problems which pediatricians experience with young infants arise from abnormal fetal environment."

Beaten Now, Science Hopes

Black Death Struck Just 600 Years Ago

By Robert E. Geiger

SIX HUNDRED years ago, in 1348, the Black Death swept Europe.

It was one of the greatest calamities of all time.

Millions died, and historians estimate that by the end of the century the disease had killed up to one fourth of Europe's population, or possibly 25 million persons.

In China another 13 million persons died in an outbreak at about the same time.

To this day the seeds of the Black Death—bubonic plague—are scattered throughout the world. Since 1898 it is estimated that more than 12 million persons have died of it in India.

But medical scientists believe they now have the means of substantially reducing the chance the plague ever again will spread over the globe.

Biblical Reference

AUTHORITIES can't say where or when plague started.

Wu Lien-teh, Chinese authority, says epidemic disease mentioned in the Bible "can be considered true plague" and traced through history to 1320 B. C.

Plague started from Pelusium, in lower Egypt, and "spread to the ends of the inhabitable world," says Wu Lien-teh. It reached Constantinople in the sixth century reign of Justinian the Great, most famous of all the emperors of the eastern Roman Empire. In 60 years, it is estimated, 100 million people died, and the glory of the empire faded.

For the next 800 years a definite trace of plague is lacking in European history, although there were many "epidemics." But the Crusades had sent thousands of Europeans into the East in quest of the Holy Sepulchre. If the black rat of Asia returned with them in the twelfth century rats would have multiplied sufficiently to be noticed in Europe within a century. And the history books say they appeared at that time.

In 1345 bubonic plague was epidemic in Asia and Africa. Within two years it had spread to Greece and Italy. In the year 1348 it struck Florence.

"Such was the cruelty of heaven and perhaps of men that between March and July following, it is supposed and made pretty certain that upwards of 100,000 souls perished in the city only . . ."

So says the introduction to Boccaccio's "Decameron," a story of young noblemen and women attempting by secluding themselves to avoid the plague that was rampant.

It was a holy year, and Pope Clement VI offered absolution to all persons who might perish in a pilgrimage to Rome. About one million people thronged Rome at Easter. Plague spread rapidly through them, and historians say not 10 per cent escaped.

When the Black Death reached England, from one-half to two-thirds of the people are believed to have perished.

Plague broke out sporadically during the next five centuries before virtually disappearing from the Western World. During the time of Shakespeare, epidemics frequently closed theaters.

Traced to Rat

IT WASN'T until around 1900 that it was definitely established that the rat harbors the disease. The rat is bitten by a flea; the flea then bites a man and transmits the plague to him. The disease in one form may be communicated from man to man.

The United States Public Health Service says plague among rodents exists in many places in the world today, including a great part of the United States. Outbreaks have occurred on the West Coast among human beings. Rodent plague has been found as far inland as central Kansas, health officials say, but they have no great fear there will be an outbreak of the Black Death in the United States.

Medical scientists recently have discovered that the sulfa drugs are valuable in treatment and believe that the new drug, streptomycin, may prove so also. New and more powerful flea and rat killers, including DDT and the poison R-1080, are proving extremely effective.

404 Closings in 15 Years

FDIC Could Weather Another 1933 Crisis, Bank Experts Believe

By Sigrid Arne

NOT SINCE May, 1944, has any bank affiliated with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation closed its doors.

Not since 1933 have officers of an insured bank had to look out their windows at a "run"—a dreary line of people on the sidewalk, bank books in hand and deep-etched anxiety on their faces.

Actually, not since May, 1944, has any depositor in a Government-insured bank lost a cent on a deposit.

This report is written because February, 1948, marks the fifteenth anniversary of the congressional act which created FDIC. That act was driven through Congress by three men, only one of whom is now living, Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.). The other two were Senator Carter Glass (D., Va.) and Representative Henry Steagall (D., Ala.).

FDIC officers think the corporation is strong enough now to withstand another blow like '33, when an epidemic of "bank holidays," some of which turned out to be permanent, swept the Nation.

Only 1185 Holdouts

FDIC was set up to insure up to $5000 any deposit in any national bank willing to join the system and meet the rigid annual examination. Last June 13,582 national banks were members. Only 1185 were outside the system.

The system started to operate in 1934. Since then 404 insured banks have closed. In the so-called "prosperity year" of 1926 alone, nearly 1000 banks closed their doors.

Here's the record on the 404 banks closed under the FDIC:

Three reopened by merging with sound banks, and needed no FDIC help.

There were 1,319,427 depositors in the other 401 banks.

Their deposits totaled 509 million dollars.

Less than one eighth of 1 per cent of that money was lost—all of it in accounts of more than $5000.

Almost 98 per cent of the accounts could be drawn on immediately.

That wasn't done with mirrors but under a sort of mutual insurance system. Member banks kick in a yearly assessment of one-twelfth of 1 per cent of the deposits on hand on an average day. Those assessments, plus some income from investments, make up a revolving fund used to bail out the depositors in banks which close or have to merge with some more sound bank.

Preventive Measures

FDIC has operated in two ways:

1. It has stepped in when a bank failed and has paid the depositors immediately the amount of their accounts—up to $5000 for each depositor.

2. It has seen that a bank was too shaky to last, and after some quiet talks has merged the shaky bank with a sound one. In such cases the deposits in the closed bank simply move to the good bank. The depositors haven't missed a day of banking service. The good assets of the closed bank were transferred to the sound bank, and FDIC paid out enough to cover the poor assets.

In recent years FDIC has used the second method exclusively. It has found it loses less money that way. The good assets of the poor bank can be saved. Otherwise they would be sold to meet the gathering storm—and when the bank finally closed FDIC would have to pay out more to cover the losses.

In either case the FDIC has tried to recover on the poor assets it has taken over. Because business has been on a long upward rise, many of these poor assets have increased in value and been sold. FDIC has lost only 19 per cent of the payments put out for closed banks, 7 per cent of those put out for mergers.

The FDIC now has a permanent insurance fund which must remain at a minimum of a billion dollars. In case of emergency the Treasury is directed to lend it another three billions.

111 Billion Increase

BETWEEN 1921 and 1933—a period which embraced two flurries of bank failures—depositors lost all told less than a billion dollars. It is for that reason that FDIC officers think that, with the four billion dollars they now have on tap, the system could withstand another 1933.

They hold to this belief despite the fact that deposits have jumped. Now they total $148,400,000,000 in insured banks. In 1933 they were $37,000,000,000.

FDIC officials think they have a second reason for confidence. The assets that banks now hold in general are much better than those found in the safes of crashed banks in 1933. And FDIC now keeps a weather eye open for banks which collect too many risky assets. Such banks can be tossed out of the system.

From the beginning FDIC has paid out 306 million dollars to help closed banks or to merge shaky ones. Out of that FDIC recovered 276 million. It expects to recover another three million, leaving net losses of only 27 million — already charged off — and there is still more than a billion now in the permanent insurance fund.

Low on Capital

THERE are two clouds on the horizon about which FDIC keeps putting out warnings.

The amount of capital which banks keep on hand to back up the deposits on their books has dropped 'way below the amount that was traditional before World War II. FDIC for more than a year has insisted that banks sell more stock and get more capital.

The notion of how much money stockholders should put into banks has changed tremendously since 1875, for example, when they held enough stock to cover 35 per cent of the accounts. That dropped slowly until 1919, when the capital stock stood at 10 to 13 per cent of the deposits.

By 1945 that had dropped to 5.9 per cent. In 1946 it picked up to 6.1 per cent. The FDIC feels that this is inadequate. It cannot force the issue, but it can expel a bank which it considers unsafe.

After an expulsion FDIC writes all the depositors the bank is no longer insured. That happened in 1936 to one bank. It closed its doors four months later.

All told, in the decade from 1936 to 1946, the FDIC took action against 132 banks for unsafe practices. Thirty-nine closed. Sixty-four were merged. Twenty-three took FDIC advice and got rid of poor assets and poor managers.

There is one other, and smaller, worry. The FDIC is so short of personnel it was able to make only 83 per cent of the bank examinations on the program for 1946. It was a little better in 1947.

Year of 'Austerity'

Lid on 'Luck' Pinches Some in Hot Springs

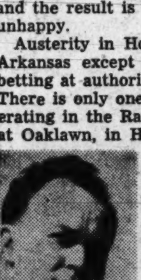
Wide World Photos.

Leo P. McLaughlin, colorful former mayor, drives "Scotch and Soda," his matched team of bays, along Hot Springs' Central ave. When he was in the saddle, the resort was wide open

By Jim Thomasson

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Jan. 31 (AP).—Hot Springs has been operating under a self-imposed "austerity program" for about a year now, and the result is what might be expected—some of the populace is unhappy.

Austerity in Hot Springs means no gambling, which is illegal in Arkansas except for parimutuel betting at authorized race tracks. There is only one such track operating in the Razorback State—at Oaklawn, in Hot Springs.



McMATH

Prosecuting Attorney Sidney McMath is the man behind the program. He led a GI group which broke the hold of former Mayor Peo P. McLaughlin's organization on Hot Springs and Garland County and turned the faucet on gambling.

The special grand jury which indicted McLaughlin and others on charges of malfeasance and bribery last year said that in 1946 gambling operators in Hot Springs and Garland County grossed $30,000,000, netted $1,671,928 and paid $31,600 in fines to the city. Moreover, it said, gambling in Hot Springs during the McLaughlin regime was "controlled and operated under direction of the city hall.")

It was this loss of revenue that caused the walls. For years it had been argued in some quarters that many visitors were attracted here by other things than mineral baths.

Name Your Poison

IN the heydey of the colorful McLaughlin, the Belvedere Club offered dining, dancing, bingo, dice, roulette, blackjack and chuckaluck. The Tower Tavern, Avalon Club and less sumptuous places had only dice and roulette.

For race fans, the Southern Club offered up-to-the-second information from all the Nation's tracks and paid track odds up to 15 to 1. Horse race books and dice games were operated in many cigar stores and pool rooms.

In return for "protection," gambling places paid regular fines to the city government.

On election day, pink slips bearing names of administration favorites were circulated. Disfavored candidates in State, district, county or city races were lucky to poll 100 votes in the entire county.

When Lieutenant Colonel McMath, young Marine hero, returned home and went after McLaughlin, he was given little chance of success. But county and district offices fell to the GI group, and last April McLaughlin —by that time under 15 indictments—decided against seeking reelection.

Immediately, Hot Springs closed up. But there was a feeling that it was only a "show" by a new administration. Today it is still illegal to book a race bet or shoot dice in Hot Springs.

And the dire prophecies haven't come to pass. Most business buildings are still occupied and a number of new businesses have been chartered. Hotel rooms aren't quite as hard to obtain, but operators say tha reservations for "the season" are holding up well.

Army Buildup

IT is difficult to compare Hot Springs before McMath and now. In the last year of the war the Army had the four leading hotels under lease and was sending 1500 veterans through the ground forces rehabiliation center here every two weeks.

The first normal season since the war is just getting under way.

Meanwhile, elements of the McLaughlin organization are seeking to form a new alliance under a "liberal" banner. One of the leaders is former Municipal Judge Verne Ledgerwood, often credited with being the "brains" of the McLaughlin regime.

McLaughlin was tried recently on one of the charges against him and was acquitted. Some time in February, on the eve of the racing season, McMath plans to try McLaughlin on another charge.

As for McMath, all is not serene in his own group, and unless difficulties are ironed out he and his friends may have their work cut out for them in opposing a liberal slate of candidates.

But by next summer's elections McMath may be too busy with other matters to take active leadership of the "ins" in Hot Springs. He may be running for Governor.

Million and Half Eager Helpers

Science Debunks Twin Fallacies

By Ken Davis

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP).

Are you a twin? If so, you're in the news today.

More and more of the 1,500,000 Americans born in double harness are getting into headlines. They are joining organizations that get national attention. They are being studied by scientists. They are being written up in books, featured as models and are making sports history.

It's a growing thing, this gathering of the twain. In Chicago, Columbus, Newark, Ohio, and other cities, twins have been forming social clubs, even holding international conventions.

Every time twins gather in sizable numbers, you'll find a scientist measuring and questioning because, as Dr. David C. Rife of Ohio State University, a recognized twin authority, puts it:

"Scientists have come to recognize that the study of twins is one of our most valuable tools in seeking to unravel the interplay of heredity and environment in bringing about human variation."

Rife, an entomologist and zoologist, has recorded data on more than 600 pairs of twins and written many papers on the subject.

Scientific investigation of twinhood, however, is comparatively new. It was little more than 50 years ago that Francis Galton first recognized twins' value to science in a book, "Inquiries Into Human Faculty."

Bright as Two Dollars

BUT even in only five decades of research, a brief span to science, many popular fables about the multiple-born have been exploded.

"Probably the most popular belief about twins is that they are not as smart or as healthy as single born, or that one of the twins has all the brains, the other one few," laughed Dr. Rife.

"There isn't any evidence that twins aren't just as intellectually capable as single born, or that they aren't just as healthy."

Twins laugh at this superstition, too. They point to the record:

Senator John W. Bricker of Ohio, former Governor and Republican vice presidential nominee in 1940, has a twin sister, Mrs. Ella Mooney.

In New York, Consuelo and Gloria O'Connor are veterans of modeling at 19. The O'Connors hit the modeling big time four years ago.

The University of Iowa had Hal and Herb Shoener at opposite ends of its football line last season, and Dave and Dale Bonnie turned a similar stunt at Ohio State University.

There are twin policemen, twin ice-skating stars, twin dancers. Tennessee twins were entered in the 1946 Atlantic City beauty contest. The Wilde twins have been doing all right in a dual movie career. You can see almost everything in double perspective now.

In Huntington, Ind., Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Clark had four sets of twins in eight years. In Florida last year, Mrs. W. J. Dabney, 32, gave birth to her fourth set of twins in four years. Three sets of the Clark twins competed recently in the national family basketball tournament at Wilson, N. C.

Fingerprint Oddity

SOME FACTS about twins are known generally. Practically everyone knows there are two types—identical and fraternal. What makes them that way and what it means is not so well known.

Identical twins are individuals who originated from the same fertilized egg cell; fraternal twins arise from two different eggs—fertilized by different sperm.

"Fraternal twins actually aren't twins," said Dr. Rife. "They are just brothers or sisters born at the same time."

Identical twins will be the same sex, same blood group, have the same pigmentation, similar features and shapes. If one is color blind, the other is, too.

Odd things have been discovered about twins: Right hand fingerprints of identical twins will be more nearly alike than their own right and left hands. Similarly, their left hand prints will be more nearly alike than their own two hands.

Left-handedness occurs more frequently in both types of twins than in the single born.

Without attempting to pose an argument of heredity versus environment, the Ohio State professor observed that identical twins show surprising ability to remain similar despite different lives and education.

Identical twins who have lived apart most of their adult lives may even have the same creases in their shoes. The Farrow twins are classic examples.

Welton Farrow met his identical twin brother, Harold, in 1938 for the first time in 19 years. They had lived entirely different lives.

Welton had more formal education. He had been a railway YMCA secretary, graduated from college, been business manager of Swavely School in Manassas, Va., superintendent of maintenance for Colby College, Waterville, Me., and currently is a bookshop owner.

Harold apprenticed himself to a machinist, worked at the trade the rest of his life.

Yet, 19 years later, the Farrow twins still caused confusion as to their identity, were within one quarter of an inch the same height and had grown bald in almost identical patterns. Both wore glasses for the same eye ailment.

Only One Gavel

TO THE single born, the new twin clubs and associations are a bit startling.

The International Twins Association is a good example. It has two presidents, two vice presidents and two girls as secretary-treasurer.

Ernest and Emory Hicks of Birmingham, Ala., are the twin presidents and John and George Sesler of Columbus, vice presidents, while Dorothy and Dolores McNamara of St. Louis are secretary-treasurer.

The dual presidency has only one gavel, however, for as John Sesler commented: "In many pairs of twins, one of them will do most of the talking and will be less shy."

In the case of the Seslers, who also are presidents of the Columbus Twin Club, John leads the way, with George content to watch and interject an occasional word.

Strangely enough, George is the one who is married. Talkative John apparently loses his vocal virtuosity around girls.

The Seslers may be unique even in the world of twins, for they are albino identicals, the only ones Dr. Rife ever saw.

Twins are born once in 87 births, and identical twins once in each 300 births. The odds against an albino twin set are astronomical.

After talking to and measuring more than 600 pairs of twins, Dr. Rife still hasn't met his wish.

"I'm still looking for a pair of identical twins who married identical twins and had children. I haven't found 'em yet, but I still hope."

In round numbers, the United States has 1,500,000 twins. The two numbers above are Georgia Jean and Dorothy Jane Cunningham, who were Miss Tennessee and Miss Chattanooga, respectively, in the last Miss America beauty pageant

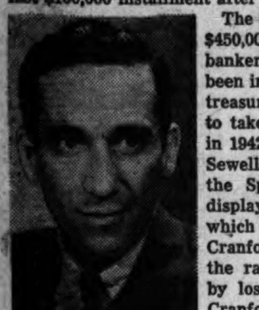
Sauer Appointed Navy's Football Coach

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

To Whom It May Concern

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Joe Louis, who has been in debt to Promotor Mike Jacobs for eight years despite making more money out of the heavyweight title than any other champion, will pay off the last $100,000 installment after his next fight.



POVICH

The St. Louis Browns, who had to sell off $450,000 worth of ballplayers to keep the bankers off their necks last month, have been in financial difficulty before. The club treasurer had a time rustling up train fare to take the team North from Deland, Fla., in 1942, according to former Manager Luke Sewell . . . Sewell is now in New York at the Sporting Goods Dealers' Convention, displaying a plastic table tennis racquet which he patented two years ago . . . Jackie Cranford blew his chances of climbing into the ranks of heavyweight title contenders by losing the decision to Gino Buonvino. Cranford had one glaring weakness: He was too reluctant . . . Bill Dickey's tribute to the late Herb Pennock: "You could catch him in a rocking chair." Connie Mack has maintained for years that the greatest mistake he ever made in baseball was selling Pennock to the Red Sox in 1915 at the waiver price after he had won 11 games and lost only four.

THE 1948 OLYMPICS not only is contributing nothing to international goodwill, but has even affected national solidarity . . . The American Hockey team that did wind up on the ice was booed by players of the United States team in the audience . . . The State Department reportedly is putting pressure on Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler to smooth out his squabble with the Mexican Baseball League in the interest of more amicable relations between the two countries . . . Georgie Abrams will get a $15,000 guarantee to fight . . . Clark Griffith raised an eyebrow at Cincinnati's announcement it would dispose of Shortstop Eddie Miller following his blasts at the club management. If the Reds can get Miller waived out of the National League, the Nats would pay $100,000 for him . . . Branch Rickey, who took over the Brooklyn football franchise in the All-America Conference, will use much of the baseball scouting staff to dig up football talent because six of his scouts are former football men . . . Al Weill and Goldie Ahearn will resume their fight promotions at Uline's Arena next month, following the lifting of the ban against colored patrons of the place.

MEL OTT, of the Giants, looks with disfavor on the late starting date of March 1 for spring training, predicts that it will cause a wave of sore arms among the pitchers who will try to get in shape too fast . . . Johnny Schmidt, who competed in the pole vault at the Millrose games in Madison Square Garden tonight, took the night off from his duties as chorus boy in the Broadway musical "Brigadoon" . . . Before going into show business he won the NCAA pole vault title for Ohio State in 1944 . . . Saul Mariaschin, forward for the Boston Celtics basketball team, has found time to vocalize a hit song, "The More I Do," a rising best seller for Republic records . . . The major league baseball player who isn't offered a 1948 contract before midnight tonight, will be declared a free agent, under the rules . . . Hank Greenberg, who would like to buy into the Phillies, would accept the vacant post as General Manager of the club . . . Orson Welles, Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson were rejected for the title roles in the Babe Ruth movie before William Bendix was selected.

THE CLEVELAND INDIANS are gaining in favor as a flag contender for 1948, and have displaced the Detroit Tigers as third choice behind the Yankees and Red Sox . . . The major league record that will best withstand challenge is Ty Cobb's feat of batting more than .300 for 23 seasons in a row. The estimate is that only one ball player in 10,000 will stay in the league that long . . . Mickey Walker, new sports editor for the Police Gazette, has been followed into the profession by another ex-champ, Barney Ross, who has become sports editor of a new publication called Weekend Reporter . . . Capt. Tom Hamilton denies that Navy limited its hunt for a new football coach to men who formerly were in the Navy, pointing out that because the Army had no big football program during the war, most coaches were in the Navy anyway . . . The Giants, with the best hitting club in the league last season, and the worst pitching staff, have hired the old southpaw Dutch Ruether, to tutor Mel Ott's pitchers in the spring training camp . . . The only two players on the Washington team who have been asked to take salary cuts, Mickey Vernon and Buddy Lewis, are making hold-out gestures.

American Teams Trail In Olympics

By Virgil M. Pinkley
United Press Vice President for Europe

St. Moritz, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The fifth winter Olympic games settled down to their purpose—athletic competition—today and that form of strife found the United States, the instigator of most of the bitterness which has marked the international meet, a power but not a champion among the 28 competing nations.

There was a minimum of dickering as the first three Olympic championships decided went to Sweden, Switzerland and Norway, but the United States scored points in two of the three events to stay in the running for the unofficial team championship and its controversial hockey sextet scored its initial victory, an impressive, 23-to-4, triumph over Poland.

AHA Pours It On

The AHA team, incensed by all the furor which has been created because of the internal United States dispute as to whether it or the United States Olympic Committee team should represent America, really poured it on the hapless Poland sextet, which yesterday had defated Austria, 7 to 5.

With every forward in the United States lineup scoring at least one goal, the Americans played much better than when they lost to Switzerland, 5 to 4, yesterday.

The Americans bombarded Polish Goalie Prezezdziezki in the first period with more shots than he had letters in his name.

Game Becomes Rough

They scored five goals in the first session, nine each in the second and third with Wingers Bruce Cunliffe of New York, Ralph Warburton of Cranston, R. ., and Jack Riley of Medford, Mass., leading the attack with four goals each.

The game was marked by numerous penalties and considerable United States criticism of the refereeing.

In the last minute of the game Riley was cut on the head when hit by one of the Polish players. He started out after the player but was grabbed by his teammates as the United States coach, Johnny Garrison of Springfield, Mass., waved his fist toward the referee for failure to penalize the Polish player.

In contrast to yesterday when fist fights, protests against official decisions and the sabotaging of two

$100,000 Race Won By Flashco

Arcadia, Calif., Jan. 31 (AP).—Exploding with a burst of speed in the final strides, Flascho whipped the favored On Trust and 11 other rivals in the inaugural running of the $100,000 Santa Anita Maturity today.

Winging to the front as 57,500 fans thundered in combined surprise and dismay, Flascho, owned by Frank Frankel of San Antonio, Tex., nipped the vaunted California-bred, On Trust, by a neck in this initial running of the Nation's largest purse reserved exclusively for 4-year-olds.

The "Jay" Third

Double Jay, racing for the Ridgewood Stable of Wilmington, Del., ran third, a length and one quarter behind On Trust, and Louis Bronstein's Brabancon finished fourth.

Battling around the mile and one-quarter strip for the winner's purse of $83,500, it was a horse race from start to finish, with the lead changing heads at least three times before Jockey Jack Westrope on Flascho grabbed it for the fourth and last time less than 20 yards from the wire.

On Trust Fades

E. O. Stice and Sons' On Trust, a two-to-one choice, made his move going into the stretch, pulling steadily into the forefront midway down in front of the grandstand.

It looked like On Trust—and suddenly Flascho boomed from behind like a rocket to grab the fat purse.

On Trust, ridden by Jockey Johnny Longden, and carrying top weight of 125 pounds to Flashco's 113, lost the race through an old habit—he likes to loaf when he gets into the front.

$20,000 For Second

On Trust collected $20,000 for second place, boosting his earnings to $288,720, while Flashco, winner of $31,615 in past performances—six firsts in 40 storts—brought his winnings to $115,115.

Double Jay won $15,000 for third and Brabancon $10,000 for fourth.

Frankel bought Flashco at the Keeneland sales as a yearling for a mere $4500.

Westrope, dismounting, said, "I was pretty far back in the first part but we had luck getting through and the horse finished strong. The way he ran today, he'll be a factor in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap."

Kansan Signs For 4 Years; Salary Not Disclosed

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

George Sauer, 37-year-old University of Kansas coach, yesterday was appointed head football coach of the United States Naval Academy with a four-year contract.

Terms weren't divulged but the salary obviously will be substantially more than the $10,000 Sauer was to have received annually at Kansas for the next four years.

In announcing his Kansas resignation at Lawrence, Kans., Sauer said, "the opportunity to take over as head coach at Navy is one that I can't pass up."

He added, "I regret very much leaving Kansas. It has really been fine working with the players, members of our department, the faculty and alumni."

Ends an Intensive Search

Signing of Sauer by Navy culminated an intensive search for an outstanding civilian, professional coach since academy officials announced January 12 that they were abandoning their 14-year-old graduate coach policy.

Sauer's selection was no great surprise. After Missouri's Don Faurot, considered Navy's No. 1 choice, declined, the fiield narrowed down to Oklahoma's Charles (Bud) Wilkinson and Sauer.

They both flew in last week for lengthy interviews with a special committee of academy officials. Shortly after Wilkinson returned to Oklahoma he announced that he would stay with the Sooners.

Although Sauer understandably could make no statement after his conference in Annapolis, he told The Washington Post that he still "was interested" in the coaching job. It was evident then that he would accept if the position were offered to him.

Kansas Doesn't Like It

Yesterday, Navy officials said the committee unanimously approved Sauer's appointment.

Kansas made no effort to conceal its bitter disappointment over Sauer's leaving. Before taking the Jayhawkers to the Orange Bowl this year, Sauer had signed a four-year pact to stay at Kansas.

E. C. Quigley, director of athletics, said, "His decsion to leave was more than a disappointment to me. It hurt me.

"Before the Miami game, I called him into my office and asked him what would make him happy and induce him to stay at Kansas. His every desire, including new contracts for himself and his assistants, plus bonuses to all his staff, was met."

He Brings Two Aides

Deane Malott, chanceilor, said, "We are most disappointed in Mr. Sauer's breaking his contract with Kansas. In his new four-year contract his every stipulation was met."

And Laverne Spake, member of the Kansas board of regents, joined in, "We had always felt that contracts were obligations. We are disappointed that Mr. Sauer, in leaving, had no sense of obligation in this matter."

Kansas officials were disturbed for obvious reasons. After a 15-year famine, Sauer produced two Big Six cochampionship teams in his two seasons there.

And, in leaving, he's taking Backfield Coach Vic Bradford and Line Coach Bob Ingalls to Navy with him. Bradford, former Alabama quarterback, played professionally with the New Jersey Giants. Ingalls, Michigan center, was graduated in 1942 and played one year of pro ball with the Green Bay Packers.

No Easy Assignment

Sauer steps into one of the toughest coaching spots in the country. With admittedly weak material, Navy will be called upon to face the Nation's best next season. Michigan and Notre Dame will be met on successive Saturdays and the other opponents include California, Cornell, Duke, Missouri, Penn and Columbia. Of course, there's always Army and the Cadets have beaten Navy four years running.

Sauer will arrive at Annapolis soon and will start spring practice on March 1. At Kansas, he employed a T-formation attack based on that used by the Chicago Bears but also knows the split-T originated by Missouri's Don Faurot and liked by Capt. Tom Hamilton, who steps upstairs as Navy's athletic director in June.

The new Navy mentor first won football fame at Nebraska from 1931 to 1933 when he was a two-time All-American fullback. He also played two years for the Green Bay Packers. After a year as freshman coach at his alma mater, he was head coach at New Hampshire for five years. His teams won 27 and lost 13.

During the war, Sauer was a Navy officer. He was backfield coach and also played for Pensacola, Fla. Then he served aboard the aircraft carrier Enterprise for 17 months under Captain Hamilton. Sauer, a lieutenant senior grade, was athletic officer and flight deck officer aboard the big "E."

Stags Lose Early Lead

Caps Gain 37-36 Advantage Over Chicago After 3 Periods

BULLETIN

The Caps defeated the Stags, 54-48.

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Overcoming a 9-point half-time deficit, the Washington Capitols led the Chicago Stags, 37-36, at the end of the third quarter at Uline Arena last night before 5586 spectators.

With Chicago leading, 36-34, Bob Feerick threw in a one-hander and Freddie Scolari followed with his first point of the night, a free throw, to bring the Caps a lead they had not held since early in the opening quarter.

Both team were as cold as the Arena in the first half, missing shots after shot. The Caps, nowever, were guiltier than Chicago and trailed, 29-22, when the half-time buzzer sounded.

The Caps had the dubious distinction of establishing a record low for themselves, and the league, too, perhaps, by making only eight points in the lrst period. The Stags, no balls of fire themselves, were a slight improvement, however, and managed to garner 14.

Washington pitted its first-break against the Stag speed, and when that failed, the Caps switched to a cautious, set shot game, but that didn't click either. The Washington passing was sloppy and costly.

Stan Miasek, the league's third leading scorer, collected 10 of his points by halftime while Maxie Zaslofsky, blanked in the opening quarter, got eight in the second period.

Washington made only five field goals by halftime and Bob Feerick had two of them. Bones McKinney was having Gilmur trouble again, meaning that Chicago's Chuck Gilmur was hogtying the big North Carolinian as only he can do. Bones was not only scoreless, but he was restricted to three attempts in the entire 24 minutes.

Colonials Win Over W. & M.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—George Washington's Colonials turned on their scoring power in the second half here tonight, defeating William and Mary, 65-40, for their tenth Southern Conference victory in 12 starts.

William and Mary made a ball game out of it in the first half, and left the floor at intermission with the score tied, 22-all.

The sharp-shooting of Indian Center Chet Giermak was largely responsible for thte William and Mary pace in that first period. Giermak, who made 19 points this evening, bucketed 12 markers before half-time.

After the intermission it was a different story, however, as Bill Cantwell and Art Cerra unleashed a storm of field goals.

Cantwell tossed in 11 field goals and made both his charity tosses good for a total of 24 points—high for the night. Cerra garnered five field goals and added 4 points from the free throw line.

The Colonials showed a superior defense in the second half, holding the Indians to 18 points as Cantwell and Cerra continued to make the scoreboard ring.

1895 Substitute Finally Letters

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Jan. 31 (AP).—Arthur Huntington today proudly displayed an Ohio State College athletic letter which he has just received—53 years late.

Huntington, who will be 74 Monday, received the unexpected award after Renick Dunlap, captain of the 1895 Buckeye football team, discovered Huntington had never received recognition although he played as a substitute.

Further search of the records showed that Huntington also captained a student-faculty bowling team which in 1895 at Columbus, Ohio, participated in what are believed to be the first intercollegiate bowling matches.

Huntington's relatives have given him a scarlet sweater and the gray letter has been mounted on it.

York Released Outright by Chicago Sox

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—Rudy York, 34-year-old American League first baseman, was handed his unconditional release by the Chicago White Sox today.

York, now previleged to sell his services to the highest bidder, finished his eleventh season in the majors with the White Sox after spending most of his career with the Detroit Tigers.

Detroit traded him to the Boston Red Sox in 1946 and Boston traded him to the White Sox in June, 1947, for Murrell Jones.

York notched a feeble .243 for the White Sox but easily led the club in home run production with 15 and in runs batted in with 91.

York never clubbed fewer than 20 homers for the Tigers between 1937 and 1942, and in 1943 he led the American League in homers, total bases and runs batted in. He played in three World Series and four All-Star games.

Virginia Whips Richmond, 62-54

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 31 (AP). University of Virginia cagers put on a whirlwind finish here tonight to whip the University of Richmond's Spiders, 62-54.

The game was a see-saw battle throughout the first half, which saw the score deadlocked three times—at 9-9, 15-15, and 17-17. Richmond held a narrow 31-30 margin at intermission.

Virginia, however, forged ahead in the third period o nthe accurate shooting of Chuck Noe and Joe Noertker and opened the gap in the closing minutes.

Trampoline Is Word for It

The picture you see here is no fake. It's a real, live action shot of Tom Bogliano, Maryland trampoline expert, cutting a few capers for The Washington Post photographer, Arthur Ellis.

Trampolining is an indoor sport much more strenuous than its euphemistic name sounds.

It's a bouncy little game played on a spring covered by a taut piece of canvas. That's all. To play, you simply get on the spring, jump into the air and the law of gravitation takes care of the rest. After a few weeks of ups and downs, you soon become an expert, like Bogliano.

You can dive just like the best aquatic star. You can somersault, do back-flips, half-turns, roll-overs, etc. Then, too, you can become quite a clown on the springy billiard table.

Bogliano is doing his trick stuff here. Bogliano is considered a hot stuff trampolinist and is the star of Maryland's gymnastic team.

Bobby Locke Takes Lead in Open at 199

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 31 (AP).—Slow moving Bobby Locke, the big money winner from South Africa, captured a one-stroke lead at the end of the third round of the $10,000 Tucson Open golf tournament with a 54-hole total of 199 today.

Breathing on his neck with scores of 200 were Ed Furgol, Pontiac, Mich., who suffered the toughest break of the day; Jimmy Hines, Tucson and Chicago veteran, and the slick young amateur from Toledo, Ohio, Frank Stranahan.

Furgol, playing in the same threesome with Hines and Locke, had matched strokes with the Britisher around to the eighteenth hole. His drive off the last tee landed on the fairway, struck a woman spectator and bounced into an almost unplayable lie in the rough. It cost Furgol a stroke and a tie for the lead.

Bobby Saves a Stroke

Locke landed in a sandtrap, but blasted out close to the pin to earn a birdie and break the deadlock.

For the third day in a row, the field was given a thorough scrambling. When it was over, Skip Alexander, Mid-Pines, N. C., leader at the halfway mark, the three-strokes back in a seventh place tie with 202.

Defending Natoinal Open Champion Lew Worsham of Washington, D. C., was six strokes off the pace with a 205 for the 54 holes.

John Palmer, Western Open champ from Baden, N. C., shot an 8-under-par 62 to tie the competitive course record and leap frog from far back into a tie at 201 with Vic Ghezzi, former PGA champ from Kansas City, Kans.

Palmer, rated one of the best putters in the business, showed why today by one-putting 12 holes. He took 24 putts for the complete round.

Ben Hogan Has 204

Ben Hogan, Hershey, Pa., ran into trouble today and had to content himself with even par and a third-round total of 204. Tied with him at this mark are Sam Snead, Hot Springs, Va.; Dave Douglas, Wilmington, Del., first-round leader; Herman Keiser, Akron, Ohio, and Harold Oatman, Norfolk, Va.

Dodds Sets Mile Record

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—National Champion Gilbert Dodds shattered his own world indoor mile record tonight by winning the Wanamaker mile at the Millrose Indoor Track and Field Games in 4:05.3, cutting more than a full second from the previous mark of 4:06.4, set in 1944.

Reggie Pearman of New York University, America's chief Olympic hope at 800 meters, came from behind on the final lap to win the 880-yard run in 1:54.6.

A sellout crowd of 15,000 watched the long-striding national AAU 800-meter champion set his own pace, lumber along in third place through five of the five and a half laps and then turn on the steam to beat his closest rival by three yards.

Tom Carey, sprint ace from the New York Pioneer Club, won the 60-yard dash when Barney Ewell, four-time winner of the event, was disqualified in the final heat for beating the gun twice. Fred Jones, new star from Lincoln University, took second, and Joe Cianciabella, intercollegiate dash champion from Manhattan College, was third. Carey was clocked in 6.2 seconds, only one tenth of a second behind the indoor and meet record.

'Skins Sign Deeks, Rosato, Peebles

The Washington Redskins' roster for 1948 boosted to 17 players yesterday with the announcement that veterans Sal Rosato and Jim Peebles and rookie Don Deeks, had agreed to terms.

Rosato, a fullback, will be starting his fourth season with the local pros and Wingman Peebles will be seeing his third. Deeks, a tackle, came to the 'Skins midway of last season from the Boston Yanks in the same deal which brought Tackle John Sanchez to Washington.

Eleven linemen and six backs have now signed contracts.

In No Hurry to Replace Herb

Phillies Satisfied With Pennock's Setup

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 31 (AP).—There will be no change in the operation of the Philadelphia Phillies because of the death of Herb Pennock nor any haste to replace him as general manager, President Bob Carpenter said tonight.

"After all, Herb built up a fine organization with every man capable of running his own department," Carpenter said at his home here.

"I'll try to keep all departments coordinated for the time being but I am not going all over the country looking for a man to replace him."

The youthful owner of the club, however, declined to say whether he might eventually move a man up in the organization. Neither would he say whether he had any person in mind for the position.

"To be honest, I haven't given the matter much thought," he said. "Herb's death came as so much a shock that baseball has been shoved back in my mind."

Carpenter added, however, that the club would go through with Pennock's plans for the group of officials to attend the annual dinner of the Philadelphia sports writers Monday night.

"That is the way Herb planned it," he added, "and that is the way it is going to be."

Private funeral services with only the immedite family present will be held for the one-time great southpaw pitcher at 2 p. m. Monday in Kennett Square, Pa., Pennock's birthplace and home. His body will lie in state at the American Legion hall in Kennett Square tomorrow night.

Any Old Hook:

Hardheads Are Suckers For Masses

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Haight

THERE ARE ALL SORTS of times—hard, good, standard, daylight, mountain, tulip, cider, etc., including the time the boss walked up quietly behind me, but that's another story.

With time on your hands there's no time quite like Hardhead Time on Chesapeake Bay.

To the uninformed this could mean a convention of the Stubborn Sons of something or another, or a reunion of all the top sergeants, or a get-together of guys with rocks in their heads.

But to the piscatorially minded, Hardhead Time is jackpot time.

Hardhead is a monicker tacked on a fish widely known elsewhere as croaker (etemusitus memiminplurus). These finny fellows have a thick, bony structure in the center of their heads and give out with a croaking noise before they croak.

It isn't on record what name the hardhead has for those who make annual pilgrimages to the bay in his quest, which is just as well because it probably would be out of place in our family newspaper.

Along about the last week in May or the first week in June, the hardhead takes over the upper bay and he is hungrier than a sportswriter at a free banquet.

GIVEN HALF A CHANCE on light tackle, Brother Hardhead will provide a fair battle. However, due to his tremendous appetite, he's a sucker for a hook, rusty or shiny, generally swallowing the barb along with the bait. Once in tow it's almost impossible to lose him.

Hence, he's the victim of the masses. Any man, woman or child able to get a line overboard can haul him into the boat. He isn't partial to expensive gear, Nylon twists etc. Hence he is seldom given a chance and many of the fair-weather fishermen capture him on lines that would dock the Queen Mary and sinkers that could be used for window weights.

Catches up to the 200 mark of hardhead ranging up to four pounds are not uncommon, for he is a 24-hour biter and he is an around-the-clock target.

I'll always remember a certain Sunday morning some years back. The real eestate man who chases me for payments invited me to go fishing at 6 a. m. I passed up the Saturday night card game at the cottage and I was as fresh as a fat daisy when I stopped by the bayside tavern for a cup of coffee and an egg sandwich.

The hardhead fleet had just brought in the all-night parties. And whatta scene!

There was a triple-play in progress . . . from Bar to juke box to slot machine, if you know what I mean.

MEN AND WOMEN—normally doctors, clerks, plumbers, etc.—looked like the survivors of the wreck of the Hesperus. Some were devouring food, others were demanding it, still others were drinking it.

A fellow, who apparently had spent the night wrestling a cork, sidled up to me and blurted, "Don't tell me you're going hardhead fishing. Ain't worth it. I'm going to get my brains knocked out when my wife gets hold of me. Hardheads—phooey on them hardheads! We caught a half barrel, so what?"

Perhaps a little blonde summed it up best by moaning. "I had such a good time and I'vee got such a headache."

But the fishing business at that hour was a two-way affair.

The newcomers were full of pep and enthusiasm. I can't forget one fellow, with that once-a-year fishing look, running around as if he had swallowed a lively ball and asking, "Have we got everything—shrimp bait, lines, ice? When de we leave? I hope they're biting." A definite victim of hardheaditis.

Yes, there's no time quite like Hardhead Time on Chespeake Bay.

Navy Whips Bucknell at Home, 51-36

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 31 (AP).—Navy came to life in the second half today to win its fourth basketball game of the season in trimming Bucknell, 51 to 36, before 1,500 Dahlgren Hall fans.

The first half was exceedingly slow, with both squads missing the net frequently. The tally at the intermission was Navy 16, Bucknell 15.

Three long set shots by John Mosny kept Bucknell in the running for the first ten minutes but Navy got him under control and with Forward Bob Searle setting the pace the Midshipmen began piling up points.

Searle was the leading scorer with five goals and five charity tosses, for a total of 15. Next in line was Bob Claitor, a reserve pivot man who dumped in six field goals for 12. Bob Williams, Bucknell center, was the top offensive man for the visitors with five field goals and one three throw for a total of 11.

Notes—College Flavor:

Hoyas' O'Keefe Leads Nation's Scorers in Shooting Accuracy

CAUGHT ON THE REBOUND: Tommy O'Keefe, the boy who's been trying to make the Hoyas forget Former Capt. Andy Kostecka, leads the Nation's college scorers in shooting accuracy . . . The National Collegiate Athletic Bureau lists O'Keefe first with 66 field goals made in 137 attempts for a .482 percentage . . . In the 18 games Georgetown has split, the Jersey City sharpshooter has scored 178 points for a 9.9 average . . . Kostecka was more prolific, tallying 163 points in 11 games before he was dismissed from the squad . . . American U. has applied for NCAA membership; if accepted, the Eagles won't be able to play transfer students . . . This shouldn't make Athletic Director Staff Cassell unhappy . . . Reggie Crockett and Don Hillock, former W. and L. players, are two of the three first-stringers who walked out on him . . . Georgetown's talk of playing the most rugged basketball schedule of any team in the country wasn't exaggerated . . . The last Dunkel ratings list five Hoya opponents among the top 10 teams—and three of them are in the first four . . . After Kentucky, which the Ripley team somehow misses, comes NYU, Western Kentucky and North Carolina State.

Most college teams, notorious for skimping on trips, could learn a lesson from George Washington's Otts Zahn . . . When the Colonials left yesterday to play William and Mary, Zahn took along two injured men he doesn't think he can use . . . They are Dave Shapiro and Maynard Haithcock, who are going along for the ride . . . It was Haithcock who scored the winning goal in the unexpectedly close 60-58 victory over VPI . . . Talking about that game, Zahn said his team played well but bumped into the Gobblers when they were hotter than they've been all year . . . The GW footballers are plenty interested in the basketball team . . . When a bus was chartered for yesterday's trip to Richmond the gridders took all the vacant seats to go along to root for the team . . . Flucie Stewart's Maryland team, which lost at West Point yesterday, won't play again until next Saturday, when it entertains Washington and Lee at College Park . . . The mid-term examination lull definitely is over for Georgetown . . . The Hoyas go to Boston Tuesday to meet strong Holy Cross in the Boston Garden and on Saturday engage fourth-ranking North Carolina State at Raleigh . . . GW already has received a sound 67-45 thumping from the Wolfpack . . . The Colonials also face a stern test on Wednesday, meeting Seton Hall there. In its other game, this week, GW plays Washington and Lee here . . . American U., riddled by resignations, faces Randolph - Macon here on Wednesday and goes to Pennsylvania Friday and Saturday to meet Scranton and Muhlenberg, respectively.

Kilpatrick, Other Leading Sports Figures Meet Here

Brig. Gen. John Reed Kilpatrick, president of Madision Square Garden, said yesterday that he will attend tomorrow's meeting of sports writers and broadcasters at the Departemnt of Justice.

The meeting, beginning at 10:30 a. m., will be held for the purpose of mapping out plans for 1948 under Attorney General Tom Clark's program to bring more boys and girls into athletics and recreation.

Kilpatrick will join such other nationally-known sports figures at the meeting as Baseball Commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler, Football Commissioners Bert Bell of the National League and Adm. Jonas Ingram of the All-American Conference, and Fred Corcoran, Professional Golfers Association.

Kilpatrick will discuss the part that sports writers and broadcasters can play in a proposed plan to raise funds for food for the athletes of all nations in the Olympic games in London next summer.

Some writers have pointed out that victories by well-fed Americans over undernourished rivals in the Olympic contests would not set so well with other nations.

Chandler, Bell, Ingram and Corcoran will be urged to throw the strength of their professional organizations behind President Truman's recent proclamation setting aside the month of April for a Nation-wide drive in behalf of youngsters.

Early acceptances indicate that from 50 to 75 leading writers and broadcasters from various sections of the country will attend tomorrow's day-long conference.

Mr. Clark, Eunice Kennedy, executive secretary of the general committee working with the Attorney General, and Don Miller, United States district attorney in Cleveland and former Four Horseman of Notre Dame, will represent the Justice Department.

MAAA Arranges Two Benefit Court Games

Two benefit basketball games have been arranged by the Metropolitan Amateur Athletic Association.

The Northwest Hawks and Clifton Liquors will meet at 2 p. m. March 7 at Turner's Arena and another contest between a pair of rivals yet to be named will be held there March 21.

Proceeds will be used to buy sports equipment for teen-age athletes in the greater Washington area.

Army Tops Terps With Spurt, 48 to 44

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 31.—Staving off a brilliant last half rally, the Army basketball team scored a 48 to 44 victory over Maryland in the Field House today. It was the Cadets third victory in eight starts this year. For the Terps, it was loss number eight in 16 games.

After a listless first half in which neither team showed any consistenecy in the scoring column, Army moving along on the impetus of a 23-to-20 lead at the intermission, ran up a 43-to-28 lead midway through the second session. In this time, the Terps attack stalled badly as they were unable to connect with a point for eight minutes.

John Edwards, captain and forward of the Terps, however, came to the aid of his hapless teammates, scoring six straight points in the last five minutes, that whittled the Cadets lead to 46 to 39.

Bernie Smith and Bill Brown added two pointers to another free throw by Edwards and the Terps were within a basket of tying the game at 46-44. But free throws by Milan Mosny and Bud Shepherd in the last 70 seconds decided.

Dick Wagner was high point man for the Cadets with 12. Edwards with 11 tied Shepherd of Army in this department.

King Tackles Young Murray In 'Comeback'

Puggy King, 20-year-old Foggy Bottom flailer who has a habit of belting out opponents—and vice versa—meets Young Lee Q. Murray of Baltimore in one of the three eight-rounders on Monday' Mile-o'-Dimes boxing show at Turner's Arena.

King's last outing in a four-round knockout victory for Jimmy Cooper, touted District featherweight. Previously, King and Cooper fought a draw in one of the most sensational bouts ever held in Washington.

Idle since then—over two months ago, King has shown plenty of zip in his workouts and his handlers believe he'll live up to the bright future predicted for him when he was the AAU's Golden Gloves champion.

Two other eights are on the card, with Red Gaddis, District bantamweight, tangling with Billy Proctor of Harrisburg, Pa., and Arthur Bethea, local middleweight, engaging Walter Rowan of Richmond, Va.

A six-round rematch between Kid Cravette of Washington and the Baltimorean he stopped by a TKO in two last Monday—Toby Reed—also is on the bill. There will be two other fours.

Bears, Giants Benefit Rivals

New York, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The tenth annual Fresh Air Fund football game will beplayed at the Polo Grounds, September 14, with the Chicago Bears, boasting newcomers Johnny Lujack and George Connor, meeting the New York Giants, it was announced today by the New York Herald Tribune, sponsor of the contest.

Contracts were signed two weeks ago but announcement had to be withheld until the date could be confirmed by Horace Stoneham, president of the New York Giants baseball team and operator of the Polo Grounds.

Lujack and Connor, two of Notre Dame's three All-American players during 1947, will be making their Eastern professional debut while the Giants will show newcomers Bill Swiacki of Columbia, Joe Scott of the University of San Francisco and Ed Royston of Wake Forest.

The game replaces the usual contest between the Giants and a squad of college All-Stars which was instituted in 1936. All proceeds of the game will go to the Fresh Air Fund which annually furnishes vacations for underprivileged children.

Badminton Tourney Here Draws Stars

An all-star entry list has been received for the National Capital Badminton Tournament next Saturday and Sunday at the Kensington Armory.

The tournament, sponsored by the Badminton Club of the District of Columbia includes just about every ranking player in the East.

Heading the field is Carl Loveday, Montclair, N. J., who is ranked second nationally in men's singles, third in doubles and seventh in mixed doubles.

Other stars entered are Dick Yeager, New York, former national doubles and mixed doubles titleholder; Pop Hinds, former veteran's champion; Zoe Smith Yeager, who has held every national women's title; Patsy and Clint Stephens, second ranked mixed doubles team in the country, and Barbara Scarlett, Baltimore girl who holds the national junior girl's championship.

Entry blanks and tickets for the tournament are available at the Tennis Shop, 1126 19th st. nw.

Cranford's Boom Ended

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Jackie Cranford boom is as dead today as Terry Young's hopes for a lightweight title bout.

Pudgy Gino Buonvino of Bari, Italy took the wind out of Cranford's sails in a thumping heavyweight bout last night at Madison Square Garden. Young's scheduled February 27 championship bout with Ike Williams was derailed by 19-year-old Paddy DeMarco, in the eight-round semifinal.

As a reward for his convincing performance, Buonvino will meet Joe Baksi, the forgotten man of the heavyweight ranks, in a March 19 bout.

Both Buonvino and DeMarco were 2 to 1 underdogs with the crowd of 16,247 who paid $64,836.

Cranford, a tall blond youngster from Washington, D. C., no longer is talked about as a heavyweight title prospect. For that matter, neither is roly-poly Buonvino. Next on the schedule for tireless Gino probably is a match with Joe Baksi.

Cranford remains a puzzle because he appears to have the makings of a real scrapper. When he boxed Gino, using his superior reach and talented left hand, he had no trouble.

But once the pudgy Italian rushed to the attack, swinging—not punching—both hands to the body, Jackie folded.

Cranford had a bad cut over his left eye and Buonvino's left eye was swollen shut when it ended with a unanimous decision for the invader.

Dave Levin Hits The Rhode Wednesday

Dutch Rhode, Camden, N. J., and Dave Levin, the former titleholder, will headline the Wednesday wrestling show at Turner's Arena. The semi-windup will be between Don Lee, the Texas husky, and Francois Miquette, of Chicago.

18-Year-Old Was Leading High Hurler

Houston (Tex) Jones, 18-year-old Washington boy, who won 17 games and lost none for Calvin Collidge High during the past two years, yesterday signed a contract with the Brooklyn Dodges.

The 5-foot 10-inch 168-pound Jones, who graduated from Coolidge Thursday night, will report for spring training on March 10 with the Greenville, S. C., club of the Class A South Atlantic League. The Greenville camp is at Vero Beach, Fla.

Received Bonus

Jones admitted that he received a "sizeable bonus" for signing the contract tendered yesterday afternoon at his home, 1219 Underwood st. nw., by Rex Bowen, Dodger scout.

Jones, a right hander, helped pitch Coolidge to interhigh baseball championships in 1946 and '47, and in so doing compiled one of the greatest hurling records in District schoolboy history.

In 1946, he pitched a one-hitter in his first game and followed up with two consecutive no-hitters. In the six seven-inning league games he pitched that season, he gave up only 10 hits and struck out 60. His earned run average was 0.93. Last year, he tossed two one-hitters and scored four loop wins.

Paced Marx Team

He pitched for Government Printing Office, American Legion junior champions in 1946, and the Marx Jewelers, winners of the All-America Baseball Association tournament at Johnstown, Pa., last season. During the past three years on the sandlots, he won 23 games and lost four, and pitched four no-hit games.

His pitching successes brought him feelers from the Philadelphia Athletics, New York Yankees, Boston Red Sox and Chicago Cubs. But the Dodgers won the race for his signature by getting him two days after his high school graduation.

DeGroot Begins As Coach July 1 At West Virginia

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 31 (AP). Returning to college gridirons after four years with the professionals, Dudley Sargent DeGroot on July 1 will become the head football coach at West Virginia University.

DeGroot was named last night to succeed William F. (Bill) Kern, who resigned near the end of last season.

University President Irvin Stewart announced DeGroot's appointment after unanimous recommendations by the university athletic council and board of governors.

Dud DeGroot said in California he was "very happy to have this opportunity at West Virginia

DeGroot, former college coach in California, has been unattached since he resigned as coach of the Los Angeles Dons of the All-America Conference in the middle of the 1947 season.

He guided the Washington Redskins to the Eastern Division title of the National Football League in 1945, his second season with the club and in professional football.

Breadon Honored

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Sam Breadon, former owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, has been named an honorary vice president of the National League for life for the first time such an office has existed.

Headed by Leavens

Junior Tennis Development Group Forms

AN OVER-ALL junior development program designed to raise the level of Washington tennis to a degree never before contemplated will begin this spring.

First move in the junior program was inaugurated last summer, when the area's leading tennis stars cooperated with The Washington Post and the District Recreation Department in staging tennis clinics for youngsters.

With a larger program of clinics contemplated this summer, the D. C. Tennis Association has organized a junior development committee under the chairmanship of Don Leavens, one of the District's top players.

This committee will enlist the aid of every amateur and professional tennis player as well as Recreation Department playground instructors in developing any area youngster who shows promise.

* * * *

BOYS AND GIRLS who get their first tennis instruction at The Washington Post-Recreation Department clinics will be watched closely for latent talent. Those who are picked for further development will receive free instruction at area clubs and will be sent to junior tournaments in nearby cities with all expenses paid.

This is the system under which Bobby Riggs, Jack Kramer, Don Budge, Ellsworth Vines and many other top players were developed.

* * * *

LEAVENS HIMSELF is an ideal man for the chairmanship of the new committee. He is a graduate of the Perry Jones School in Southern California, where all of the above named stars learned the game.

First step in getting funds for the Junior Development Committee will be a dance Friday night at the Congressional Country Club. Sponsored by the District of Columbia Tennis Association, admission will be $5 a couple and $3 for single guests.

Tickets are on sale at Bill Shreve's Tennis Shop, 1126 19th st. nw.

GAMES—From P. 1-C

American Teams Trail In Olympics

United States bobsleds marked the opening day's program, the second day of the Olympiad was serene with only a minor flare-up in the hockey controversy.

Recognition May Result

That flareup occurred when the Swiss organizing committee insisted that the hockey competition go on as scheduled, even without Olympic status, despite the fact that the International Olympic Committee ruled it off the official program last night.

Team Standings

Country	18-k.m. Ski Race	500-meter Sp. Skat.	2-man Bobsled.	Ttl.
Sweden	21	0	0	21
Switzerland	0	0	15	15
Norway	0	14½	0	14½
United States	0	10¼	4	14¼
Finland	4	0	0	4
Belgium	0	0	3	3
Great Britain	0	0	2	2
Italy	0	0	1	1
Canada	0	¼	0	¼

(Editor's note—There is no official team championship recognized by the International Olympic Committee. However, the nation which wins the most points on a basis of 10 for first place, 5 for second, 4 for third, 3 for fourth, 2 for fifth and 1 for sixth is regarded as the unofficial team champion.)

That IOC action also resulted in the International Ice Hockey Federation announcing that it would ask the next congress of International Olympic Committees to reverse the IOC decision.

Should the appeal be successful, Secretary John Ahearne of the federation said, the winner of the current hockey competition would be recognized as the Olympic champion. He said the complete hockey schedule "most likely will be played" despite its uncertain status.

Swedes Sweep Skiing

Sweden's aces made the rest of the world look like "nursery slope athletes" by taking the first three places in the 18-kilometer (11.2 miles) cross-country ski race with Martin Lundstroem the individual winner.

Just as a sideline, Sweden took the first four places in the 10-kilometer (6.2 miles) cross-country race which is the first of five events comprising the pentathlon. United States entrants finished far out of the running in these difficult events.

Finn Helgesen, a 27-year-old steel worker from Norway, won the 500-meter (546.8 yards) speed-skating championship in record-breaking time. He was clocked in 0:43.1, three tenths of a second better than the old Olympiad record of 0:43.6 set by Ivar Ballangrud of Norway in the 1936 games.

U. S. Makes Showing

Although they failed to win the title, the speed skating found the Americans making their best showing of the day in the official events.

Kenneth Bartholomew, and Robert Fitzgerald, both of Minneapolis, tied for second place with Thomas Byberg of Norway; Kenneth Henry of Chicago was fifth and Delbert Lamb of Milwaukee, the captain of the United States speed-skating team, tied Frank Stank, a Canadian and Torood Hauer and S. Farstad, both of Norway, for sixth place.

Batholomew, Fitzgerald, Byberg and Henry also broke the old Olympic record for event, the trio tying for second place, being clocked in 0:43.2 and Henry in 0:43.3.

Swiss Dominate

Switzerland dominated the third championship contest, its No. 2 team of Driver Felix Endrich and Brake Friedrich Waller winning the two-man bobsled title with a total time of 5:29.2 for the four heats with the No. 1 Swiss team of Driver Fritz Feierabend and Brake Paul H. Eberhard second in 5:30.4. The No. 2 U. S. team of Driver Fred Fortune of Lake Placid, N. Y., and Brake Schuyler Carron of Ausable Forbs, N. Y.; finished third with a total time of 5:35.3.

The U. S. No. 1 team of Tuffield Latour and Leo Martin, both of Saranac Lake, N. Y., which was in sixth place after the first two heats were run yesterday, faded in the third and fourth heats today and wound up in ninth place.

The hockey fans also saw Czechoslovakia and Switzerland score their second straight victories, the Czechs beating Sweden 6 to 3 and the Swiss overwhelming Italy 16 to 0. Britain, making its first start, defeated Austria 5 to 4.

Mora Rides Brookmeade $21.50 Shot

By Fred Hayden

Hialeah, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—Three long shots—Master Bid, Love Sonnet and Ned Luck—showed the way home as named in today's Bougainvillea Handicap while a stunned crowd of 18,148 saw "The Grass King," Frere Jacques, wind up last on his favorite turf course, even with the sensational Ted Atkinson on his back.

Astride Master Bid, an entry with Sun Herod from Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stable, was the little Panama veteran, Henri Mora, who, only at the start of the current meeting, was bewailing his inability to get more mounts and feeling dejected. Mora has since fared well, particularly on the velvety infield strip. It was his second straight success astride Master Bid, which returned $21.50 and earned a purse of $8950.

Three Lengths Ahead

Mora guided the victor past the wire with three lengths to spare in 2:01 flat for the mile and three-sixteenths distance of the $10,000 added stakes. Love Sonnet, representing C. S. Popovitz, beat Mrs. E. L. Hopkins' New Luck by a length and a half for the place.

Frere Jacques, hero of last season's Bougainvillea and other grass specials in 1946, never was prominent today at slightly less than 6 to 5 odds. Nor was Laddie Sanford's Round View, a star on main courses in stakes competition, which shared top weight of 120 pounds with Miami-owned Frere Jacques of Jacob Sher's stable. Round View, 1946 Flamingo victor, faded from first in the early running to fifth of the 10 starters.

Master Bid stamped himself as a new threat for the $15,000 added mile and a half Miami Beach Handicap, a turf course fixture to be run February 25.

Round View Falters

Round View broke in front but could not shake off the Brookmeade pair during the first half mile, then began to falter. Master Bid assumed command and never was in danger thereafter, Mora having the gelding well in hand through the stretch. Little Henri's face was wreathed in smiles when he returned to the winners' circle.

Love Sonnet, far back early, reached contention on the last bend, as did Ned Luck. The former had the more left for the drive home. Jingle Jangle was fourth.

'Red' Raney Resting

Harvey (Red) Raney, Washington Lion center who was injured in Friday's game with Hershey, was reported resting comfortably last night in Garfield Hospital.

Raney suffered a brain concussion and possible skull fracture as the result of a hard fall in the first period of the contest. He regained consciousness almost immediately and was reported to be alert and in satisfactory condition.

3-Year-Olds Get Break:

Graw Shifts Dates of Stakes; Chesapeake Listed for Apr. 17

Havre de Grace, Md., Jan. 31 (AP). The Chesapeake Stakes, important warmup for 3-year-old horses aiming for the year's honors, heads four features announced today for the spring meting at Havre de Grace, April 12 to May 1.

Dates for the stakes were announced by general manager Charles J. McLennan who had to do some shuffling this year because of a late change in meetings. The second half of Havre de Grace's schedule, also normally in the spring, was postponed until July to reduce competition with Garden State in Camden, N. J.

The Chesapeake on April 17 will be worth $25,000 in added money to the winner of the mile and a sixteenth. The race is arranged so that the leading three-year-olds also will be able to compete in the Wood Memorial at Jamaica on April 24 and the Derby Trial at Churchill on April 24.

The Havre de Grace opening day feature will be the Chesapeake trial over 6 furlongs for $10,000.

Sprnters will be attracted to the Harford Handicap on April 24, normally Havre de Grace's opening feature. It also carries $10,000 in added money.

The final headliner at the meeting will be the Edward Burke Handicap. It's a mile and a sixteenth test for 3-year-olds with a prize of $15,000.

Nominations to the stakes will close Monday, March 15. McLennan said stake dates for the the second Havre de Grace meeting will be set up after a study of the features listed by New Jersey, Delaware and New York tracks.

Across the Nation:

Akron Prexy, Students Say 'Fire Coach'

Akron, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP).—A student fact-finding committee's request that Akron University Football Coach Paul Baldacci be fired received the stamp of approval today by University President H. E. Simmons.

"I reviewed the committee's report," said Dr. Simmons, "and concurred with the recommendation requesting that Mr. Baldacci be relieved of his duties as football coach and be retained as assistant professor of physical education.

"However, final action for Mr. Baldacci's dismissal as football coach must come from the university's board of directors' meeting, which will be held next month," he added.

McKenley Breaks Even

Sydney, Australia, Jan. 31 (AP). Herb McKenley, former University of Illinois athlete, who is touring Australia, broke even in a pair of races today.

McKenley won the 400-meter event in 48.2 seconds, but was beaten by John Treloar in the 100-meter dash that was clocked in 10.9 seconds. Treloar won by a yard and a half.

Evans Delays Answer

Lawrence, Kans., Jan. 31 (AP). Dr. John B. Sutherland, coach and vice president of the Pittsburgh Steelers professional football team, left today for the East without obtaining the signature of Ray Evans, University of Kansas All-America halfback, to a contract.

Evans promised to give his answer to the Steeler offer in about two weeks. The club recently acquired draft to Evans from the Chicago Bears in the national league.

Ruth Due in Miami

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Babe Ruth, recovering rapidly from a cold, will leave for Miami Beach Tuesday at 1:10 p. m. (EST). He will be accompanied by his wife and a male nurse, William Delaney.

The all-time home run king of baseball recently had a 17-day checkup at the neurological Institute. Earlier Florida vacation plans were postponed because of his cold.

Louise Suggs Again Beats Dot Kirby

Miami, Fla., Jan. 31 (AP).—For the fourth straight time in eight months National Amateur Champion Louise Suggs of Atlanta, Ga., defeated her clubmate Dorothy Kirby in winning the sixteenth annual Helen Lee Doherty golf tournament 5 and 4 here today.

Miss Suggs, who won the Doherty in 1945 and 1946, held a 6-up lead over Miss Kirby until the thirty-first hole when with the opportunity to win the match she missed a short putt and Miss Kirby won the hole.

Miss Suggs held a 4-up at the end of the morning 18 holes. She started off the afternoon round by winning the nineteenth and twentieth, but suffered her worst play of the tournament on the twenty-first. Her ball went into a sand trap on the 374-yard hole and her iron shot out bounded into another trap. She ended up with a 6, while Miss Kirby carded a par 3.

However, she came back to make it 6-up again on the twenty-second as Miss Kirby went one over par. Miss Kirby won the next hole, making it 5-up. The two then battled on even terms until the twenty-eighth hole which Miss Suggs captured with par while Miss Kirby went one over.

Miss Suggs in the last eight months defeated Miss Kirby in the finals of the National amateur, the Southern amateur, and the Western open.

The 115-pound Georgia champ, whose coolness and competitive spirit has been compared to that of Ben Hogan, fired a 37, 37—74 over the 6304-yard Miami Country Club course—only two strokes over men's par figures of 36, 36—72, in the morning round.

2 Free Throws Win Game, 2-0

Fulton, Mo., Jan. 31 (AP).—In these days of 100 to 80 basketball scores, the contest between Mexico and Fulton High Schools was unusual, if nothing else. The final score was 2 to 0.

Mexico converted two free throws in the first minute last night and after the second one trotted back to its zone defense. Fulton's players passed the ball around in mid-court. The Mexico players refused to change their defense from a zone to man-to-man.

Business Outlook

By J. A. Livingston

January Thrown to the Bears

The poor stock market. It still can't get anywhere—not even in the wake of all the fine, flowery New Year's forecasts for '48.

Gone is the glow of late December when the market perked up, and augured—so the Wall Street market-letter writers wrote—a strong January trend.

Livingston

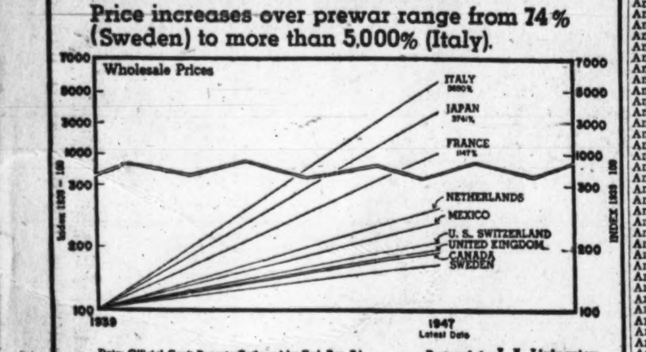
Instead, the Dow-Jones industrial average of 30 stocks is down a half dozen points from its year-end close of 181; the rail issues fared better, down only a point and a half, to 51. Most decidedly, January was thrown to the bears.

The news can't explain it. There's a fine earnings report by U. S. Steel; there were dividend increases; stock splitups, and, to be crass, fuel shortages, which assure heavy development expenditures on oil wells and refineries.

On the other hand, businessmen are feeling anew the squeeze of higher costs, and the average householder is struggling with his income tax. During January, February, and March the Treasury will take in 6½ billion dollars more than it pays out. Men will warn wives: "Don't overbuy. Let's wait till I rebuild my bank balance." That happened last year, remember? Sales slipped off in the first three months of the year, merchants worried, President Truman called for price reductions, and the Newburyport 10% reduction plan had its day or two on the front pages.

INFLATION—BY DEGREES

Price increases over prewar range from 74% (Sweden) to more than 5,000% (Italy).



Data: Official Gov't Reports Gathered by Fed. Res. Bd. — Prepared for J. A. Livingston

But the Nation got a shot in the arm in the spring. The second round of wage increases took effect in steel, autos, and electrical equipment. Workers with more money in their pay envelopes did what you'd expect them to do, spent. Sales improved. Now 1948 certainly shapes up as more of the same. Only this week American Woolen granted a 15c-an-hour pay rise.

Puts Pressure on Stocks

But there's a new factor. Money is getting tight. Dealers at the Northeastern Retail Lumbermen's convention in New York City last week kept harping on the increasing difficulty of getting mortgage money; they feared a credit shortage might stop home-building. Credit now seems to be the main Wall Street bugaboo.

The Administration—and quite properly—wants to prevent expansion of bank credit, which adds to the money supply and bids up the price of goods and services, without increasing production. Another 70-million-dollar rise in bank loans last week indicates the heavy demand for funds. And banks are becoming choosier. They have to. And when banks refuse loans, the burden shifts to the stock market.

Most businessmen own stocks. And when businessmen who run their own stores or factories need money and can't get it from the banks, then they sell securities to raise money to carry out their expansion plans. That's one reason stock prices have been a poor inflation hedge to date. Money that has gone into inventories may have been pulled out, in part, from the stock market.

Why France Devalued

Wall Streeters have foreign companions. Stock prices throughout the world have not reflected the world price inflation. This country (as the chart shows) has fared better than most in keeping wholesale prices under control. That's primarily because we have not suffered from acute shortages of goods. Our pipelines, our retail shops, have had goods.

France is one of the few countries in which stock prices have kept Living costs, even in dollars, are high. There, the problem is to revitalize industry, to get money out of hoarding, to increase confidence in the currency. That explains the recent devaluation of the franc. It was designed to give Frenchmen confidence in money, just as the earlier—and similar—Italian devaluation was intended to restore confidence in the lira.

France is one of the few countries in which stock prices have kept pace with wholesale prices. Apparently, in the rush to escape from the franc, people were willing to buy anything. Even stocks! In contrast, see what happened in the United States, or in Britain, the Netherlands, and Switzerland. People did not accept common shares as an inflation hedge:

Country	Per Cent Gain Since 1939 Stock Prices	Wholesale Prices
France	1050	1050
Britain	19	97
Netherlands	134	161
Switzerland	52	109
United States	31	109

You might argue from that exhibit that people the world over are bearish on capitalism. In the search for an escape from currency depreciation in Europe, people gave stocks the go-by. Stock prices have not gone up with earnings or with the prospect for high demand for goods the world over.

Can it be that people everywhere are saying, "Governments are moving in on private industry, controls will multiply, profits will contract relative to volume"? It's the kind of problem that makes you stop, think, and shake your head. Mine's still shaking. How's yours?

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 31 (AP).—Wheat and corn futures encountered further selling and were weak most of the session today.

There were frequent rallies, however, which pushed the distant deliveries of both grains into higher ground near the finish. Most of the wheat selling apparently was inspired by disappointment over the delay in Government announcement of March export allocations, and more beneficial snow in parts of the winter wheat belt. Weekend short covering and buying by cash interests helped the rallies.

Corn moved downward with wheat, but rallied on short covering and trade belief that distillers may beenter the market for supplies next week. Traders believe distillers will increase their operations Monday, when legal restrictions on grain use will end.

Wheat closed 1 cent lower to ¾ higher, May 2.88¼@2.88; corn was ⅞ down to 2¼ cents up, May 2.52¼@2.52⅜. Oats were unchanged to 1⅛ lower, May 1.21⅜@1.21⅜, and soybeans were down 5 to 8 cents—the latter the daily limit—with March at 4.00.

Commission house selling and a lack of processor demand caused pressure in the soybeans pit.

More snow fell in some parts of the winter wheat belt overnight. This snow covering provides a protection in case of sudden temperature drops.

Traders had expected the Government would announce grain export allocations for March yesterday. When this did not materialize a feeling developed that they might not be announced for another wek. Some traders also believed they might be lower than the February quotas.

The range follows:

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—Cotton futures moved over an irregular range today with final prices 60 cents a bale lower to 5 higher.

At times a fair amount of Commission House buying was evident in new-crop contracts which was stimulated by a wide advance in the mid-January parity prices as compared with a month ago. However, sufficient New Orleans and trade selling made its appearance to satisfy buyers and caused prices to dip below the previous close.

Evening-up operations were evident in the nearby March position.

Quiet trading conditions and the sluggish action of the market was attributed by dealers to a belief that the export cotton situation would remain quiet until there were some new developments in the Marshall Plan.

The range follows:

March	34.70	34.78	34.65	34.76	+ 1

Stocks Gain Hesitantly on Small Volume

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The stock market today emerged from a good recovery week and its first losing January since 1941 with considerable hesitancy in evidence.

Buying throughout the week, still mainly professional, was based partly on the belief that the

WHAT STOCKS DID:	Sat.	Fri.
Advances	235	323
Declines	217	405
Unchanged	208	232

list was entitled to a substantial technical comeback after its lengthy retreat. A big batch of pleasing dividends and earnings was helpful. Doubts regarding murky foreign affairs, a new round of wage demands, outcome of the Marshall program and the course of business later in the year caused numerous customers to hold aloof or trim accounts. Weakness of major commodities served as a restraint.

In the final sluggish session the Associated Press 60-stock composite was up onee tenth of a point at 63.8. For the week there was a gain of 1.3 points but for the month a loss of 1.9.

Grain futures continued to give ground. Bonds were fairly steady.

Commodity Index

New York, Jan. 31.—The Associated Press weighted wholesale price index of 35 commodities today declined to 202.46; previous day, 202.59; week ago, 204.92; month ago, 207.88; week ago, 163.73.

UNCLE SAM SAYS

What would you do if you learned that the worker next to you at the office or in the plant was taking home extra pay every payday and you could do the same? Your Uncle Sam needs only one guess. Well, the Payroll Savings Plan for Savings Bonds actually provides extra pay because it accumulates Savings Bonds for you which pay off at the rate of $4 for every $3 in 10 years. All you have to do is to authorize your employer to hold back a stipulated amount which he will hand back to you in a better form of money—money which earns interest—U. S. Savings Bonds. Savings Bonds are extra pay. For example, if you take part of your pay in Savings Bonds at the rate of $3.75 per week, the Bonds become $2,163.45 in 10 years.

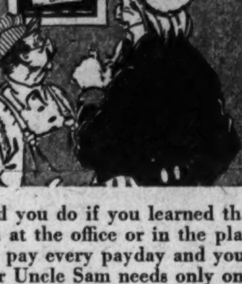
UNCLE SAM SAYS



What would you do if you learned that the worker next to you at the office or in the plant was taking home extra pay every payday and you could do the same? Your Uncle Sam needs only one guess. Well, the Payroll Savings Plan for Savings Bonds actually provides extra pay because it accumulates Savings Bonds for you which pay off at the rate of $4 for every $3 in 10 years. All you have to do is to authorize your employer to hold back a stipulated amount which he will hand back to you in a better form of money—money which earns interest—U. S. Savings Bonds. Savings Bonds are extra pay. For example, if you take part of your pay in Savings Bonds at the rate of $3.75 per week, the Bonds become $2,163.45 in 10 years.

Chamber in Favor

More Taxes Get Backing In Arlington

In a surprise move yesterday, Arlington's Chamber of Commerce called for State enabling legislation to permit the county to level local business taxes.

Paul Hill, chamber secretary who presented the resolution, termed it "unusual for an organization of businessmen to request legislation that will result in additional business taxes."

Legislation to enable Arlington to levy wholesale and retail business, professional and local automobile license taxes is scheduled to be introduced by the county's three-man delegation to the Virginia General Assembly.

Special legislation will be necessary, since Arlington, as a county, now is not permitted to assess such taxes.

The chamber's request noted that Arlington's growth, plus "increasing demands for services and public improvements," require additional revenue.

If Arlington should incorporate as a city, the chamber statement said, its city status would allow it to levy business taxes, but would lose for it money now received from gasoline taxes and the benefit of State highway aid.

The proposed tax authority would permit the assessing of license fees on outside business concerns using Arlington truck routes, Hill pointed out.

He said Arlington businessmen feel that the county government "is operating almost on a hand-to-mouth basis at present," but felt that a further increase in the present $3.25 real estate tax rate would be a "severe detriment" to the area.

A promise to introduce enabling legislation for the business tax has been made by Delegates Maynard Magruder and George Damm, and by State Senator Charles F. Fenwick.

Assessment Unit Named

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 31 (Spl.).—Circuit Judge Leon M. Bazile today named a board of equalization to review real estate assessments for Spotsylvania County. The three members of the board are L. H. Chewning, E A. Haislip and W. C. Harris.

Va. Milk Price Rise Gets Study

Winchester, Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—The State Milk Commission has taken under advisement a petition of milk producers and distributors of the Winchester area for a 2-cents-a-quart milk price increase. The present Grade A price is 18 cents a quart.

The commission was advised here yesterday that bottlers were willing to pay producers higher prices if the boost may be passed on to the consumers. Dariy farmers claimed they were operating almost at a loss due to high feed and labor costs.

Va. Assembly to Meet At Williamsburg

Williamsburg, Va., Jan. 31.—The General Assembly of Virginia will gather in the reconstructed House of Burgesses and the general court here next Saturday to commemorate legislative sessions held two centuries ago.

In resuming a custom started in 1934 but discontinued since 1942, members of the two houses will arrive in the morning by special train from Richmond. The House of Delegates will meet in the Burgesses chamber, and the Senate in the genral court, followed by a joint session.

4 Md. Cities Due to Get $125,000 for Airports

Baltimore, Jan. 31 (AP).—Crisfield, Cambridge, Salisbury and Frederick tentatively are slated to receive $125,000 for airports from State funds, the State aviation commission announced today.

The commission's selections for the grants are subject to the approval of the board of public works, with which it has joint control over the funds appropriated by the 1947 special session of the general assembly. Of the total, Crisfield is to receive $17,500; Cambridge, $27,500; Salisbury, $33,700, and Frederick, 046,300.

Woman Held for Jury In Death of Baby

Roanoke, Va., Jan. 31 (AP).—Buelah Elizabeth Murphy, 26, was bound to the grand jury on a charge of murder after a preliminary police court hearing this morning in the death of a newborn baby which, police testified, she admitted was her child. The baby was found in a suitcase on the bank of Roanoke River January 17.

L. D. Nicolson Named President Of Paper Firm

L. D. Nicolson has been elected president of the District of Columbia Paper Mills, Inc., it was announced yesterday. He had served the company previously as vice president, secretary-treasurer and general manager and succeeded G. L. Nicolson, his father, as president, who had served in that capacity since the organization of the company in 1900.

The directors named G. L. Nicolson chairman of the board. H. T. Nicolson, vice president in charge of production, was appointed secretary-treasurer.

At the annual stockholders meeting on January 26 James M. Johnston of Johnston & Lemon, and J. B. McMullan, an officer of the Riggs National Bank, were elected directors. Other directors were re-elected. The directors held their first meeting of 1948 on Friday and the foregoing changes among the executives. Other officers were re-elected.

Group Purchases Boggs-Buhl Store

Pittsburgh, Jan. 31 (AP).—Boggs & Buhl, the city's oldest department store, has been sold to a group in which local men predominate.

Announcement of the sale of the 79-year-old store was made by Joseph F. Spankle, jr., one of the new owners, who said the purchasing group had entered into an agreement to buy the 90 per cent stock interest in the store held by the Buhl Foundation.

The present management and all employes will be retained.

Besides Spankle, who is president of Dealers Credit Co., members of the group are Elmer E. Bauer, president of Allegheny Trust Co.; Edward T. Chalfant, comanager of the Pittsburgh office of Buckley Bros., investment bankers; Thomas P. Johnson, part owner of the Pittsburgh Pirates Baseball Club, and Otto Marx, jr., and Edwin H. Goehler, partners in Marx & Co., New York investment banking house.

Union Trust To Start Work Remodeling

The Union Trust Co. will start work tomorrow on a $100,000 remodeling and modernizing program for its quarters at 15th and H sts. nw., President L. P. Harrell announced yesterday.

All work will be done without interruption to normal business, Harrell said. The contract was recently signed with the Bank Building & Equipment Corp. of America.

"The completed work," said Harrell, "will represent a complete departure from the superornate and ponderous type of bank architecture. Modern tellers' windows, carpeted floor, lighter color scheme, improved lighting and acoustics will be but a few features of the new bank. These along with other innovations will be instrumental in creating an unusual atmosphere in the bank and result in a more efficient arrangement of the departments for service to the public."

Harrell added that the modernization is being undertaken to assure adequate handling of recently increased business and to prepare for anticipated further gains

C. & P. Outlay At 28 Million Since VJ-Day

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday reported that it had spent more than 28 million dollars through 1947 on plant operation in the 28 months since VJ-Day. At that time C. & P. announced that it was launching a 70-million-dollar program in Washington.

J. B. Morrison, vice president and general manager, pointed out that a "tremendous telephone growth" had taken place in spite of critical shortages of facilities and other handicaps which were the aftermath of wartime demands.

The program, he said, has brought an increase of about 42,000 telephones since July, 1945, when 367,354 telephones were in service here.

Commenting on highlights of the program, Morrison stated:

"The number of major dial equipment installations completed in this period total 4, with nearly 15,400 additional subscriber lines made available to meet service demands. More than 14,000 of these lines were provided when the company placed its $3,300,000 Victor-Twining dial center in Southeast Washington in operation.

"On the personnel side, the number of employes on the company's payroll has increased more than 1500 since July, 1945, with a total of 6300 telephone men and women comprising the C. & P. organization which today serves over 400,000 telephones."

Despite this progress, C. & P. still has a current backlog of 12,000 orders for telephone service. Morrison emphasized that the company's objective is to clear all present applications by the end of this year.

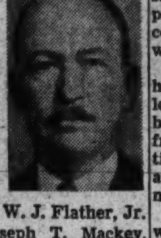
LARGEST BANKS: Riggs National Bank of Washington ranked fifty-eighth in the United States with deposits of $303,875,586 as of December 31, 1947, according to a compilation of the 300 biggest banks by the trade publication American Banker. Other local institutions and their rank included: American Security & Trust Co. 115th with $148,396,083; Hamilton National Bank 192nd with $92,696,860; National Savings & Trust Co. 263rd with $66,463,322, and National Metropolitan Bank 297th with $58,873,456.

ODD LOTS: E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co. announced yesterday the retirment of Ernest H. Hawkins as dircetor of purchases. His successor is Thomas W. Harris, jr . . . The Guardian Life Insurance Company of America reports that its 1947 operations permit increasing the amount set aside for policy dividends this year by 10 per cent and also adding $2,140,000 to policyholders surplus . . . The buyers' market in life insurance will be the topic of a meeting of the Washington-Baltimore Sales Congress on February 26 at the Shoreham Hotel . . . Industrial production in mid-January almost fully recovered to the high levels of previous months, according to the National Association of Purchasing Agents.

CHAIRMAN: Howard E. Thompson, secretary of Columbia Federal Savings & Loan Association, has been appointed general chairman of the banquet committee of the District of Columbia Building & Loan League. The annual affair, to be held at the Mayflower on March 27, will be limited to 750 Members and guests, League President E. L. McAleer announced. Among the guests will be prominent figures from business and Government.

W. J. Flather, Jr., Named President Of Mergenthaler

William J. Flather, jr., banker and head of the real estate firm bearing his name, was elected president of the Mergenthaler Linotype Co. at the recent organization meeting of the company's directors in Brooklyn, it was learned yesterday.



W. J. Flather, Jr.

Flather has been a director of the company since 1939 and a vice president for some years. He succeeds Joseph T. Mackey, who retired as president after long service.

A graduate of Princeton, he is a member of the University, Metropolitan and Chevy Chase Clubs and a former director of the Community Chest.

Martin M. Reed, who came to the company early in the war after serving with the Ordnance Department of the United States Army and who has been secretary, was elected executive vice president.

Steel Output Dips; Cold Cuts Supply of Gas

Pittsburgh, Jan. 31 (AP).—The Nation's steel industry, plagued to the groaning point by material shortages and demands for greater production, today struggled to overcome still another obstacle—the weather.

Normally, blast furnaces, open hearths and finishing mills don't lose a stride in the coldest winter, but since the war years, a spell of frigid temperatures means production losses, furloughs of employes and operation shutdowns in many mills.

It's all caused by supplies of gas which just won't go around and still keep homes warm. And it's the householder who has first call on available supplies.

The gas companies say the mounting demand for gas, partly due to new uses and new customers, has strained processing and transportation facilities to the utmost. To give the situation an ironical twist, it's lack of steel pipe and other steel products that has helped keep the gas firms from satisfying demand.

"The gas companies have done everything to render the best possible service during these emergency conditions," declared a gas executive. "There's not much more we can do."

Steel mills, like other industries, have sought to end theier dependence on gas they need to build up temperatures in re-heating furnaces and other processing facilities. Some have installed oil furnaces but others have held up for fear of shortages in that fuel.

Some plants have increased use of the artificial gas produced in their own plants from tar and as a by-product of coke manufacture. But such sources provide limited supplies and, in the case of the big Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., proved unable to prevent the shutdown of 12 finishing mills in the current cold wave.

An estimated 15,000 men were listed as temporarily idle throughout the Pittsburgh district as the result of gas shortages.

Lumber Shipments

Lumber shipments of 419 mills reporting to the National Lumber Trade Barometer were 9.1 percent above production for the week ended January 24, 1948. In the same week new orders of these mills were 17.7 per cent above production. Unfilled order files of the reporting mills amount to 55 per cent of stocks.

Golden Orator, Like Elder Churchill

Randolph Loses Overcoat On Lecture Tour But Nets Two Orchids, Plus Whisky

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

I HAD not seen Randolph Jerome Churchill since the Duke of Windsor's wedding. Mr. C., one of the few honored with an invitation to the actual ceremony, was present as a friend, never typed a syllable for his paper, the Daily Mail.

R. J. CHURCHILL

Slim, blond and, in the eyes of this humble American reporter, somewhat supercilious, he was attired in a frock coat, an impressive garment, brand new, an elegant fashion he was endeavoring to revive. Last week, in Washington, Mr. Churchill, in well worn tweeds, was blond, pillowed with a comfortable tummy and, in a muted way, extraordinarily mellow.

In the intervening decade he has lived a life which would have exterminated anyone unendowed with the indestructible Churchill constitution. His wartime activities include parachuting into the Balkans, hiding out in caves with Tito's boys (and just escaping Nazi capture by a hair's breadth), fighting guerilla-fashion with Partisans in northern Yugoslavia.

A Rolling Stone

SINCE the war he has been on a roving assignment. Though constantly surrounded by the great and the interesting, his life is practically a lonely succession of hotel rooms no cozier than a rolling stone. He lectures about eight months of the year, here, in Australia, New Zealand, Hawaii, sometimes three times weekly, sometimes oftener. Right now he's scarcely back from the Antipodes, but, after a dip to Florida, Havana, Baltimore, he'll wing to Hawaii again. He's been in every one of our States except the two Dakotas, which, Mr. Churchill cracked, he had heard were uninhabited.

Traveling by plane, train, driving his own car, he knows this country better than most Americans. He gives two lectures—(1) Europe, (2) the British Empire—enjoys answering questions and, in the opinion of some people, is a greater orator than his father, who, incidentally, he always refers to as "Mr. Churchill."

Randolph wouldn't lecture unless he believed he was doing good. The basic idea he plugs is that free nations must remain united or forfeit liberty. Three times a week he turns out a syndicated column called "World Events." It's an accomplished job, perhaps too intellectual for the average newspaper reader, but it would come to life if it could be broadcast by Churchill.

Summers he returns to his house in London, but "pops over" to France, India—anywhere—at the drop of a news story, conference or world-shaking political event. At present he's unmarried but completely devoted to his small son, Winston.

Looks Too Well Fed

ASKED whether he picked up loot as a result of his personal charm while lecturing, Mr. Churchill reported sadly "no dice." His overcoat was stolen in Australia. His single present, from a long-time feminine friend, was two orchids taped to a bottle of whisky! "They don't even offer me food packages," he mourned. "I look much too well fed!"

His sole diversion seems to be kidding officials. He belongs to a nebulous organization called the Teasers' Club, whose members gleefully work out on overofficious officials of every variety.

Finally, Randolph Churchill claims he's too busy for book writing, but his intimates believe that some day he'll author the best seller of best sellers—a biography of his father, Winston Churchill.

WHEN the first snow of the season fell on Washington it was welcomed by Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador, and Mme. Thors, wife of the Minister of Iceland. Mme. Thors dug out her tasseled stocking cap, her ski boots and skis and took off to the slopes out Massachusetts ave. way

THEY dress like this in Norway as they go skimming over ice blue hills. Mme. de Morgenstierne first learned to ski in Canada, her native land. In Washington when there's opportunity she goes across the street to Observatory Hill

Thundering Herd Sponsors Dance At Fort McNair

By Norma Foust

ANOTHER Cotillion sponsored by the West Point Class of '24, "The Thundering Herd," is on the books for Saturday night. This dance—number three of the season's series of six—will take place at Fort McNair.

The guests, including juniors of all branches of the service, will be received by Col. and Mrs. Joseph Morris, Col. and Mrs. Armistead Mead and Col. and Mrs. Emerson Cummings.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. William Richardson and Col. and Mrs. R. V. Lee have offered to chaperone and the junior hostesses and hosts will be Misses Ellen Anding, Janet Richardson and Janet Packard, and Harry Packard, Rodney Smith and Oren Lewis.

Included on the board of arrangements for the party are Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William H. Arnold, Col. and Mrs. James Anding, Col. and Mrs. Joseph Morris and Col. and Mrs. Jesse Wells.

Colonel and Mrs. Anding will have an open house after the dance for approximately 40 young friends of their daughter, Ellen, and Mrs. Robert Sherr will be hostess at a dinner beforehand for 12 friends of her son, Bob.

ADMIRAL LOUIS E. DENFELD, Chief of Naval Operations, and Mrs. Denfeld were honored at a cocktail party Friday evening at the Army-Navy Country Club given by the officers of the CNO office.

All flag officers in the Washington area were invited and special guests included Vice Admiral and Mrs. A. W. Radford, Vice Admiral and Mrs. J. D. Price, Vice Admiral and Mrs. D. B. Duncan and Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Wellborne, jr.

This evening congressional and Navy friends—about 70 in all—of the Denfelds' will drop in at the home of Comdr. and Mrs. H. B. Byrd at another cocktail party honoring the popular Navy couple.

Some of those the Byrds have invited are Representative Francis E. Walter, Representative and Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, Representative and Mrs. A. S. Monroney, Vice Admiral and Mrs. William M. Fechteler, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Thomas L. Sprague, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles Wellborne, jr., and Vice Admiral and Mrs. A. W. Radford.

MISS Jeanne Patricia Hoover's wedding date draws close and parties for her and her fiance, Lieut. Col. James Franklin Mears, USAF, continue to crowd the calendar. The pretty brunette daughter of Vice Admiral and Mrs. John Howard Hoover will be married Saturday.

Misses Betty and Emily Arnold, postdeb daughters of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William H. Arnold, gave a kitchen shower and luncheon yesterday for the young bride-elect. And later in the day Col. and Mrs. R. R. Gideon, USAF, feted the couple at a cocktail party at their home. Colonel Gideon will be one of Colonel Mears' ushers.

Other guests for the shower at the Arnolds' quarters at Fort McNair were Misses Helen Hereford, Edwina Pou Wadden, Ann Gillespie, Monica Gaillard, Frances Dear, Jane Lingo, Jacqueline Hoover, Dorothy Groesbeck, Virginia Collins, Joan Nichols, Maria Helena Julio, Helen Guest and her guest, Totsy Tucker.

Today Miss Hoover and her fiance will be honored at a breakfast at the Dorchester House to be given by Miss Claire Foster, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Edwin Dorsey Foster.

Mrs. Percy G. Spilsbury has planned a small dinner party for the soon-to-wed couple for Thursday evening at the Shoreham Hotel.

MRS. WILLIAM MURPHY, the former Helen Essary, wife of Captain Murphy, USN, will be Mrs. Albert Warner's honor guest at a small luncheon tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel. Others to attend are Mrs. Omar Bradley and her sister, Mrs. Wayne Stewart, Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Lawrence Spivak, Mrs. William Knowland and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin.

Mrs. Bradley and her sister attended the Founders Day luncheon yesterday of their college sorority, Kappa Alpha Theta. And the sisters from Missouri were the guests in whose honor Mrs. Charles Ross entertained for luncheon last Wednesday. Mrs. Stewart, who hails from Portland, Oreg., will be the Bradley's guest through most of this month.

Diplomatic Circling

By Elizabeth Maguire

ONLY a few small parties loom on midwinter horizons of the diplomatic doldrums. News comes mostly from out-of-town or from those about to leave town.

The Commercial Counselor of the Swiss Legation, Werner Fuchss, has been called home for consultation, and, with Mme. Fuchss, is sailing Tuesday on the Queen Mary. The counselor and his wife plan to get in some good skiing while in Switzerland, and be back here before Easter.

Last Friday afternoon they entertained at a cocktail party at their house on Albemarle st. Guests were greeted at the door by their two daughters, Cecile, 10, and Adelaide, 9. Dressed in blue-aproned native costumes with black bonnets on their heads.

Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Swiss Minister, was ranking guest. Others included the Charge d'Affaires of Portugal and Senhora de Rocheta, the French Counselor and Mme. Wapler, the Commercial Counselor of the Swedish Embassy and Mme. Belfrage, the First Secretary of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Schneeberger, M. and Mme. Jean Delattre-Seguy, George Baker and Paul Jolles.

MRS. MAKIN, wife of the Australian Ambassador, is leaving Wednesday for a two-month visit in Australia. Her son, Lloyd Makin, who is going home to enter the statistician's branch of the Treasury Department, is making the journey with her.

There will be no party at the Egyptian Embassy on February 11 in honor of King Farouk's birthday. This is due to the absence of the Ambassador and Mme. Hassan, who are wintering in Florida.

Heading South tomorrow from the Swedish Embassy will be the Ambassador and Mme. Eriksson, the First Secretary and Mme. Rydbeck, the First Secretary, Sverker Astrom, and Hans Skol, Attache. Though they are not going in a group, all are headed for sunny parts of Florida.

THE Agricultural Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray are expected back at the Embassy the middle of next month, after a long holiday in Spain. Another couple expected in town next month is Col. G. E. Prior-Palmer and his bride, lovely Lady Doreen, daughter of Lord Linlithgow, former Viceroy of India.

From Saudi Arabia comes news that the walls of Jidda have been knocked down to modernize the city. The job was done in three days by an American traction firm. The twentieth century is creeping up on the town, what with paved streets, electric lights and running water being installed.

Although as many as 26 Saudis left New York in one plane after the Palestine decision, the fact that they have purchased the old Rockefeller house on Fifth ave. is a sign they are not burning their bridges behind them.

The Ambassador of Burma and Mme. So Nyun entertained Friday afternoon at cocktails to introduce the new Second Secretary of the Embassy, U Tin Maung.

Presents Priceless Collection

Mrs. Booth Comes to See Preview Of Treasures at National Gallery

By Marie McNair

HERE to see her treasures in their new home is Mrs. Ralph Harman Booth of Detroit, who will be a guest at the preview at the National Gallery of Art tonight.

Very much an individualist, Mrs. Booth is a handsome woman with fair hair, a trim figure and a flair for clothes. She has just presented to our newest art institution a priceless collection of Tintorettos, Bellinis and Cranachs, all now hanging in the gallery's marble halls. And in making this generous gift to the people she is parting with some of her finest works, gathered over a period of 40 years.

One—a Tintoretto's Madonna and Child—made headlines recently when it was subjected to the X-ray, was discovered to have a delicate background of cherubs and stars which for years had been covered with a heavy overlay of drab paint.

Before the official opening this evening, Mrs. Booth will dine with the Director of the Gallery, David Edward Finley, and Mrs. Finley in their Georgetown home.

The Danish Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffmann will be dinner guests and also in the company will be Justice Frank Murphy, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Snyder, Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, Senator and Mrs. Homer Ferguson, Gen. Sir William Morgan, Mrs. Booth's son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Lord Booth; her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Vogel of Milwaukee; Miss Esther Booth and Mrs. Richard Joy, of Detroit, all here for the gala reception.

PARTY-giving Perle Mesta gave a buffet supper last night that was really something to write home about. Mrs. Truman and Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, took bows before 250 members of the Association of Women Broadcasters, and adding luster to the occasion were Miss Margaret Truman and wives of Cabinet members. Mrs. Olin D. Johnston, wife of the Senator, and Mrs. Charles F. Brannan, whose husband is Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, were also in the distinguished company. They are vice chairmen of the Jefferson-Jackson Centennial Dinner committee of which Mrs. Mesta is co-chairman with Wilson Wyatt of Kentucky.

MRS. MESTA

Mrs. John W. Snyder, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, was a guest last night, and from the Cabinet circle also were Mrs. Tom Clark, Mrs. Jesse Donaldson, Mrs. Julius Krug, Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Mrs. Lewis Schwellenbach. Mrs. Kenneth Royall, wife of the Secretary of the Army, was there and Miss Drucie Snyder, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Small tables had been set up throughout the spacious rooms and the United Nations was the motif for both decorations and the unusual food served from five buffet tables. "John Bull" presided at one dispensing English dishes. French, Chinese, Russian and American specialties were passed from the others, by maids costumed in native dress of the four countries. Flags and flowers in the national colors decorated the tables. At Mrs. Truman's table where the Cabinet ladies were also seated, there was a very special decoration—which will appear again at the head table for the Jefferson-Jackson dinner at the Mayflower on February 18.

In a series of six tableaux, the Republican elephant and the Democratic donkey engaged in a boxing match. Who wins? Why, the donkey, of course, although Republicans tried unsuccessfully last night to put the elephant on its feet again.

MRS. J. J. MACK, who's getting ready to leave for Florida, entertained at a supper party last evening at her home on Forest lane, and yesterday afternoon Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner gave a cocktail party for young people in honor of Kathleen Rowe, debutante daughter of Mrs. Thomas Dugan. This was a party which had been planned for the holiday season, but Mrs. Miner was obliged to make a trip to California at that time.

The Finnish Minister and Mme. Jutila and their daughter, Vappu, were in the gay gathering at Mrs. Mack's house last night, and others were the Ambassador of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, the Turkish Ambassador, Huseyin Ragip Baydur; the Minister of Iceland and Mme. Thors and their daughter, Margret; Senator and Mrs. Owen Brewster, Camille Chautemps and Mme. Chautemps; Judge and Mrs. George Neilson, Judge and Mrs. Walter Casey, the former Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, Baron Adolph Giesl von Gieslingen.

Others there were Representative and Mrs. Eugene Cox, Mrs. Vincent Miles, Arman Bastin of Belgium; Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. John Shields, Dr. William Spence, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Dr. and Mrs. Tayloe Perry, Dr. Norman Scala, Mrs. Hardin Arledge, Elmer W. Pratt, Mrs. Cleveland Newton and her son Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. Russell H. Hyde, Dr. Paul Fleming Holland, Mrs. Katharyn Fuqua and her daughter, Katharyn, and Mr. and Mrs. V. N. Stankoff.

Pretty Kathleen Rowe wore a bouffant gown of ivory moire for her party yesterday, later changed into silver lame for the dinner dance which her sister deb, Evelyn Maddox, gave at the Chevy Chase Club. Some of the younger set at one or the other of the two parties were Miss Beatrice Blair, Senoritas Anita and Teresa Baraibar, Senorita Elena Ivanissevich, Miss Sophie Finkenstaedt, Miss Helen Bowdoin, Miss Louise Leahy, Misses Anne and Helen Harrison, Kent Ives, Frank Addison, Charles Maddox jr., John Gill, Charles Kappler, Carroll Morgan, Don Winslow, John G. Wilmer and Neil Carruthers.

Forrestal to Speak

The United Armed Services will invade the Women's National Press Club at its luncheon on February 4, Presidential Room, Statler Hotel, when Secretary of Defense James Forrestal will speak.

This will be the first presentation to the public of the national defense picture since the law setting up unification, for present will be Secretary of the Army and Mrs. Kenneth C. Royall, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. John L. Sullivan, Undersecretary of the Air Force and Mrs. Arthur S. Burrows.

Present, too, will be Gen. Omar N. Bradley, newly appointed Army Chief of Staff, and Mrs. Bradley; Gen. Clifton B. Cates, Commandant of the Marine Corps.

Others will be chiefs of the armed services information sections—Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, representing the Army, and Mrs. Parks; Capt. Ernest M. Eller of the Navy, and Mrs. Eller; Brig. Gen. W. E. Riley of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Riley; Col. W. E. Nuckols, Air Force, and Mrs. Nuckols; Capt. Robert W. Berry, assistant to the Secretary of Defense for public relations, and Col. Mary Hallaren, director of the WAC, and Capt. Joy Bright Hancock, director of the WAVES.

Guests of club members will be numerous high ranking officers and their wives.

Annapolis Holds March of Dimes Ball

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 31.—The annual March of Dimes campaign in Annapolis was brought to a successful conclusion with the March of Dimes Ball tonight at Carver Hall. The ball climaxed several weeks of activity, which opened with a talent show at the Annapolis High School. In addition to dancing, a card party and auction, sponsored by the women's groups under direction of Mrs. Donato Florestano, offered entertainment. Mrs. Wilbur Shawn was in charge of the bridge tables and Mrs. Norbert Aubrey of "500." C. Carroll Lee was auctioneer for the various articles sold at the ball, and Miss Bessie Mattie of the Tau Omicron Phi sorority was in charge of the sorority members collecting prizes for the occasion.

Naval Academy Band Musician Martin De Mey's "March of Dimes March," written to forward the local campaign this year, may become the nationally adopted march for the annual campaigns, according to an announcement by Harry S. Kenchington, county director of the drive.

Dr. and Mrs. Austin R. Frey entertained at their home Friday at tea for students of Dr. Frey in the ordnance department of the postgraduate school and their wives. Guests included members of the Army, Navy and Air Force and present was Lieut. Col. Albert G. Wells, jr., USA, who is head of the group, and Mrs. Wells.

Mrs. Herman A. Spanagel, wife of Captain Spanagel, superintendent of the P. G. School, presided at the tea table and Mrs. Cunningham assisted.

Capt. James P. Compton, USN, ret., and Mrs. Compton, of Crab Creek, entertained at Alumni House on Saturday afternoon in honor of their son-in-law and daughter, Lieut.-Comdr. and Mrs. Charles L. Fears, who will be leaving by plane on February 2 for Turkey. Commander Compton, who was graduated from the Naval Academy with the class of 1941, will serve on the U. S. Naval Mission in Turkey.

Comdr. Mark St. Clair Ellis, USN, ret. and Mrs. Ellis received the guests at the weekly cocktail party held Sunday evening at Alumni House.

Invitations have been issued for the debut reception of Miss Sibyl Vincent Godfrey which will be given by her grandmother, Mrs. Arthur Burneston Owens, Saturday, February 7, from 4 to 6 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Owens.

Miss Godfrey is the daughter of Capt. Vincent H. Godfrey, USN, ret., and Mrs. Godfrey, former residents of Annapolis, now living in Pittsburgh. She was formally presented in Pittsburgh at the Cinderella Cotillion Thanksgiving Eve.

Comdr. Paul Miller, USN, ret., and Mrs. Miller have returned to their home following a visit to Washington as the guests of Rear Admiral T. S. Combs, deputy chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, and Mrs. Combs.

On Friday evening the Millers entertained at their home at a small dinner party in honor of Capt. and Mrs. Elwood T. Tillson, who left the following day for the West Coast.

Lieut. and Mrs. Thomas J. Cummings have left for Boston, where they will spend several days as the guests of Lieutenant Cummings' aunt, Mrs. Thomas Prior of Lawrence. They will then return here for several days before going on to Patuxent, where Lieutenant Cummings will report for sea duty.

The Cummings, who have had duty here for the past four years, were much entertained in an informal manner before their departure. Comdr. and Mrs. Joseph A. McHenry gave them a small cocktail party and dinner last Sunday evening. Appetizers and cocktails were served at the McHenry's North Severn quarters and the group then dined at the North Severn Officers' Mess.

Comdr. Delow R. Kervin, USN (DC), Mrs. Kervin and Comdr. Harry H. Fridley, also of the Dental Corps, and Mrs. Fridley were hosts on Friday evening at a party for other members of their corps and their wives.

The group first dined at a Baltimore restaurant and then returned to the Eastport home of the Kervins for an evening of movies and talk. Football highlights of the past season were among the films shown.

From Washington comes word of the birth of a daughter to Capt. and Mrs. Donald F. Krick of Alexandria, Va. The infant has been named Margaret. Mrs. Krick is the former Miss Juliet Norman of Annapolis, daughter of Mrs. Julia Norman and granddaughter of Mrs. Ryland D. Tisdale.

Wives of the officers attached to the Department of Seamanship and Navigation, Naval Academy, met Thursday at the North Severn Officers' Mess for a luncheon gathering. Mrs. F. D. Michael and Mrs. William O. Spears were in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Ridgely P. Melvin of Aberdeen, South River, left Wednesday for Bermuda, where she will spend several weeks as the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Elliott H. Burwell, former residents of Annapolis. Mr. Burwell is now engaged on an engineering project in Bermuda.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Navy Man, Hungry for Family Life, Faces 11 More Years at Sea Before Reaching Full Retirement Age; Should He Quit or Stick?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a Navy man with a fairly nice rating. In 1949 I will have nine years in the service, which leaves only 11 more years to go for retirement with pension.

I am married and have a 3-year-old daughter and my wife is expecting another child in June. Both of us enjoy a nice home, but with the constant moving about that is part of the Navy life it seems impossible to have one. Also I think that a man, to be a good husband and father, should be with his family and not at sea or in a foreign country.

Therefore the question bothering me is whether it's worthwhile to work for retirement security at the expense of forfeiting my real desire, which is to have a nice home and be with my family in the here-and-now, being a real father to the children. Should I get out of the Navy at my earliest opportunity? I would appreciate your slant on the question. Please answer soon. F. B.

To Have Meaning, Life Needs Roots

DEAR F. B.: "Mighty oaks from acorns grow," the old saying goes; but the acorn to manifest in full its life-potentials must take root somewhere and have steady reciprocal exchange with elemental nurture from unchanging sources of supply,—and so with man in relation to the human environment, it seems to me.

The adult's existence is more shadow than substance unless he has experienced marriage and parenthood. But the fact of getting married, of establishing legal title to a chosen mate, or the feat of begetting children, doesn't approximate real relatedness on the unconscious level—wherein is the treasure house of human capacity to give and receive the whole range of satisfactions that make life joyous and meaningful and overflow in socially productive effort.

Real or positively intermingled relatedness on the unconscious level develops only in consequence of intimately shared daily living over long periods when mutual interest is high, or common purposes call for unified support; or again, when needs for close emotional ties are most urgently felt, as in the ascending years of life —i. e., from birth to maybe 40 years of age or so.

Waste of Years To Roam Oceans

MAN'S LIFE, for better or worse, for richer or poorer in this deeper sense, is the sum of his daily experiences; and if your real desire—eminently sound, by the way—is to be a family man, then surely it were a waste of the next 11 years to spend them roaming the seven seas and foreign countries, while your wife makes shift for the most part without you, and your children by the terms of such rearing become instinctively as detached towards you as towards any "outsider."

Where there's a will, there's a way, you know. And inasmuch as you have the intestinal fortitude to stay with the Navy against your preference for another 11 years, if necessary to provide long-term security for your family, then obviously you've got what it takes to build up comparable security by other means, using personal initiative, if you quit the Navy for landlubber employment at the earliest opportunity. At any rate, that's my slant. M. H.

Plan Dinner Dance At Army-Navy Club

Submarine officers stationed in Washington and this area, and their wives, will give a dinner dance at the Army-Navy Country Club on Friday evening, February 13. Capt. O. D. Yarbrough is senior officer on the committee.

Miss Lisette Littlehales entertained at a dinner Friday evening before the Friday Supper Dance at the Sulgrave Club.

DAR to Equip Hospital Room As Memorial

District of Columbia Daughters of the American Revolution will equip a room in the new George Washington University Hospital in memory of the late Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins, noted DAR and educational leader, of this city. In order to increase the memorial fund, the local chapters will sponsor a tour of the historic Larz Anderson House, 2118 Massachusetts ave. nw., February 19, 3 to 7 p. m.

Now the home of the Society of the Cincinatti, the magnificent mansion houses rare articles collected by Captain Anderson during his extensive travels abroad.

As the new George Washington Hospital neared completion, it was Mrs. Hodgkins who suggested that the District DAR chapters contribute money for a room to be marked as a gift from the society. After her death last September a motion was made that the words be added, "In Memory of Howard L. Hodgkins."

Mrs. Hodgkins was well known in educational circles during the many years that her husband was dean and later president of George Washington University. After his death in 1931, she continued actively in the Women's Board, Columbian Women and the Board of Lady Managers of the Hospital.

Founder of the D. C. Branch of the First Families of Virginia, Mrs. Hodgkins also was a charter member of the National Society, Daughters of the Barons of Runneymeade where she held many national offices. In the DAR she held many State and national offices as well as in the National Society, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America.

Symphony Society's Campaign Seeks $165,000 Sustaining Fund

FOR the next fortnight a large portion of Washington society will be giving the bulk of its best efforts to raising the $165,000-goal of the National Symphony's eighteenth sustaining fund campaign, which will be launched Tuesday with a luncheon for committee chairmen and workers at the Mayflower.

Principal speaker at the "kickoff" luncheon will be Mrs. John Lodge, wife of the Republican Representative from Connecticut and a distinguished practitioner and sponsor of the arts in her own right. The former Francesca Braggiotti, Mrs. Lodge is a member of the famous family that has been active in musical and dancing circles for two generations.

Mrs. Truman will be seated with Mrs. Lodge at the head table, along with Mrs. George Mesta, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, member of the National Symphony's board of directors and of the drive's steering committee; Edward Burling, jr., chairman of the National Symphony's sustaining fund drive, and Mrs. Theodore Dominick, drive vice chairman.

From the luncheon, some 650 volunteer workers will go forth to canvass Washington for contributions, the extent of which will determine the future of the National Symphony. Campaign Chairman Burling insists that there can be no orchestra next season if the full $165,000 goal is not reached during the campaign.

Organized in 10 committees to reach all phases of community life, the workers will function under the following chairmen: Mrs. John H. McCormick; Air Forces; Mrs. Gordon R. Young, Army; Mrs. E. C. B. Danforth, jr., assisted by Mrs. William M. Robinson, vice chairman; Mrs. John S. Graham, education, assisted by Mrs. H. Russell Bishop, Catholic schools (private and parochial); Mrs. M. Quinn Shaughnessy, colleges and universities; Mrs. Slocum Kingsbury, private schools; Miss Cecilia P. Dulin, public schools; Mrs. Delmer S. Fahrney, Navy; Mrs. Charles Bittinger, Orchestra Guild.

The residential committee, inaugurated last year, is headed this year by Mrs. Paul Magnuson. Dividing Washington into six parts for the purposes of effective solicitation, Mrs. Magnuson has appointed Mrs. Robert Sher to head Unit I, Mrs. Warren S. Ege to head Unit II, Mrs. DeForest Van Slyck as head of Unit III, Mrs. Frederick B. Lee for Unit IV, Mrs. W. Smith Bowman for Unit V, and Mrs. Benjamin W. Thoron for Unit VI.

Under the general chairmanship of Mrs. Robert LeFevre, the Suburban Committee will function in Alexandria through Mrs. Edward Hulburt, in Arlington through Mrs. George Terborgh, in Fairfax County through Mrs. John Joss, in Montgomery County through Mrs. B. Peyton Whalen, and in Prince Georges County through Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts.

The chairman of the Government Committee has not yet been announced, while the nonsoliciting Publicity Committee is headed by Sam Cook Digges, assisted by Harwood Martin and Mrs. Henry Liebschutz.

Arrangements for Tuesday's initial lunch, as well as for the report luncheons on February 12 and February 20, when the orchestra drive ends, are the responsibility of a committee headed by Mrs. Leverett Saltonstall.

Diplomatic Members Plan to Organize

Commercial and financial counselors and attaches of various foreign embassies and legations met at the United Nations Club recently, the gathering serving as a preliminary meeting for a club which intends to hold regular sessions every month.

A small group of men who felt that members of commercial and financial branches of the diplomatic services in Washington should have a better opportunity to know each other and to discuss topics of common interest conceived the idea of this club. It is expected that the first formal meeting will be held on March 4, 1948.

OVER coffee cups at Mrs. De Forest Van Slyck's luncheon, papers and notebooks come out to map details of the National Symphony drive in which these ladies will have a part. At left is Mrs. Alexander Hawes; center is Mrs. Daniel Partridge 3d, and Mrs. Van Slyck, right, chairman of unit 3 of the residential committee. The annual "kick-off" luncheon for the campaign will be held on Tuesday at the Mayflower

Expert's Way to Polish Brass

New York.—Want to clean your brass and copper fixtures, furnishings and ornaments, so the finish will last for years?

A veteran polisher of the building service squad at brass-famed Rockfeller Center gives this advice:

"Go down to your drugstore and buy 15 cents worth of oxalic acid. Put the powder in a quart jar. Fill with water. Mix well. Dip your cleaning cloth into this mixture and then into some powdered pumice stone—you can get this at a drugstore. Rub the cloth briskly over your metal, then wipe with a clean cloth. Your metal should gleam.

"Then dip another clean cloth into clear lacquer—make sure it is lacquer—and pat it over the metal's surface, covering it completely. Don't use a brush.

"Now the finish should last three or more years . . . without polishing."

"Oh, yes," he adds, "when after years, the finish does become dull again, use a little paint remover to take off the old lacquer, and repeat the entire process.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

We recently purchased a lovely sofa covered in rose-colored kid mohair. It is entirely upholstered, with none of the wood frame showing. It was described by the salesman as being in the "Regency Duchess" style. The back of the sofa is straight across; the arms are curved and tufted; the two pillows are filled with goose down, and the legs, which are hidden from sight by the silk boucle fringe on the bottom, are of plain mahogany. We would like to know what type chairs, extension table, decorative accessories, etc., would most appropriately complement this sofa and be most in keeping with the period. R. M. S.

Regency furniture is English furniture of the early eighteenth century. The word "Duchess" probably is a style name for your particular sofa given to it by the manufacturer. It is considered proper by decorators to combine styles of furniture made during the same period in different countries. Therefore, with a Regency sofa you could use Empire, Duncan Phyfe, Sheraton, Hepplewhite and the Louis XIV, XV and XVI. If you wish to use the dark woods in your furniture choose from Sheraton, Regency, Duncan Phyfe, Hepplewhite and, if you want light woods, or fruit woods choose French furniture.

Please give me a list of the foods containing iron or advise me where such a list may be obtained. L. Y. F.

The following foods are excellent sources of iron: yolk of egg, liver, heart, kidneys, green leafy vegetables, molasses, dried fruits such as prunes, raisins and peaches, whole grain breads, cereals and lean meats.

While sitting in a blue Mexican chair I fell against a black lacquer buffet. The blue paint pushed into or scraped off on the lacquer in lines down both drawers. How can I remove these lines without disturbing the lacquer, or failing this, how could the drawers be relacquered without first removing the finish so that these lines will not show? S. K. E.

There is a chance, if the hard surface of the lacquer isn't broken, that the blue paint can be removed by rubbing with a cloth dampened with turpentine. If this doesn't remove all of the paint—since your furniture is black and you do not have the problem of matching colors—perhaps you can touch up the damaged spots. Wrap very fine steel wool around a match stick and rub the lines, thus removing all of the blue paint. Continue rubbing to smooth the surrounding surface. Now, apply black lacquer to these places with a very small brush. If the lines are still conspicuous after this patching, a fresh coat of lacquer can be applied to the piece.

I sent a pair of suede gloves to the cleaner, and was very disappointed with the results. Can either you or any of your readers give me information on how to clean them at home? J. J.

A reliable dry cleaning establishment should surely do a better job cleaning suede gloves than can be done at home. If the establishment to which you took the gloves didn't do a good piece of work, return the gloves to them and ask them to repeat the job or take the gloves to another cleaner. The most which can be done with suede gloves at home—unless they were sold you as washable—would be to rub dry cleaning powder into the soiled spots, allow to stand 30 minutes and brush away.

I hung a flowered lastex bathing suit on a hanger to dry and the hanger happened to be rusty and left a rust stain on the bathing suit. How can I remove the rust stain? McD. J.

It will be difficult to remove the rust stain without also fading the color in the suit. However, you might try lemon juice and salt. This is a comparatively mild bleach and if not left on too long should not harm the color. Squeeze lemon juice on the stain, dust with salt and allow to stand. After a few minutes, rinse. If this lightens the stain, but does not completely remove it, the process may be repeated.

I have a linen table cloth that has grease from candle wax on it. I did not notice these grease stains until I was ironing it, after having washed it in hot, soapy water. I have tried to get the stains out with repeated washings and have had no success. How can I remove these stains? J. H.

I am inclined to think the stain is due to candle color, not grease, for the repeated washings should have removed all traces of grease from the cloth by now. However, sponging the stain with carbon tetrachloride, or other grease solvent, will remove any trace of grease which might remain. Then sponge the spot with a liquid made up of one cup denatured alcohol and two cups of water to remove the remaining stain. If this doesn't completely remove the stain and the tablecloth is white, use a household bleach. Stretch the stained part over a bowl filled with cold water and drop the diluted bleach onto the stain. After a few minutes, no longer, dip the stained part into the water. Rinse very thoroughly.

GOOD OLD APPLE DUMPLINGS! Plump, juicy, and satisfying, they have rated as tops in eating pleasure since long before Grandma's day. A lemon or vanilla sauce is a perfect complement for them, or serve with good rich "country" cream. The apple dumpling recipe follows:

- 2 cups sifted enriched flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 4 to 6 tablespoons lard
- ¼ to ½ cup milk
- 5 to 6 medium apples, peeled and sliced
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ¾ cup sugar
- 3 tablespoons butter

Sift flour with baking powder and salt and 2 tablespoons sugar. Cut in lard until mixture has a fine even crumb. Add enough milk to make a soft dough. Knead 30 seconds. Roll to ⅛ inch thickness. Cut into 5-inch squares. Combine apples with cinnamon and sugar. Fill centers of biscuit squares with apple mixture. Dot with butter. Draw up the corners of the dough to completely cover the apples. Turn over on greased cookie sheet and prick the top surface of dumplings. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 35 to 40 minutes. Yield: 8 dumplings.

Dried Bouquets Add Note of Cheer On Wintry Days

Bleakness of gray February days can be greatly alleviated in your home by colorful dry bouquets which can make your living room look as alive as summer.

If you select plants that are hardy, with a little care they will flourish in any window or corner that has a bit of sunlight, according to the February issue of Good Housekeeping magazine.

"It isn't absolutely necessary for them to have abundant sun," the magazine states. "If you haven't a green thumb, make a colorful dried bouquet."

Pictured and described in the magazine are such groupings as a window bay holding a setting framed by tall rubber plants, and containing several hardy types such as philodendron, large and small, swordlike pandanus, pale-green dieffenbachia, glossy aglaonema and house iris with a front row of pickabacks and lacy table ferns, adding delicacy to the pattern of larger leaves; a brilliant grouping in an old ironstone jug of dark-red sumac pods and some dripping sprays of orange bittersweet; a miniature garden on a marble table top of shaded and boldly patterned leaves such as peperomia, cissus, dieffenbachia, and cyclamen; and short branches with bright berries (red alder and silvery bayberry), massed in a white China compote, which require no care at all and are certain to dispel every trace of a wintry gloom.

Courage as Stock in Trade Helps Young Couple Succeed

By Dorothy Draper

IT TAKES courage to get started in business these days. It took courage, plus a deep-rooted faith in the future to make the happy ending to the following story:

"R" married a girl from Cincinnati after he came out of the Merchant Marine. Like many others just back from the service, he wondered how he could turn his ability with electrical gadgets into a good paying business that would support a wife. He wanted a business of his own.

Finally he and "B," his wife, hit upon a wonderful solution. She had been brought up among lovely old New England antiques, and had a certain clever flair for making them look at home in the background of today. "R" turned his electrical experience to good use. They made trips to New Hampshire and Vermont and bought old vases, coffee grinders, tea pots, even a miniature sewing machine which they converted into lamps. "R" created original bases for them and did such a good job of wiring that he was soon settled in New York and doing a thriving business. He captured the antique lamp-mounting accounts of two of New York's leading department stores.

"B," having lived in the country all her life, missed its quiet. She began to long for the grass and trees. "R" said he didn't see why they couldn't do business in Connecticut as well as Forty-seventh Street.

WE WON'T go into all the trials and tribulations they had getting started in Connecticut. But there were plenty! However, being young, ingenious and filled with enthusiasm and down-to-earth grit, nothing daunted them. With the help of "B's" brother, and the bank, "R" built an antique shop on a busy highway. Neither "B's" brother nor "R" had ever built anything larger than a dog house before.

They painted it buttercup-yellow with gray shutters and a white door. Huge picture windows with 18-inch panes show off the old pine pieces and all the lamps to good advantage. Joining the antique shop in the rear is a bed-living room, kitchenette and bath, which will be "home" until the profits pile up enough to build a small house on their favorite laurel-covered knoll.

One is never too old or too young to get started! As the young couple in our story said: "We wish people wouldn't be afraid of going after what they want. We've found that happiness and contentment have to be earned."

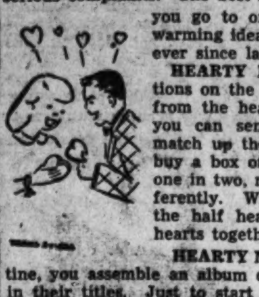
Tricks for Teens

By Nancy Pepper

Comes February, the month of good old St. Valentine, and you all suffer from heart trouble. Not getting enough Valentines, or getting too many from the wrong people (other girls, that is) are the most serious complaints. The best remedy is a Valentine party. Whether you go to one or give one, here are some heart warming ideas we've had packed away in mothballs ever since last St. Valentine's Day.



HEARTY INVITATION—You paste your invitations on the back of playing cards, using the cards from the heart suit only. You use two packs, so you can send duplicate cards to girls. Couples match up their cards for the first dance. Or you buy a box of large red paper hearts and cut each one in two, making sure that you cut each one differently. Write your invitations in white ink on the half hearts. Couples must piece the broken hearts together when they arrive.

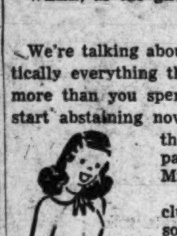
HEARTY MUSIC—In honor of good old St. Valentine, you assemble an album of records that have the word "heart" in their titles. Just to start you off, how about "Peg O' My You-Know-What," "Heartaches," "I Have But One Heart?" And how about "Good Night, Sweetheart" for the last dance, instead of the usual "stardust." Borrow your heart songs from friends with record collections. And, remember, it's all right to break hearts at a Valentine's Day party; it's all wrong to break borrowed records!

HEARTY APPETITES—All the food is served in heart designs, of course. There you are, all the day before, wielding a heart-shaped cookie cutter on sandwiches and cookies. There they are all that evening, eating their hearts out—with mustard, of course. Next day you all go to school with Valentine Hangovers—otherwise known as Heartburn.

WELL, as the girl said to the magician, "How's Tricks?"

Tails You Win

We're talking about the ermine tails you've been wearing on practically everything these days. You can buy a cluster for not much more than you spend at the malt shop in a week, so you'd better start abstaining now. Maybe you'll look so pretty when you wear these little fur-belows that somebody else will be paying for your malteds from this day forward. Might as well have calories with your romance!



GIDDY ON GIBSONS—You be the first to pin a cluster of ermine fur tails to the collar of your Gibson Girl blouse and we guarantee you won't be the last. Nothing could look more lush when you wear your white Gibson with a black skirt.

BEGUILING ON BALLETS—Pin a cluster of ermine tails to the toes of your black ballet slippers with date dresses and those new ballerina formals.

REET ON RIBBONS—Sew a cluster of ermine tails to narrow black velvet ribbon. Then tie the ribbon around your neck as a chocker, or around your wrist as a bracelet. Or sew the tails to a black velvet bow and fasten in your hair with a bobby pin.

COLOSSAL ON COATS—Pin them to your lapel, or, if you have one of those new Greatcoats with the large Peter Pan collar, wear the ermine tails instead of a scarf where your collar comes together at front.

THEY'RE CUTE ON CAG CAPS—Just imagine your black CAG Cap (that's the little felt helmet named after Calling All Girls) with a cluster of ermine tails at one side. Why "just imagine?"

Sentimental Sillies

Why is a sweetheart like a door knob?

BECAUSE HE'S SOMETHING TO ADORE. (This is one of the instances where you say "Tilt." See above.)

What is an arithmetical definition of a kiss?

NOTHING DIVIDED BY TWO.

Thirty-two degrees is the freezing point, what is the Squeezing Point?

TWO IN THE SHADE.

Why is "kiss" spelled with two "s's"?

BECAUSE IT TAKES TWO TO COMPLETE THE SPELL.

TRIXIE TEEN SAYS

There are lots of ways for a girl to attract attention. She can make so much noise that everybody will turn around to see what's causing all the commotion. She can wear such flashy clothes and such excessive make-up that nobody will be able to miss her—although everybody would like to. Yes, there are lots of wrong ways to attract attention—but what good do they do? Attracting attention isn't important—it's holding it that counts!

Bon Vivants Choose New Poobahs

WASHINGTON Chapter of Bon Vivants, national organization of steamship and travel agents, has named J. Russell Van Slycke of the AAA as president; Al Harke, vice president; Jack Ahern, secretary; Sid Nyhus, treasurer, and, to the entertainment committee (whatever function that might have), Tom Carroll, C. Lew Herschel and Vic Peterson . . . Douglas Robin has been named district sales representative for Lanseair Travel Service, Inc. . . . Northwest Airlines says it will begin construction of a new travel office "within a few days" at 1510 H st. nw. "Work is expected to be completed in March," shortly after the line projects its service into Washington . . . Ste. Agathe des Monts, famed Laurentian resort town, on Thursday opens its first winter carnival since the war.

PEOPLE in Canada will not be caught snoozing if some quizmaster fires a question at them about moose. This is a ridiculous statement, but it's one way of bringing up the fact that since June, 1946, a Moose Research Project has been carried on by the Royal Ontario Museum of Zoology in Toronto. The whole idea was to "extend our knowledge of this king of the forest" and I, for one, am glad to know who's king . . . NATO (National Association of Travel Officials) is looking with bemused approbation from its Olympian seat on an idea thought up by the Oregon Advertising Club. This plan recommends the setting up of tourist schools throughout the country to tip off communities on how to entertain the cash-heavy tourist. Entertain, that is . . . The first of two American Express escorted air tours of South America leaves Miami by clipper on Wednesday. It'll be 29 days' worth . . . The North Carolina State News Bureau has just gotten out a new guide and map to coastal North Carolina. One has reached this desk and it's a good job. Copies may be had by writing the Division of Advertising and News, Raleigh. You can get an uncreased one to paper the wall with if you like . . . The St. Petersburg (Fla.) Chamber of Commerce clears its throat and says there will be no economic slump this year. Glad to have that off my mind . . . Here's a dignified dispatch from Fredericton, New Brunswick, which says the snow up there is the deepest in years. The wary deer, the mighty moose (who let him in again?), the dainty pheasant are having a time finding enough to eat.

DON'T FEEL BAD about this, but it says here that Washington, Idaho and California are leading the Nation in Sun Valley reservations for this season. Pretty state of things . . . Joe Fountain, long may he play, writes to announce that the annual camera tour to Jasper National Park in the Canadian Rockies will be resumed next June. U. S. Camera Magazine and Canadian National Railways are the sponsors . . . Capt. Robert G. Thelwell, skipper of the Cunarder Media, has been named Royal Naval Reserve aide-de-camp to King George and gets to wear aiguillettes signifying same . . . No question about it, the Santa Fe System is second only to the military when it comes to bigger and better encyclicals. Here's one that says "Supplement No. 1 to Santa Fe System Circular No. 55-S." Another says "Supplement No. 2 to Santa Fe System Circular No. 54-S (Cancelling Supplement No. 1)." Anyway, one of these bulls says the commission on the New One-Day Indian Detour is a dollar-ten, while that on a ticket for the One-Day Indian Detour is a buck seventy-five . . . Science Illustrated says two million American ski enthusiasts are scraping around on slopes all over the country. That's a lot of hickory. And a lot of slopes.

IF YOU'RE traveling on February 12, there's always Lincoln National Historical Park in Larue County, Ky., which preserves the birthplace of A. Lincoln. The railsplitter lived in the area until he was 4 years old . . . General Eisenhower, now that he has made his intentions known and may have time to revisit Scotland, will find, should he do so, that in the Culzean Castle of Ayr a suite of apartments have been set aside expressly for his use . . . Carnival time starts a week from tomorrow in Trinidad . . . The annual Gibson Trophy Ski Race is scheduled for today in North Conway, N. H.

Quebec Boasts 'Dependable' Skiing Snows

PEOPLE are thinking about winter resorts. A little behind in chronological order of development, but with more to offer in many respects from a natural viewpoint, stand the Province of Quebec's Eastern Townships.

Only becoming aware of its own potentialities as a winter resort area about five years ago, the district stretching along an escarpment of the Laurentians, running eastward from Montreal to Sherbrooke, offers a brand new set of ski runs and all other types of winter sports to intrigue a growing following from all parts of America.

The names of Mount Orford, famed for its Three Creeks racing ski run, Magog, Hillcrest, North Hatley, Waterloo, Knowlton and Sherbrooke itself, are serving an ever increasing number of winter visitors.

Snow conditions in this area are very dependable through the long winter season. There are numerous mountains and hills, with a copious sprinkling of excellent winter resort hotels.

Merchant Marine Film To Be Shown Here

A color and sound film, "America Sails the Seas," will be shown Tuesday at 6:45 p. m. at a dinner meeting of the Women's Traffic Association of Washington at the Parrott Restaurant.

Bruce Macnamee, executive assistant of the National Federation of American Shipping, will present the movie.

Finished Exterior, Unfinished Interior

Buyer Puts Own Ideas in 'Handy Man' House

The "minimum" house takes on the appearance of a home. All work was done by the owner. Plantings add finishing touch to exterior. Dog didn't come with house

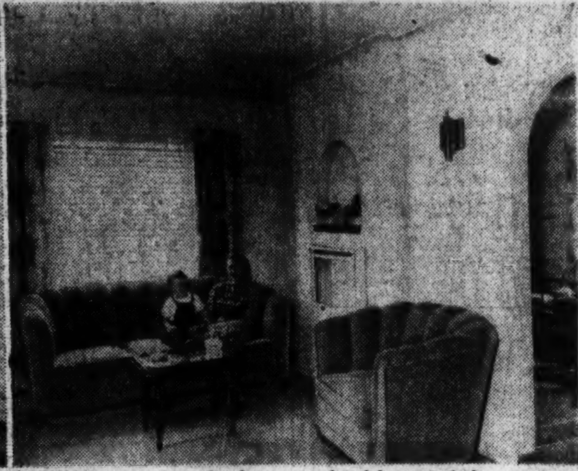
Dining room of a home finished by owner shows the attractiveness of knotty pine walls. Kitchen walls are same material painted. Only wall studs were there when owners purchased



Living room view of a home completed by one of the owners. Plastered walls with arches and niches give a professional appearance, builds up a pride of home ownership

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 31.—A local builder has cashed in on the theory that many American home owners like to complete new homes according to their own ideas.

Franklin L. Burns has built a community of homes designed for delivery to the customer in a semi-completed condition. The buyer sees it through to completion in any way he wishes.

Burns calls his product the "Handy Man" house and sells it for $4750. The dwelling is a 4½-room bungalow of cinder block, completely erected and finished on the exterior. The interior is completed up to the stud partitions and all plumbing and electrical fixtures installed. The basementless home is built on a concrete slab.

Typical Finishing Cost Of 'Handy Man' House

This house was purchased by an electrician who did his own wiring. Some of the figures included "hired" labor.

Wiring and fixtures	$60.00
Plastering	190.00
Painting	35.00
Cupboards, shelves and closets	80.00
Bathtub ($90), glass shelves ($2)	92.00
Floor covering (tile, linoleum and carpet)	463.00
	$920.00

The buyer adds the interior wall finish, woodwork, painting, decorating and landscaping.

The project was written up in the January issue of Practical Builder magazine. The article said buyers must have $1000 cash on hand with which to finish the house. Most veterans complete their homes before moving day.

There is no definite time limit set for completion, but the Veterans' Administration does make the "$1000 completion fund" mandatory for buyers.

Loans were made through a local savings and loan association. Completed, the homes would sell for $6950 and a mortgage made for $4500. Monthly payments amount to $38.59, including taxes and insurance.

Occasionally a buyer has moved into his home before finishing the interior. In one case a veteran covered the face of the studs with building paper to provide temporary privacy. While the unfinished interior is not attractive, it does provide shelter. In some cases it is better than previous accommodations.

Another advantage is that the money previously spent for rent can be applied to fixing up the home.

Burns said that individuals can usually obtain material in small quantities more easily than a builder can obtain the same type of material for a large housing project.

In any event, the builder must pay for the time required to "run down" materials while the home buyer does not need to evaluate this time.

The first house of this type was built in December 1945. At that time the price tag was $3950 without a bathtub. Tubs were later included and, because of increased building costs, houses sold for $4750. Loans are for the full sale price, which includes a range or refrigerator.

"Give a man good shelter and he will make it a home," the builder declared.

Realtors Set Stage for Annual Dance

More than 400 persons are expected to attend the thirteenth annual dinner-dance of the Washington Real Estate Board, February 20 at the Mayflower Hotel.

Advance ticket sales indicate it will be an outstanding success. Prominent Federal and District officials have been invited. General arrangements are in charge of Al. S. Gardiner, jr., program committee chairman, aided by A. Britton Browne, jr., Richard J. Donohoe and Wm. M. Flather, 3d.

Others helping plan the affair are: Carlton Trexler and Everett Phelps, souvenirs; Frank O'Neil and Martin West, jr., decorations; H. L. Bouscaren, John R. Neale, J. C. Weedon, jr. and H. W. Morgan, jr., dinner and tickets.

Leon Brusiloff's orchestra will furnish music. The Brookland Co. will present a souvenir to each lady.

12 Dwellings Planned In North Arlington

Milton G. Smith has been issued permits for erection of 12 homes in the 6100 and 6200 blocks of 28th and 29th sts. north, Arlington, it was reported yesterday. Dwellings will be one story and basement, of brick and cinder block.

At Welfare Parley

Housing Action Urged By Citizens

By Conrad P. Harness

THERE is a growing concern among public-minded citizens over the problem of housing for low-income families. They feel citizens' groups over the Nation must initiate and carry through the struggle for low-rent housing.

Discussion at the three-day meeting of the National Conference on Social Welfare Needs, which ended here Wednesday, called for a grass-roots movement to see that something is done for the low-income family that can't afford housing in the present-day market.

Twenty representatives of various citizens' groups met Wednesday at the Washington Hotel to discuss ways to carry out housing objectives. Delegates represented such groups as the League of Women Voters, Disabled American Veterans, Washington Housing Association, National Travelers Aid Association and similar groups. The Right Rev. Msgr. John O'Grady, secretary, National Conference of Catholic Charities, was chairman of the Commission on Housing, which drafted a housing report, discussed at a forum.

The report called for a continuation and expansion of the present public low-rent housing program, a redesignation of what constitutes a "low-income" family to include those earning $3200 to $3400 in urban areas, extension of rent control during the housing shortage and aids to private industry to stimulate rental housing construction.

No builders or real estate men, habitual opponents of public housing and rent control, were asked to attend the workshop. Speakers reported that such "opponents" had contributed no constructive proposals to ease the housing shortage in previous meetings.

Real estate and building interests have previously fought public housing proposals on the ground that such projects were costly to erect, often inefficiently managed and poorly constructed, drained off scarce building materials and labor, often did not house low-income groups for which they were intended and such operations put the Federal Government into the building business in competition with private enterprise.

The report of the Commission on Housing stated that there is now a housing shortage of approximately 2,750,000 dwellings. Con-

Gardening Meet Opens Tomorrow

Over 200 garden leaders are expected to attend a two-day meeting beginning tomorrow morning of the 1948 National Garden Conference at Hotel Statler.

The program will be featured by an address by Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson. Secretary of State George C. Marshall; James A. Stilwell, executive director, Voluntary Food Conservation program, and other national and international garden authorities have been invited.

A regional garden meeting is scheduled Tuesday morning at which garden leaders and extension representatives will develop plans for a garden and food conservation program.

Secretary Anderson has previously called for planting of 20 million "Freedom Gardens." "The substantial contribution home gardeners can make in increasing the domestic food supply was proved during the war years. Their help will be enlisted again for the year ahead when many areas of the world will be desperately in need of food. The individual contributions of home gardeners may not be large, but in total they can be tremendously significant in adding to our total food supply," he stated.

The regional conference will be held in the South Building of the Department of Agriculture.

The National Garden Institute stated recently that the average family is spending from $80 to $100 a month on food and milk. "Freedom Gardens" are expected to aid greatly in reducing this large outlay of income for food.

Buckley Is Elected By Master Plumbers

Daniel F. Buckley, Mount Rainier, Md., has been elected president of the Washington Surburban Master Plumbers Association, succeeding G. Leonard Daymude of Kensington, who is now chairman of the board.

Others elected were: Philip C. McCurdy, Kensington, secretary; E. C. Musgrove, Silver Spring, vice president; L. H. Heitmuller, Silver Spring, treasurer; J. R. Crockett, Silver Spring, and John C. Dorsey, Riverdale, directors.

Roy H. Hunt was named chairman of the legislative committee.

Thru Legion Plan

Homes Found For 60 Families In 10 Days

Sixty veterans and their families have been placed in homes and apartments here during the last 10 days through the American Legion's Housing Committee. Sylvan King, committee chairman, said over 500 veteran families have been placed since the program began four months ago.

The program is sponsored jointly by the Legion, Washington Real Estate Board and the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington. It is not necessary for a veteran to be a member of the Legion to obtain housing.

Myron R. Rennick, national vice commander of the Legion, called the committee's work "the most outstanding job on veterans' housing done in the entire United States." The statement was made at a recent Legion meeting at the Hotel Statler.

A survey made of members of the Home Builders Association revealed that during 1948 over 13,000 rental units would be completed, plus over 4500 homes. It was estimated that half that number would be made available through the Legion housing program.

King outlined the procedure to be used by veterans in need of housing: Veterans go to Legion headquarters at 2437 15th st. nw. and show honorable discharge papers, become certified and receive a priority. Hardship cases are handled first. The office force determines housing requirements of the veterans' family and what rent can be afforded.

The committee determines what housing is immediately available and sends the veteran out to the project. The office then follows up on calls to find out if the vet[illegible] got the vacancy. If he didn't [illegible] given new housing prosp[illegible]

GI Loans Top 100 Million In December

GI loans to Washington area veterans topped the 100-million-dollar mark during December, Morgan B. Callahan, VA loan guaranty officer, has reported.

With Uncle Sam's backing, 12,775 area former servicemen and women borrowed $102,512,379 to buy homes and farms or establish businesses since enactment of the GI bill.

A total of 11,419 veterans borrowed $99,004,054 from Washington area lenders for homes. To purchase or establish businesses, 1351 former servicemen borrowed $3,472,325 and five farm loans were made for $36,000.

As of the end of December, there have been 268 defaults reported but only 105 have resulted in claims against the Government.

Under the GI bill, VA guarantees up to 50 per cent of a loan obtained by an eligible World War II veteran from a bank, building and loan association, or mortgage lending institution. However, the maximum Government guarantee allowed is $4000 on a realty loan and $2000 on a nonrealty loan.

Veterans now have 9½ years in which to apply for a guaranteed loan.

New Preservative Found for Wood

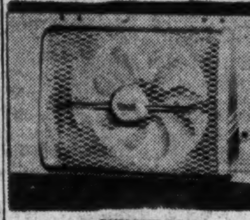
New York, Jan. 31.—A new wood-preservative paint prevents rot and decay of the painted surface, poisons bacteria and repels insects besides, reports Coal Age.

"Woodtrem, which comes in black and aluminum, penetrates deeply into the pores of the wood and effectly seals out moisture. Tests are said to indicate that surfaces coated with it will remain free from rot at least twice as long as wood surfaces coated with ordinary paint." It is made by Speco, Inc., Cleveland.

What's New In Gadgets

ALUMAROLL

Light-weight porch canopies are coming on the market in increasing quantities. The latest is "Alumaroll," an aluminum roll-up type awning canopy. Colors are baked-on enamels which won't chip, according to the manufacturer, Orchard Brothers of Rutherford, N. J. A gutter on the front edge of the canopy, carries off drain water.



VENTROLA

Among the scores of new and improved products, designed for easier, more comfortable living to be shown at the annual convention and exposition of the National Association of Home Builders in Chicago February 22-26, is the new Ventrola Portable Reversible window fan.

A unique reversing mechanism provides year 'round "comfort conditioning." The direction of air may be reversed to bring in outside air when cooling action is required in summer. Efficient and economical, it completely changes the air in an average size room in less than two minutes and costs less to operate than many light bulbs. It may be shifted easily from window to window.

Large Florits Shop Planned

Construction is expected to begin in March on a proposed $100,000 building at 1413 H st. nw., to house the Blakistone, Inc., florist shop, now at 1407 H st. nw.

Z. D. Blackistone, owner, said the building was expected to be fully complete by November when the firm celebrates its fiftieth anniversary. The firm was established in 1898 at 827 14th st. nw., moving to the corner of 14th and H sts. in 1899.

The Galt Building is now situated at the proposed location at 1413 H st. Blackistone said the structure was an embassy in the early part of the century. The structure will be razed to make way for the new building.

The new building will be a one-story structure at the street frontage, with a mezzanine for offices. More offices and greenhouses will be in the rear. The builder has not yet been selected.

Hotel Henry Plans 5-Story Addition

Plans for a $250,000, five-story addition to the Hotel Henry, 1825 13th st. nw., are under way, R. C. Archer, jr., architect, has announced. The addition will be erected on a vacant lot adjacent to the existing apartment hotel.

The proposed addition will have 40 rooms, Archer said. Exterior construction will be brick and limestone.

Bedroom, Bath Downstairs

The Washington Post

Eli and Gerald Luria, a team of brother-builders, believe the way to the public's heart is through a two-story home with one bedroom and bath downstairs. The brothers have gone whole hog on the idea with 20 such homes under roof, and 10 nearly completed. The project is in the Berkshire section of North Arlington, at 26th and Potomac sts. N. Homes are all nearly alike, have a total of three bedrooms and two baths. Basement recreation room is finished in knotty pine, with a fireplace. Notice sun deck on corner home. Dwellings sell for $16,750

Television Offices To Be Remodeled

Alterations and remodeling of office and television studio facilities will begin shortly at WNBW at the Wardman Park Hotel. Austin Co. of New York City is the builder. Estimated construction cost was set at $25,000.

Completion of the project is expected to stimulate production of television broadcasts, an NBC official stated.

Alterations Planned By Haje's in Arlington

Haje's, Inc., plan additions and alterations to an existing structure at 1330 Lee hwy., Arlington, which will be remodeled into a restaurant. Awarding of the building contract will be announced after bids are opened on February 9.

HOUSING IN THE NEWS: Highlight of the recent rent control discussion over the American Forum of the Air on Tuesday wasn't in the script. Senator Raymond Baldwin (R., Conn.) who recommended continued rent control, received a telephone call from California immediately after the program went off the air. A disgruntled landlord spent a barrel full of nickels telling the Senator he must be a rank Communist to advocate rent control. Senator Baldwin was visible shaken by the charge and spent 10 minutes trying to reason with his caller.

Senator Baldwin and Representative Joseph Kennedy (D., Mass.) opposed Burton E. Edwards, executive secretary, National Apartment Owners Association, and Arthur W. Binns, president, National Home and Property Owners Foundation.

BALDWIN

Both sides used Bureau of Labor statistics to prove their different points of view, leaving the audience in bewilderment.

Other portions of the script follow:

BINNS: "At least half of all rental housing available, say, in 1940, has now disappeared from the market, forced into sales or otherwise removed. Every month sees less and less rental housing nationally; we have planned it that way by making it undesirable to own rental housing."

KENNEDY: "Until Congress passes a comprehensive housing bill and the supply of housing catches up in some measure, to the demand, we are going to keep rent control, and I don't think that is going to happen within the next two years."

EDWARDS: "The new housing we have today is merely a spurt in the market, and if we continue controls we are going to dry up new construction."

BALDWIN: "Today we have a shortage of housing that is more acute than the shortage of any other consumer necessity. If we can't afford new radios, or if we can't afford good steaks, we manage without them. But if we can't afford roofs over our heads, it becomes a very serious matter. I don't like to see any controls continue if that can be avoided. But in the face of a threatening inflation we can not give the high cost of living another boost upward by allowing unbridled competition for the short supply of housing space, and I believe we must continue this needed protection for our people until the middle of 1949."

All work and no pleasure gives one a lot of income tax troubles these days. That's why the Home Builders Association have decided entertainment is a big enough item to warrant a committee in charge of it. J. Horace Smithey, official of the Chevy Chase Building and Loan Association, Bethesda, will head the association's entertainment and press program committee for '48, Clarence W. Gosnell, Association president, has announced.

STATON

Admiral Adolphus Staton, head of the Falkland Co., is the president of the Building Owners and Managers Association, succeeding Marshall Davis.

James E. Douglass was reelected treasurer and named first vice president of the apartment house division of which Irwin Altman was named second vice president. Others elected were: Harvey Humphrey and R. C. Parsons, vice presidents, office building division.

MAIL BAG: Shannon & Luchs is flirting with television as a sales medium. Has a one minute commercial per night . . . Savings of individuals held in the 6100 savings and loan associations of the United States increased during 1947 by $1,152,000,000, or 13.5 per cent . . . L. T. Breuninger and Edward R. Carr are new members of NAREB's Realtors' Washington Committee . . . NAHB's Frank Cortright terms the "recent drying up" of the mortgage market as a menace to "a continuing record volume of home construction and now constitutes the greatest single menace to the home building industry's program of a million homes a year for veterans and others . . . One of the Nation's largest stock brokerage firms has hoisted the storm warning signal on purchase of stock in building manufacturing firms. The reason: "Continuing rise in building costs and gradual tightening of construction credit viewed as potential brake to construction activity in months ahead."

FHA Approves Belle View

A third section of Belle View, rental housing project on Mount Vernon blvd., Alexandria, providing 250 new dwelling units, has been approved for mortgage insurance by Director James A. Hewitt, District FHA office.

The section will be built by George C. Landrith, Eugene J. Olmi, Arthur R. Rupley and Ebner R. Duncan and financed by the American Security and Trust Co. with an insured mortgage of $2,142,000. It will consist of 2 and 3-story structures containing 250 units of 4, 5 and 6 rooms.

This brings to 119 the total of veterans multi-family rental housing projects approved by the District of Columbia office under the new FHA program, Mr. Hewitt said. They provide 12,103 new dwelling units financed with FHA-insured mortgages in excess of $92,349,000.

Danes Look Over Prefab Market Here

COPENHAGEN.—A flying corps plans to spread Danish prefabricated houses over the world if Danish authorities permit, the firm (Manniche and Hartmann) announces.

Inquiries for Danish prefabs have been received from Great Britain, India, Asia, and the United States.

The firm cannot get export licenses, because of Denmark's own housing problem. However, if it gets permission, it plans to establish factories in countries that ask for more than 1000 prefabricated houses, and a technical flying corps would build the houses. As each task is finished the factory would be moved to the next country.

Citizens Want Housing Action

gress, it added, has dealt with housing piecemeal as emergencies arose, rather than legislate for a long-term housing program.

The controversial Taft-Ellender-Wagner long-range housing bill, now pending in Congress, figured prominently in discussions at the forum. The proposed bill was cited as favorable to the group's aims. The bill proposes construction of low-rent housing, in addition to many other long-term housing aims.

Delegates drafted recommendations to be presented to the main body of the national conference, which urged that citizen volunteer workers in each city act to promote better housing, rather than have such proposals come from professional workers in the public housing field.

Another recommendation was that private citizens continue to appear before congressional committees and make known their wants in regard to a Federal housing program.

Finish Nothing

Red Official Hits Moscow Housing Flop

Moscow, Jan. 31 (AP).—Russian construction organizations have been criticized during the current session of the Moscow Soviet.

It has been pointed out that one apartment house which was started 12 years ago is still unfinished. Work on other apartment buildings, begun more than a decade ago, remains uncompleted.

These facts were brought out by V. F. Mosolov, vice chairman of the Soviet Capital's Municipal Government. In a speech before the council, Mosolov declared that "the plan for housing construction in Moscow for 1947 has not been fulfilled.'

The text of Mosolov's speech appeared in the Moscow Bolshevik.

He charged that the instrument and tool industry has carried out only two and one-half per cent of the plan. Three other industries, he added, are doing little better, including the textile, heavy construction and auto-tractor industries.

The ministry of fuel and enterprise construction was criticized for starting 10 new apartment buildings in 1945 while completing only one to date.

Mosolov said the total number of workers now employed in Moscow housing construction amounts to only 40 per cent of the number employed during the war. At the same time, he added, some organizations are losing construction workers as fast as new ones are hired. The reason, he said, is a failure to concern themselves adequately with the "essential needs" of labor.

Mosolov singled out three industries which he said "failed to complete even one square meter of housing in 1947." They were: the coal ministry for western areas, the coal industry for eastern areas and the rubber industry.

Garden Book Hits Record Of 3 Million

The three millionth copy of a garden book has rolled off the presses to establish some sort of record in the publishing of garden books.

"Henderson's Garden Guide and Record," was first published in 1909 by a noted seedsman and authority, Peter Henderson, who little suspected that the publication would become a best seller.

The book is put out by the firm Henderson founded in 1847, now entering its 101st year of garden supplies in downtown Manhattan.

There were only 40 pages in the Guide of 1909. The eleventh edition has 119 pages.

The eleven editions are a commentary on the changes in garden styles during the years the Guides have been published. In 1909, garden catalogues listed a few plants for the rock garden and a few herbs. The most recent edition of the Garden Guide has full departments devoted to culinary herbs, and tips on maintaining a rock garden.

There are lengthy pages on the newer insecticides and fungicides, and listings of the animal and insect pests and friends. One of the newer departments is devoted to quick freezing of vegetables and fruits. A list is given of those varities which have proven best suited to the process, and special hints are included for the storing of frozen foods.

Table Sugar Invigorates House Plants

New York, Jan. 31.—Common sugar can substitute for sunlight to invigorate hothouse crops, according to scientists of the California Institute of Technology, Pasadena.

Studies conducted for the Sugar Research Foundation show that plants placed in total darkness will keep growing if sugar is supplied by injection, or more practically, by a fine spray of a 10 per cent sugar solution in water.

Sugar is normally produced in leaves by action of sunlight on the chlorophyll, and used by the plant to produce other compounds. Previously, however, it has not been known that supplemental sugar would permit the same growth.

Dr. Robert C. Hockett, scientific director of the foundation said: "Several practical applications for this discovery are in sight. Hothouse crops such as strawberries tomatoes, carnations and roses are often grown in Northern latitudes where the light intensity in winter is not sufficient for maximum growth. By supplementing sunlight with the sugar spray during these periods, full development would be assured.

"The spray could also be used profitably where transplanted seedlings are in darkness several days during shipment. Studies show that tomato seedlings which were given sugar sprays before and after transplanting were protected against shock and showed much better development than untreated plants."

Further experiments will be made at agricultural research centers in different sections of the country to test these preliminary findings to see how certain food and decorative floral plants respond, the foundation reported.

Plan Summer Flower Garden While Snow Is on Ground

Garden planning is best done in the winter when the gardener has most time for it. Here is a list of flowers, classified according to type, color and habits, which may be a valuable aid in planning a garden on paper.

While planning the outdoor garden, indoor plants can be enjoyed. One of the best is the African violet. The St. Paulia variety is well recommended. Special fertilizers and "African violet" soil is available.

For edges and borders—Sweet alyssum, dwarf nasturtiums, lobelia, dwarf marigold, ageratum, Virginia stocks, forget-me-nots.

Long stems for cutting—Asters, calliopsis, mourning bride or scabiosa, cosmos, giant zinnias, and double gaillardias.

Short stems for cutting—Marigolds, snapdragons, calendulas, sweetpeas, annual chrysanthemums, bachelor buttons, carnations, lilliput zinnias, annual pinks, sweet sultans, salpiglossis.

For color masses—Petunia, zinnia, marigolds, calendulas, annual phlox, verbena, stock, aster, salvia and poppies.

For light or poor soil—Nasturtiums, Clarkia, godetia, poppy, portulaca and zinnias.

For fragrance—Mignonette, heliotrope, nasturtiums, alyssum, 10 weeks' stock and sweetpeas.

For shady places—Jansies, torenias or wishbone plant, bodetia, forget-me-not, nemophila and varieties of mimulus.

For hot situations—Sunflowers, heliotrope, portulaca, ice plant, petunias, balsam and annual gaillardia.

For a fragrant, all-season border with material for cutting, you may include most of the following: Ten weeks' stocks, petunias, French and African marigolds, calendulas, annual larkspurs, cosmos, zinnias, sweetpeas, portulaca, kochia, flowering tobaccos, calliopsis, annual phlox, ageratum, sweet alyssum, poppies, asters, balsams, bachelor's buttons, sweet sultan, coxcomb and annual pinks.

Hardwood Flooring Output Sets New Mark

Chicago, Jan. 31.—Output of hardwood flooring in the Nation's major producing areas set an all-time annual record of approximately 620,000,000 board feet in 1947, the National Oak Flooring Manufacturers' Association has reported.

The figure is about double that of 1946 production and some 36,000,000 board feet greater than the previous high, recorded in 1926. It includes unfinished and pre-finished flooring of oak, hard maple, beech, birch and pecan, all of which have been in short supply since 1942.

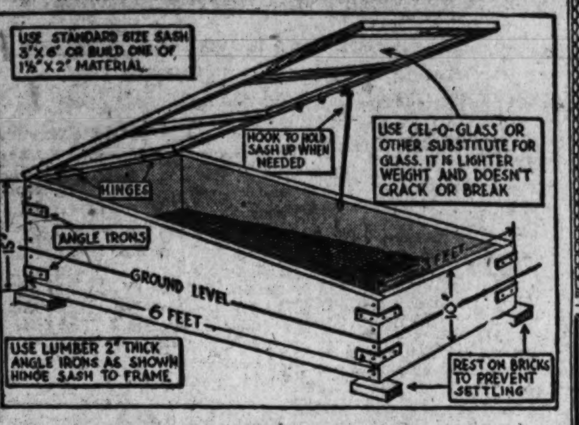
Cold Frame Is Basic Tool Of Most Successful Gardens



Working drawing for building cold frame

A cold frame is basic equipment for every home garden which is managed with economy. In every month of the year it can be used for some service which will enrich the garden, while saving money for the owner.

It is an ancient device, antedating the invention of glass; and the modern trend is toward the use of light, unbreakable plastics, instead of the glazed sash on which there is likely to be heavy breakage, especially in high winds.

Since inexpensive electric heat will turn a cold frame into a hotbed, the older fashioned manure-heated hot bed is seldom seen. Heat is not needed for most of the uses to which a cold frame can be put; and being without objectionable dirt or odor it can be placed near the house, where steps will be saved.

The illustration is a practical working-drawing of a standard one-sash cold frame. Standard glazed sash is 3 by 6 feet; but a frame can be made of any convenient dimensions, if sash of a suitable size is available. Sash covered with transparent plastic materials will be much lighter, and also will allow ultra-violet rays to pass through to the plants.

The usual practice is to sink the frame into the ground about 6 inches, and to pile earth around it outside, for insulation. Inside it may be filled to ground level with the best top soil available, or the floor may be covered with 2 or 3 inches of cinders or gravel, on which shallow seed boxes (flats) are placed. Many prefer sowing the seeds in flats, which can be carried to the garden at transplanting time.

A location in the full sun all day is required for best results and shelter from cold winds is beneficial. The top of the flat should incline toward the south. Heavy boards of cypress, white pine, or redwood are preferable, since the frame will often be wet and must resist decay. Winter is the time to build a cold frame, so it will be ready to use when the first signs of spring appear.

Wrought Iron Railings Can Be Rust-Proofed

Those attractive porch bannisters and railings, gates, garden furniture and accessories made of wrought iron are likely prey for rust. Take care of them by periodic cleaning and repainting or polishing.

A woolen cloth dampened in sweet oil combined with considerable "elbow grease" will clean off most rust spots and grime. Polishing with a dry woolen cloth will give a satiny luster, and prepared paints are available for added protection against the elements.

Simple Trick Saves Tops of Garbage Cans

A garbage can without a cover or one which has been damaged is of little value in protecting refuse from rats and other disease-transmitting animals.

Home owners and apartment dwellers faced with the problem of trying to keep garbage can covers from being misplaced or run over by refuse collector's trucks, are offered this suggestion:

Simply fasten one end of a small length of rope or chain to the handle of a galvanized steel garbage can and secure the other end to a nearby tree, fence post or other fixture.

Then the refuse collector is forced to remove the top of the can before emptying garbage. When he fails to replace the cover it remains in the refuse area and can be easily replaced the next time the container is used.

Get 'Cream' of Property

Tax-Free Institutions Add to Realty Holdings

By Lawrence N. Eldred

CHICAGO, Jan. 31 (AP).—An estimate was made here today that life insurance companies and tax-exempt institutions such as universities may eventually own outright two billion dollars worth of the "cream" of city retail and industrial real estate throughout the Nation.

A trend in this direction gained full steam less than three years ago, said Mark Levy, Chicago real estate operator and former president of the National Institute of Real Estate Brokers.

It already has reached a total investment value of 625 million dollars, exclusive of housing projects, he said, and additional purchases are authorized in 38 States and the District of Columbia.

Such outright purchases, Levy emphasized during an interview, are exclusive of the record-breaking holdings by insurance companies of miscellaneous mortgages which now total more than $8,500,000,000, increased last year alone by $2,500,000,000 in new paper.

Levy made a survey for the Mortgage Bankers Association of America of 40 insurance companies and ten universities on the real estate buying side and ten large corporations on the selling side. Both sides gave reasons why the trend is considered mutually beneficial.

Don't Tie Up Capital

CORPORATIONS are finding, he said, that by selling their equity in the real estate they occupy, then renting it back on long-term leases, a smaller debt structure is required and working capital is freed for expansion of equipment and inventories.

Levy quoted one corporation as saying, "We are in the business of retailing and not real estate."

The realtor added, "One of the chief incentives which the corporations have in selling their real estate is the opportunity to claim larger deductions from income taxes than are permissible to owners."

"Another incentive seems to be the avoidance of real estate as an asset, and of mortgage indebtedness in their balance sheets. Contingent rent obligations are not carried as a capital liability, so it helps their financial statement."

He noted, however, insurance companies and institutions tend to shy away from deals involving options for renewal of leases at lower rentals or for repurchase, because this might lead to instability in investment portfolios.

Corporations which have sold real estate and leased it back, he said, include F. W. Woolworth Co., J. J. Newberry Co., Whelan Drug Co., McCrory Stores Corp., New York Lerner Co., Hearn Department Store, Inc., Goldblatt Bros., Sears, Roebuck & Co., Montgomery Ward & Co., and Allied Stores Corp.

Some States Say No

TYPICAL of educational institutions having real estate investments are the University of Chicago, Cornell University, Union College and Yale University.

"If this trend continues, the cream of 100 per cent retail sections of our urban communities, as well as some of the choice industrial properties, will be owned by this group of investors," Levy declared.

In estimating the potential total purchasable by insurance companies, colleges, charitable institutions, and other tax exempt groups at two billion dollars, Levy took into consideration the various State statutes, some of which prohibit or restrict the practice.

Virginia was the first State to permit insurance companies by statute to buy real estate for leasing purposes. This law was passed in 1942.

Eight other States—Alabama, Florida, Maine, Neveda, New Hampshire, Ohio, South Carolina and West Virginia—and the District of Columbia authorized such purchases negatively by the absence of any restrictions.

Old Fashioned Codes Boost Home Costs

Outdated building codes add 5 to 20 per cent to home-building costs. Standardization of 2000 building codes over the Nation would do much to cut this added expense, says an article in the February issue of House Garden. The magazine recommends local building codes be modernized to correct wasteful requirements. Competent testing laboratories, together with the American Standards Association and the trade associations are developing standards for quality and construction practices that can be used in the preparation of a building code, but it is the citizens' committees, architects, builders, engineers, and other professionals who put the machinery into action.

Provisions for fire safety, sanitation, strength, and elimination of physical hazards vary greatly in different cities. The article says walls may be built unnecessarily strong; that Kansas City laws imply fires burn more fiercely there than in St. Louis; that Detroit laws suggest people in Detroit put greater strain upon floors than people in New York.

Big Families Look to Bunks For Needed Sleeping Space

Big families limited to small homes have a solution to the sleeping space problem when they consider bunks, suggests Practical Builder Magazine. Bunks are just as comfortable as twin-size beds, easy to keep neat, and afford extra storage space with built-in drawers in their bases.

Placed end to end in a long, narrow space; double-decked or right-angled, these built-in beds are adaptable to almost any size or shape room. As many as four individuals can be accommodated in a single bedroom of normal size by installing bunks in two double-deck tiers. Children love them for the spirit of adventure they symbolize and the chance to climb a ladder to go to bed.

And just because they are practical, they need not be eyesores or hopelessly plain. Decorative scroll borders, fancy corner posts, bright paint, unusual plywood or attractive knotty pine can make them a part of any charming scheme. Recessed overhead shelves and illumination solves the bed-table need for small quarters, and a footboard can serve doubly when it becomes a shallow chest of drawers.

Neat accommodations for occasioal guests can be set up wherever an enclosed bunk can be built. Swinging or sliding doors conceal it, openwork at top affords extra ventilation.

Built-in drawers below, recessed shelves and lighting make it as cozy as a Pullman. With a little ingenuity, this type of bunk can become a double bed, using two single mattresses on separate frames, one above the other. The lower one set on metal runners glides outward to rest on drop legs and allows the upper section to drop to the same level. A simple lever raises rear half for return to orginal position.

Large size bunks that slide back under built-in corner bookshelves to form an ordinary daytime couch, have lock type casters that keep them stationary in either position, offer excellent spare sleeping room.

Lahr Just Wants to Be Funny

Doesn't Yearn To Play Hamlet

By Richard L. Coe

MR. AND MRS. BERT LAHR take their work very seriously.

Bert's is the fine art of being funny. Mildred's requires a double-shift; she splits her time between looking after Bert and tending their two youngsters, Johnny, 6, and Jane 4. The Lahrs are here for his week at the National in "Burlesque."

It's in the tradition of the comics, of course, to be deadly earnest about being funny. But it's refreshing to report that this comedian, in a two-hour, three-cornered dinner chat, revealed no inner torments about "really" wanting to play Hamlet.

"A comedian," says Bert, "is forced to be serious. He must know the history of his profession because that's the basis of a lot of his material. You show me any comedy, bedroom or drawing room, and I'll be able to point out to you scenes that are lifted from the old burlesque skits.

"Take 'Life With Father.' The scene where Father Day and his wife quarrel over the balancing of accounts is a variation of an old act we played in vaudeville.

"Then you have to watch your audience for their particular mood. That's what keeps a comedian fresh. A good comedian is never dated; his material may seem old fashioned. It's how he handles it. I heard a record of Bert Williams the other night and it was just as funny as when he made it around 1916.

He's an Old Burlesque

OFF STAGE, we are amused to find, Lahr's voice has that perpetual cold-in-the-head quality it has on. Bert lit a cigarette and went on:

"Yes, I was in burlesque, but the real burlesque that trained Bobby Clark, W. C. Fields, Fannie Brice, Sophie Tucker, Abbott and Costello and Eddie Cantor is dead as a dodo. Our shows were clean. The strip tease was unknown and the humor that passes as currency now wouldn't have been tolerated. It's strictly period stuff and sometimes, when I'm playing Skid in this play, I expect to be carted off to a museum.

"I began in vaudeville, though, back in 1905 in the child act 'Eleven Crazy Kids.' I was about 10 then, I guess, and from vaudeville went over to burlesque.

"The burlesque show we stage in the third act of this romantic comedy about a burlesque troupe is simply second nature to me after years of doing the same thing in another sort of setting.

"As a matter of fact, I dreamed up the routine and even wrote the corny lyrics for the opening chorus. I'm probably just about the only living person to whom such corn comes naturally."

About That Woodchopper

TWENTY years of being a musical comedy star have made him a keen judge of material. We asked him about the "The Woodchopper's Song," that merciless travesty of concert baritones which he did when he was co-starring with Beatrice Lillie in "Life Begins at 8:40" and which he repeated a few Sunday nights ago at ANTA's star-studded benefit in New York.

"That one was a natural," mused Bert, smiling. "There was something in it of all those guys who were just hitting the top at the time—John Charles Thomas, Larry Tibbett and Nelson Eddy. It's still a grand turn."

Mrs. Lahr epitomizes the girls who give up a career on the stage to further her husband's. She in her early thirties, blonde and pretty, which might be one reason why Bert remembered her from a show he'd seen a year before they were introduced. No, Mildred has no desire to be a "name" on her own. Keeping Bert happy is one job and their children are a joint responsibility.

The Lahr dressing room at the theater is unique proof of this. In some years of visiting touring actors in their backstage dressing rooms, we've never seen one quite like Bert's. Usually a photo or two is propped on the dressing table and that's that.

But not in the Lahr dressing room. There must be 30-odd candid, framed shots of the Lahr family, including Bert's 19-year-old son by his first marriage, a lad now in school in Arizona. Bert's dresser, Hilliard Alexander, is given credit for such exceptional decor by the comedian and his wife.

Westward Bound

THE Lahr career in the George Manker Watters-Arthur Hopkins comedy has kept him from the big musicals longer than he expected. He first played "Skid"—his

Broadway Booby Trap

It's a Rare Producer Who Breaks Even

By Charles D. Rice

YOU MAY FUME when you shell out six dollars to see the latest show, but there's one bigger sucker than you, brother—and that's the guy who produced it.

The theater, just off Broadway, is ablaze with lights and teeming with humanity. There is a ticket line a half block long. The box-office man is droning, "Sorry, sir . . . sorry, madam . . . nothing but orchestra seats till April . . . sorry . . . sorry."

Out on the street the marquee proclaims:

JOSEPH DUDDY PRESENTS
THE NEW MUSICAL HIT
"GETTING GRACIE'S GARTER"

And under the marquee you will see, if you look hard enough, a little man in slightly threadbare clothing. He is sitting on a fire hydrant, puffing an eight-cent cigar and gazing wistfully at the twinkling lights. He is Joseph Duddy.

A friend passes by, "Congratulations, Joe! The show's in like a thief! Understand you've got a quarter-million-dollar advance sale."

"Yeah," murmurs Joe. "By the way, could you let me have a 10-spot till Saturday?"

Joe Duddy isn't kidding. Though for six months he's knocked his brains out to produce the town's biggest musical hit, he could conceivably starve to death before he collects a buck profit.

Most of us fancy the big Broadway producer as a suave, nattily tailored devil who operates from a plushy office with a portable chromium bar.

The average producer is a plain, down-to-earth sucker who buys his clothes in the bargain basement and seldom goes out with chorus girls because they always want to eat at expensive places like Schrafft's. As for his office—it is apt to be a cubicle over a dime-a-dance joint.

Let us follow Joe Duddy step by step and see just how and why he produced his musical hit when he might have employed his efforts in some more conservative field such as horse racing.

It all began six months ago. Joe is sitting in his bare little office reading a musical-comedy script. Joe likes the basic idea of the script—it is about love. He digs up $500 as an option on it, gets half-promises from a decent composer and a name comic.

Now for the Touch

JOE STARTS the Big Job—scraping up the dough. For about two months he hustles around from prospect to prospect, talking up the musical, painting lurid pictures of tremendous profits. Little by little he collects what he needs: a thousand from a waiter at Lindy's, three thousand from his Uncle Ed back in Indianapolis, five thousand from a girdle manufacturer in Hoboken, 10 thousand from a professional "angel" (there are such people and they are very canny), 20 thousand from a movie company, five hundred from his liquor-store owner,

The Hollywood Wire

Irene Will Surprise David And Daddy With 'Streetcar'

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31.—When Irene and David Selznick separated, I'm sure neither of them dreamed that Irene would be giving her former husband—and her father, Louis B. Mayer—competition. But that's what she will do when she produces the picture, "A Streetcar Named Desire." Elia Kazan will direct. Incidentally, Bette Davis turned down that play because she didn't want to return to the stage at this time. I daresay she is sorry.

Walter Huston is being paged by Norman Krasna and Irving Berlin for their play, "Star on My Shoulder," which will be produced by Rogers and Hammerstein, and directed by Josh Logan. The story is about a retired admiral, who starts to stagnate, then buys a candy store in Brooklyn so he can be back with the boys, whom he misses. Irving has written 10 songs for the play. Krasna, who says he has never worked with anybody who had as much vitality as Berlin, is plumb worn out.

Has it been told that Berlin's "This Is the Army" grossed $16,000,000 and $10,000,000 was turned over to Army relief? Name me any other man—or business—that has equalled that contribution.

Brazilian Bombshell

WHEN Joe Pasternak saw Carmen Miranda in "A Date With Judy," he signed her immediately for "Ambassador to Brazil," in which she will play herself, and use her own name. Miranda shook the stuffin' out of rugged Wally Beery in a dance routine for "Date With Judy" . . . Jean Heremans, Belgian fencing champion, was brought here to teach Gene Kelly and Van Heflin how to handle their swords in "The Three Musketeers" and ended up getting a choice role in the picture. Metro has quite a cast for that: Lana Turner, June Allyson, Gene Kelly, Van Heflin, Frank Morgan, Vincent Price, Keenan Wynn and Frances Gifford.

Bob Montgomery bought "Come Be My Love" from Universal International, and will make it as an independent picture. The film will start in April with Bob both directing and starring in it. Bob Carson, who wrote the original, is adapting it for the screen.

Eugene O'Brien, matinee idol of the silents, is out of the hospital and back home. His brother, an eminent doctor from Chicago, is here with him . . . Dorothy Gish is in New York's Presbyterian Hospital. When Lillian Gish finishes her present stint in New York, she and Dorothy will be co-starred in a play, which John Gielgud will direct. Cecil Beaton is doing the costumes . . . The former Mrs. D. W. Griffith also is ill in New York with pneumonia . . . Greer Garson sent Deborah Kerr, whose baby arrived last month, an antique cradle filled with roses, with this note: "Keep it filled" . . . Ronnie Reagan got a new Cadillac for his birthday. On it was a card signed by his two children, but everybody knows Jane Wyman gave it to him.

That's Gratitude

JEAN NEGULESCO brought in "Johnny Belinda" for $1,300,000—nearly $250,000 under budget. Then 10 days before Christmas, he was laid off by Warners and hasn't worked since. If that's gratitude, we should find a new meaning for the word. I'm told by those who have seen it that "Belinda" is one of the most sensitive, beautiful and artistic pictures ever made.

King Vidor wants to direct "The Fountainhead," if Warners ever get around to making it . . . John McPartland, who wrote "Portrait of an American Communist" for Life, has been asked by two publishers to expand it into a novel, which he is doing.

Received a letter from a man who claims to have read a portion of the book by the 10 unfriendly witnesses in the probe of film reds. Wrote he: "If Jack Warner doesn't sue for libel, it will be a miracle."

Bing Crosby wheeled in a new television set to Dorothy Lamour on the "Let's Fall in Love" set, as an added bonus from him and Bob Hope for "Road to Rio." Kirk Douglas squared his debt with Katherine Cornell. It was she who loaned him $4000 to finance his trip to Hollywood, although he had been only an off-stage echo in one of her plays.

Jim McGuiness tells me he has no intention of putting the life of Jeanne Eagles on the screen. How Jeanne's life could be made into a movie, I wouldn't know. She was an exciting actress, but so much of her story couldn't be told.

Before Ethel Barrymore gives up the stage entirely, I wish she would do Ibsen's "Ghosts," with Burgess Meredith . . . Congratulations to Henry Fonda and the play, "Mr. Roberts." They are both smash hits . . . A wise man said to me the other day: "Every top producer in Hollywood should be forced to take a sabbatical leave of absence and live in a small town in the Middle West. They could learn much by finding out how people behave in small towns. The Midwest has been called 'the bread basket of the Nation.' It also puts the icing on Hollywood's cake; so we should know more about it and its people." To which, I say amen.

'Irene and I'

IRENE DUNNE and husband, Dr. Frank Griffin, are planning a trip to Paris in June. Irene and I sailed together on the first trip of the Queen Mary in 1936. She got to London in time to take a bow with Paul Robeson for "Showboat." Later we all went to a supper party given for the cast. It was during that visit that Irene went to Paris to talk about doing Madame Curie's life on the screen. She turned it down, thinking it would not make an exciting picture . . . Dr. Griffin told me how he became a theater exhibitor in Las Vegas, and what headaches he had. He built an air-conditioned theater there, then had to buy every theater in town to get first-run pictures. It is quite a story. He also built hundreds of houses for workers. According to law, he could sell them for only $5300, but the new owners could sell them for double the price—which they did.

Darryl Zanuck is trying to buy Donald Buka's contract from Howard Hughes. What has that fellow got? . . . Leslie Brooks stepped out of Columbia and into "Dynamite" for Pine and Thomas.

Danilova, lovely star of the Ballet Russe, will appear here this week

Guest Stars Should Stay Home More!

By John Crosby

RADIO performers are rushing about as guest stars on other radio programs with a magnificent disregard of the law of diminishing returns.

In a survey made earlier, I discovered there were 155 guest stars on 132 network and 17 local programs in a 76-day period. Leading the parade were Beryl Davis and Kay Kyser, who made five guest appearances. Close behind were Bing Crosby, Vic Damone, Eddie Cantor and Alan Young, with four apiece.

All this scurrying around by performers who have their own shows is making it difficult for the listener to determine which day of the week it is. On a recent Wednesday, Abe Burrows, a Saturday man, appeared on "Duffy's Tavern" at 9 p. m. (EST); Danny Thomas, a Friday man, appeared on Crosby's show at 10, and Garry Moore, a Sunday man, and Red Skelton, a Tuesday man, appeared on Jimmy Durante's show at 10:30. (The last case was an emergency. Durante was in the hospital.)

The average listener—or at any rate, this listener—gets enough of Red Skelton on his own program without being subjected to him on everyone else's.

Another Thing

THERE is one other rather ominous trend in the guest-star racket. The other night Burns and Allen appeared as guests of Bing Crosby. This was one of the transcribed programs made before the Petrillo ban on recordings.

At the time, Crosby was turning out discs like doughnuts. He succeeded in transcribing himself up to March 17. (After that, if Petrillo hasn't relented, Crosby will appear live.)

Crosby must have been a very busy man during this particular transcription—perhaps he was making two of them at once—because he barely appeared at all on his own program. Burns and Allen did about 80 per cent of the work and Crosby interjected himself only long enough to sing a song or two.

If a trend like that is allowed to continue to its logical conclusion, the star of the show won't appear at all, just the guests. The star will be off guesting on someone else's program, possibly that of the performer who is taking his place.

Blizzards to Order

Snow Gadget Enters Race For an Oscar

By Aline Mosby

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—The glittery movie stars aren't the only nail-chewers in these pre-Academy Award days. Up for an Oscar along with Rosalind Russell and Ronald Colman is a snow machine.

And the two men who invented the snow machine are just as twitchy as the movie stars. In fact, the Oscar that the unknowns are praying for is tougher to snare than the actors' award.

It's for the best technical advancement in the picture business.

The guys in the studios' gadgets department haven't thought up anything good enough to win that Oscar since 1939. There've been second and third prizes for wind machines and such. But first prize—the gold Oscar—has been skipped.

This year Messrs. Marty Martin and Jack Lannan of the RKO special effects department figure they have the winner. A machine that makes blizzards at the drop of a snowflake on the hottest day in sun-fried California.

This snow looks, feels and smells like real snow. It melts on the hero's padded shoulders as he strides from the storm into the heroine's bedroom.

Lannan's so nervous about that Oscar he can't keep his mind on the falling buildings he's faking for a movie now.

Snowbound actors first had to sneeze their way through flurries of feathers. Then came the cornflake era. Three hundred tons of breakfast food were crunched, minus sugar and cream, beneath movie stars' galoshes every year.

"We'd seen a newsreel about a new Navy fire extinguisher," explained Lannan. "The extinguishing fluid looked like snow when it was sprayed on a ship's deck."

"The Navy told us where to get the fluid. We mixed it with air and water in a special machine, and blew it on the set through a fan."

In a trice, Jimmy Stewart and the rest of the cast were gaping at the first nearly-real indoor snowfall.

They decided not to even patent their snow secret. They gave it away so the other studios could have good snow, too.

"All we want is credit for originating the idea," said Lannan.

And, uh, maybe an Oscar, too.

Eleven Years After

Gershwin Rhapsody Lives

By Charles Honce

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (AP).—Are you still playing, singing or listening to the music of George Gershwin?

The chances are that the answer is yes, since Gershwin's music is more popular today—almost 11 years after the composer's death—than ever before.

Can it be possible that the onetime tin pan alley tunesmith, who died tragically young at 38, will turn out to be America's most enduring composer? Consider this:

Probably the most widely known and popular modern composition by an American is a Gershwin work.

That number is "Rhapsody in Blue."

The subject is particularly apropos at this time because the "Rhapsody" will have a birthday on February 12—its twenty-fourth. That is pretty close to the age of the composer when he hurriedly turned it out on commission from Paul Whiteman in 1924.

The piece hit the critics like a ton of brick. It hit the general public even harder. Today it is probably the biggest platter seller among concert pieces by a native American; it is a constant favorite on the air; it is widely performed by orchestras, and it is popular with most pianists.

The "Rhapsody" placed both second and third in Billboard's recent compilation of 1947's "top selling classical record albums over retail counters," based on weekly reports from 1000 retailers.

The number one item was Rachmaninoff's "Concerto No. 2 in C Minor." The second place recording was that of the Philadelphia Orchestra, directed by Eugene Ormandy and with Oscar Levant at the piano. The third place recording was by the man who started it all—Paul Whiteman.

Died in 1937

GERSHWIN died in Hollywood of a brain tumor on July 11, 1937. He was born in Brooklyn September 26, 1898, and so would have been only 49 today.

It is idle to speculate what heights he might have scaled had he been spared for 11 more years of composition. In a comparatively brief career he was able to win a unique place in American music. While his "Second Rhapsody" (1931) is a comparatively minor effort, and his "Cuban Overture" (1934) is no great shakes among his larger works, he actually was at the peak of his powers in his last major production. This was the folk opera, "Porgy and Bess" (1935).

It was only 11 years before Porgy that he sounded his first great musical challenge. And there is no doubt that that earlier date—February 12, 1924—was a momentous occasion in the history of American music. For it was on this Lincoln's birthday afternoon that Paul Whiteman elected to present his jazz concert in Aeolian (not Carnegie) Hall.

The program included a new and graceful "suite of serenades" by Victor Herbert and examples of jazz in a variety of forms. But what made the afternoon memorable was the "Rhapsody."

Historians of the occasion record that Whiteman spared no expense to put a top hat on jazz. From his augmented orchestra down to the program book the concert cost $11,000. Whiteman's loss, in spite of the fact that the auditorium could have been packed many times over, amounted to $7000.

Scared to Death

WHITEMAN faced the loss of the money with far more equanimity than the thought of facing his very distinguished audience. In short, he was just about scared to death.

Whiteman came by his agitation honestly enough. In addition to Victor Herbert, musical notables present included Walter Damrosch, Heifetz, Godowsky, Kreisler, McCormack, Rachmaninoff, Sousa and Stokowski, as well as all the first-string music critics.

There have been several versions of the composition and scoring of the "Rhapsody." The most romantic is that George forgot all about the business until he happened to read in a newspaper column that he was supposed to be busily engaged on a symphonic work. Then, with only ten days to go, he plunged in.

Actually, Gershwin spent more time than that, but the fact remains that it was a hurry-up struggle, that Ferde Grofe, who was responsible for the orchestration, literally pulled the manuscript page by page from the composer's hand, and that on the night of February 12 there still were a few blank spots in the piano sections. But Gershwin was to be at the piano and could take care of that.

At the time of Gershwin's death in 1937 critics debated whether his eventual fame would stem from the musical comedy stage or the concert hall. The record shows that such orchestral works as the "Rhapsody," the "Concerto," "An American in Paris," and the "Porgy and Bess" music are head and heels in front of the greater part of the work Gershwin did in musical comedy.

It also is somewhat odd that of the hundreds of songs Gershwin wrote for Broadway, probably not more than a score are heard to any great extent today.

Apparently the true Gershwin addict likes a mixture of the composer's heavier and lighter pieces. Seventeen thousand such Gershwinites annually pack Lewisohn Stadium in New York on all-Gershwin nights.

'Manhattan' Revue Scored as a Hit

By Jack O'Brian

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (AP).—"Make Mine Manhattan," the delightful new revue, is a hit . . . It took in $36,200 during its first full week, $900 over capacity . . . The extra, of course, caused by standees . . . Producer Joseph M. Hyman is getting set to rake in a respectable fortune, for the show breaks even at $25,000 a week, leaving $11,200 clear profit.

At such a rate, it will take only 13 weeks of capacity business to pay off its original cost of $143,000 . . . add to Hyman's fiscal satisfaction the fact that he could not interest several usually more astute play backers in his project before the show opened here . . . He was forced to scrape the bottom of the family piggy bank in order to dredge up enough cash to bring it in.

His total interest in the show is 66 per cent! . . . According to our office abacus, after bills are paid a neat and nifty $7392 a week will be his end . . . and with an advance sale of more than 300,000 already stashed away in the till, Joe's not worrying.

CUFF STUFF: The management of "Strange Bedfellows" pronounces that laugh-laden item a hit, too . . . "Crime and Punishment," the Dostoievsky melodrama at the National Theater which was scheduled to close, has been given a few weeks' grace because of the lofty all-around co-operation of the folks concerned . . . the unusually high—for a straight play—weekly running cost of $19,500 was swiftly forcing the drama to fold, but there has been a realignment of expenses . . . concessions made by actors, the adaptor (Rodney Ackland) and the theater owners (the Shuberts) reduced the weekly "nut" to $10,000.

A tour of leading college and university towns is in the works for "Lamp at Midnight," an off-Broadway production of New Stages, Inc., one of the bustling Greenwich Village drama projects . . . Theater Arts Magazine has been bought by Alexander S. Ince, president of Stage Publications, Inc. . . . Ince's Stage Magazine and Theater Arts are being merged and Charles MacArthur, playwright and screen scripter, will be editor-in-chief . . . first issue is due in April.

BACK FOR A BRIEF VISIT: Jerry Ross, a Tech High graduate and GW alumnus who went on to dancing in the New York musicals, returns to his hometown Tuesday evening, February 13, as guest artist with Evelyn Davis and her Dance Playhouse Group at Lisner Auditorium. Miss Davis promises new works and dance revivals in this program, her first of the new year

'Blossom Time' Opens At National Next Week

NEXT Sunday evening, "Blossom Time" opens its annual engagement at the National Theater. The attraction will play the entire week, including Sunday evening, February 15.

The Shuberts have assembled a cast headed by Everett Marshall to sing the melodies of Sigmund Romberg out of Franz Schubert. In addition to Marshall, Anthony Blair, Marian Stevens, Harold R. Brown, Elizabeth Houston, Rosalie Lynn, Pat Boyer, Zella Russell and Harry K. Morton will be seen in Domeyer's Viennese drawing room.

Marshall has served brilliantly in the Metropolitan Opera House and scored in George White Scandals and other musical comedy ventures. Blair has served as a comedian in innumerable Broadway and Hollywood adventures. Marian Stevens, though only 19, has won critical acclaim for her fine work in the role she is playing this year.

Zella Russell and Harry K. Morton, call them Mr. and Mrs. off stage, have played continuously in virtually every major musical comedy ever produced. Besides being Mrs. Krantz in the current edition of "Blossom Time," Miss Russell also staged the operetta.

The music has been "Blossom Time's" elixir. The highlights of the Schubert-Romberg collaboration are "Serenade," "Song of Love," "Tell Me, Daisy," "Lonely Heart" and "Ave Maria."

Ballad 'But Beautiful' Looks Like a Hit Tune

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (AP).—"But Beautiful" is a new ballad getting the style of treatment which just about insists that it become a hit tune. Frank Sinatra has a particularly good recording on the Columbia label, the reverse being "If I Only Had A Match," a bouncy ditty; both should be popular with disc fans.

Margaret Whiting, one of the best young feminine singers—and daughter of the late, talented song writer Dick Whiting—also has waxed "But Beautiful" for Capitol records, the other side of the Whiting version being that British import, "Now Is The Hour," another hit parade sure shot.

Tex Beneke and his orchestra give it more or less routine treatment, on an RCA-Victor platter. The best side of this particular "B.B." record being the flipover, a bright, bouncy, "You Don't Have To Know The Language."

FOR Columbia, Dinah Shore attaches her thoroughly controlled tones to "I'll Always Be In Love With You" and "In A Little Book Shop."

That estimable singing group, the Charioteers, somewhat belatedy intone a tune called "What Did He Say," (sub-titled "The Mumble Song") which chronicles the vocal limpings of an unintelligible comic strip character no longer in existence; the other side is more like it: "Oooh' Looka There, Ain't She Pretty"; neat and harmonic; for Columbia.

Still counting the cash from his "Too Fat Polka," Arthur Godfrey is in there punching again for Columbia records, this time with "Slap Her Down Agin, Paw," and "I'd Give a Million Tomorrows," both naturals for the nickel trade.

Fellow who wrote "Near You" and made a tidy fortune thereby, Francis Craig, should be happy with what the Dinning Sisters have done, and dinned, with his latest, "Beg Your Pardon." The turnover is "Melancholy," also by the Dinnings, who evidently din for their dinner. And nicely too.

Lahr Loves His Work

first dramatic part—in a summer theater three years ago. New York's most chic producer, Jean Dalrymple, decided the 20-year-old comedy still had Broadway appeal. It lasted over a year on 44th st. and then started out for a 10-week tour three weeks ago.

Already, success in Philadelphia and Baltimore has been such that Miss Dalrymple is working on a route that will take Lahr to the coast.

Which is fine for Bert, who likes to work, for audiences who like to laugh, but it does seem a bit rough on Mrs. Lahr, whose husband isn't too fond of air travel for his wife.

If you see her limping between the Carlton, Harvey's and the National this week, don't blame it on travel conditions. The lady would go skiing.

New Yorkers Yelling Over D. C.'s Tyner

By Bob Considine

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (INS).—Evalyn Tyner is an ex-landlady of mine. She and her husband Ford Minnick ran the Washington Hotel named 2400 Sixteenth. Evalyn, who completes the current Maisonette show, is the greatest pianist in the popular field today.

That may be a broad statement, if Evalyn will pardon the expression. But not too broad. They yelled when my ex-landlady stood up from her piano that opening night in New York a couple of weeks ago.

She's a kid from Kokomo, Ind., and got her start around the Barbecue Belt. And to demonstrate that this is still a land of wondrous opportunity Evalyn went to play with Xavier Cugat, Hans Kindler's National Symphony in Washington, and the Cleveland Symphony.

She still holds the record for consecutive appearances at the Waldorf and dreams some day of playing for Tony DeMarco, the Buffalo Kid who is the most graceful dancer in the world. Her music and his patent leathers—reinforced by those of his vivacious wife. Sally—would make a super combination.

Mrs. Teddy Hayes, the former Virginia Howard of the Follies, was present at the opening of the perfect show put on by my ex-landlady and when Evalyn rolled into one of her numbers Mrs. Hayes noticed a remarkable thing.

The musicians in Milt Shaw's band—which plays behind Evalyn—were rapt and silent. Even the trap drummer had dropped his clubs and sat there, jaw agape.

"You'll never see that again as long as you live," Virginia whispered. "When a background musician hesitates to cut in, that's genuine news. And when they listen to the star, you've really seen something, Mac."

Evalyn lights out for home in Arlington, Va., every now and then. Every Friday her 11-year-old boy, Wendall Minnick, comes down from Connecticut where he is in school, and she takes him back.

On Christmas Eve, Evalyn suddenly said to herself: "What the devil am I doing working on a night like this," and flew to Washington to trim the boy's tree.

A great gal!

Effort Is Very Well, But—

When Is a Singer Ready to Appear?

By Paul Hume

THIS isn't the piece we had planned for this Sunday's column. But Washington had a crisis this week. Nothing political, no great economic matter, but another of those musical pangs which may be of birth, or just ulcers.

FARRAR

There are now three opera companies in Washington, each with the avowed intent of producing opera of various kinds and in varying forms. The Washington Opera Guild, focus of the recent crisis, selected 80 Washington singers last summer and cast them in the roles of Puccini's three one-act music dramas, "Il Tabarro," "Suor Angelica" and "Gianni Schicchi." The auditions were commendably open to the public, and it was announced that a "music director of the Metropolitan" would judge the singing. The judge turned out to be Anton Schubel, who was for one season a member of that opera company. His singing that year was confined to the smallest role, that of the sergeant, in "La Boheme."

The three short Puccini operas were picked because "the critics want something different." They are also considered, though incorrectly, easier than many operas. (For the record, let's point out that the 1946 Metropolitan revival of "Tabarro," with no less than Albanese, Tibbett and Jagel, was a very pale affair. And a further note is the statement of Rosa Raisa, one of the two greatest Italian dramatic sopranos of the past generation, that Suor Angelica was one of the most difficult roles in her large repertoire. These were the vehicles selected for the young singers' operatic debuts.)

Miss Dorothy Remington, artistic director of the Washington Opera Guild, has said, "These are young, inexperienced singers. We are giving them a chance to become better ones by presenting them to the public."

Highly Involved Form

MAY WE point out the fallacy of such a policy. Opera is a highly involved form, requiring some acquaintance with the techniques of singing, acting and all-around musicianship. Young singers do indeed need and deserve public hearing, but not until they are ready.

The dress rehearsal of the Puccini operas was carried on in a manner to freeze your blood, if you realized that the performance was to take place the following night. The stage director roamed the stage, placing his singers, who were trying to sing at the same time.

The artistic director wandered on and off the stage, which held little scenery, no props and showed few lighting cues. The orchestra, because of the design of the pit available, was divided into two parts, one of which was up on the stage with the singers! Minor roles for the operas had been cast within less than one week of performance time. One role was actually filled the night of the dress rehearsal, although two complete casts were announced last summer.

Let us turn our attention to another group, the Columbia Light Opera Company. They have announced a performance of Bizet's "Carmen" for late spring, with Washington singers to surround an imported title-roler. At their auditions recently, there was no score of "Carmen" available and singers were auditioning with such appropriate ditties as "The Lord's Prayer" or thereabouts.

Then there is the National Civic Opera Group of most recent conception, determined (mistakenly in our opinion) on opera in English. Since they have so far made no public moves, they have committed no public errors. We trust they will read, profit and take heed from their less fortunate predecessors.

Opportunity Vital

WHERE does all this sound and fury lead? The most important thing is that there should be opportunities for young singers to learn all the facets of their art. They should be able to learn to sing first of all, and this seems to be difficult, even in a city overflowing with those who claim to be voice teachers. Then they should be able to study with someone who knows something about opera staging and conduct.

And finally they should have the chance to sing works within their capabilities, after proper preparation and not at a $3 top when for the same price one could be listening to the National Symphony or Licia Albanese. (This is another plug for a fine conservatory here.)

Those who refer over and over to the many tiny municipal opera houses which dot Europe, giving young singers many chances to become experienced in stage conduct and opera repertoire, forget utterly the routine through which those singers go before they set foot on any stage.

Observe the Stars

TAKE time out to read the biographies of Lotte Lehmann, Geraldine Farrar, or for that matter, Rise Stevens, to find out how much one needs to know before trying even the small roles. How can a singer expect to carry a role, large or small, when the sound of the orchestra so thoroughly confuses him that he loses his place, forgets his part and stops dead in his vocal tracks. We have said before, and apparently must repeat more than once: A singer must be a musician, too. He should know how to play at least one instrument, preferably the piano, enough to read, to count, to keep time and to have some conception of the structure of a musical composition.

As for those who decide to give young singers a chance, they had better make sure that it is the young singers they have at heart and not their own interests as singers, teachers or social climbers. They might see to it that singers and conductors are acquainted with each other months in advance and that the place selected for their productions is adequate in all respects.

It would help if they would adopt an unpolitical policy of intellectual and musical honesty in matters of casting, selecting stage director and conductor and in every way possible set matters on the highest plane from the beginning. These are not things that take money. These take artistic and personal integrity.

Musical Menu

Ballet Russe Here 3 Days This Week

ANOTHER ballet company moves in this week, Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo, with the National Symphony, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Better call soon for tickets.

Weather postponements last week canceled concerts by the Ajemian Sisters at the Chevy Chase Women's Club, and by Helen Janov, violinist. Miss Janov may be heard at a later date. The Ajemians will play at 2:30 this afternoon at the club.

Francesca Kaspar Lawson, soprano, assisted by Mrs. C. Augustus Simpson, will give a short recital Wednesday afternoon in the Arlington Community House. She will sing Czechoslovak folk songs, and the Gypsy Songs of Brahms. The time is a matter for research.

This afternoon's National Symphony concert finds Dr. George Wargo, one of Washington's finest violists and musicians, conducting the world premiere of his first symphony. It also brings Arnold Eidus, young violinist, to his first Washington appearance.

Joseph Szigeti has included the new Prokofieff violin sonata in his program for February in Constitution Hall. He describes it as "terrific" and said after its premiere in San Francisco that he thinks it got under the skins of the audience, in an inescapable manner. Prokofieff and Szigeti are a fine combination.

The King-Smith School announces with reasonable pride that Roy Harris will be here Thursday evening at 8:45 to lead a forum on modern music, using some of his own works as illustrations. This is another of the series on contemporary art with which that school has been raising Washington's sights to better levels. P. H.

Taking Pictures

Join a Club; Competition Is a Spur to Top Technique

By Ollie Atkins

"Rubba-dub-dub" took first honors in the children's classifications for Henry Gichner, 6115 33d st. nw., in a picture contest conducted by the Fotocraft Club of the YMCA, 12th st. nw. branch

AS AN AMATEUR photographer, is it a good idea for you to join a camera club? By all means, yes.

Your interest will maintain a steady pace if you join a club and your results will improve as you strive to better yourself and see what other clickers are doing.

You will have some form of regular competition and your pictures will be judged by others' eyes, which will make you work harder to present better ideas, accurate technique and beautiful, large prints well mounted for display.

One objection to camera groups is that the ordinary club includes membership from rank beginner to advanced amateur, thus creating a problem in extremes. Best solution is to classify the members into beginners, intermediate and advanced groups. You will find that nobody will care to have himself underrated and will insist on being reclassified as soon as he merits promotion.

Meetings must be held regularly and officers must strive to keep interesting programs on the docket.

Some groups make the mistake of having too many of their own members take over the program. Do this only in emergencies. Get your talent outside. For instance: invite a newspaper photographer; a society cameraman; a picture editor from a news service; a city editor; an artist; recognized "name" photographers representing studios and magazines; a sidewalk photographer might produce a humorous discussion of his problems; a police photographer could give a good talk; others are in the various military services.

Washington needs more and better camera clubs. Look around in your neighborhood and talk it over with your neighborhood camera shop. At present this city, which ranks high in picture-clicking population, has just a half dozen good camera clubs.

This column will welcome your notices and cooperate in every way possible to get your groups started and keep them going.

F. C. TAYLOR of 635 Keefer pl. nw. took first honors in the color class and grand prize of the show with his tinted photograph, "Freedom Journey," in a contest by the Fotocraft Club of the 12th st. YMCA.

Other winners included: "Rubba-dub-dub" (see picture above) by Henry Gichner, 6115 33d st. nw.; "Gwen," in the portrait class, by Paul M. Fowlkes, 108 53d st. ne.; "Woodland Monster," in the pictorial class, by William H. Underdue, 2510 Sheridan rd. se., and "Springtime," in the beginners class, by Dr. George W. Adams, 627 Kenyon st. ne.

Judges were James L. Allen, Albert J. Carter, George Tames, A. J. Wedderburn and this writer.

Classes in the spring semester of the Department of Agriculture Graduate School open tomorrow with seven courses of photographic studies offered to Government employes and others as far as facilities permit.

Opening today at the National Museum, 10th and Constitution ave. nw., for a month's showing is the first salon exhibit of the Naval Research Laboratory Camera Club. Besides club pictures a selection of prints made by some of the Navy's finest photographers will be displayed.

A slide show of 95 color pictures will be held in the main auditorium of the Museum at 2:30 p. m. the following Sunday afternoons: February 8, 15, 22 and 29.

Washington photographers having work published in the 1948 edution of U. S. Camera are: Herbert K. White, Walter Bordas, Thomas McAvoy, G. Bradford Kress, William J. Smith, Charles Gorry, Arthur E. Scott, Robert Brockhurst, Byron H. Rollins, Charles Corte and this writer.

Airborne picture makers will be interested in a new booklet entitled "Pictures from the Air with Your Camera" by the Eastman Kodak Co.

This well illustrated booklet will answer such questions as, "What is the best shutter speed for aerial photography on an air liner?" "Which side of the plane should I sit on?" "What exposure should I use for picture taking from the air" and "What filter should I use?"

All aspects of general aerial photography are discussed from picture taking with box cameras to color photography from the air. It is intended to be of assistance to the semi-professional photographer and private flier as well as to the casual air traveler.

Bradbury Heights Didn't Have a Station

But There's One BUZzin' Now

By Sonia Stein

IT WAS distressing—nay, unthinkable! A suburban community on the outskirts of Washington had no radio station of its own. To be sure the people in Bradbury Heights, Md., could tune in to any or all of the 13 standard band stations in this area, the six frequency modulation stations or the three television stations. But a station of their own, to serve the particular needs of that expanding community, they did not have.

GORDON SHAW

But take heart, cousin, there's one buzzin' out there now. WBUZ-FM has been on the air two weeks, the first full-time FM station in the Washington area. Futhermore, it went on the air, with enough commercials already contracted for to make it self-supporting from the first station identification at 7 a. m., January 18.

This claim to the station's financial wellbeing was made by A. K. Porter, assistant general manager of WBUZ-FM. He thinks there's a good possibility that this station is the only FM station in the country that's self-supporting.

Customary Thing

IT'S QUITE customary for radio stations which have AM and FM transmitters to offer their standard band sponsors the FM coverage free of charge.

Even the network sponsors are currently getting a break. The American Federation of Musicians contract with the networks which prevented duplication of shows on FM, expired last night. Now network affiliates which own FM stations can offer the duplicate coverage on FM at no extra cost to the sponsor.

Stations which are exclusively FM, such as WASH-FM here in Washington, just don't expect to be self-supporting for a while.

Reluctance on the part of the sponsors to buy FM programs is caused by no lack of enthusiasm for FM's static-free, high-fidelity qualities, but results from an unwillingness to advertise on a medium which reaches relatively few people.

(A Washington Post poll last September showed that there were 16,000 FM or AM-FM combination sets in the Washington and suburban area. The FM Association optimistically estimates between 35 and 40 thousand FM or combination AM-FM sets are in use in a slightly larger area at present.)

In addition to its happy commercial state, WBUZ-FM has had enough mail response from listeners to indicate a pretty good-sized audience, according to Gordon Shaw, program director for the station.

'Public Good'

AS A NEW station, with quite a bit of free time still available, and as a "community" station with Prince Georges County, Md., and the southeast section of Washington as its particular province, WBUZ-FM is opening its arms to community groups, clubs and such in need of air time. Any group with a story to tell (in the public good, that is) is invited to consult with Shaw. Amateur choral groups are also welcome.

Public service, which WBUZ-FM asserts it's up to (up to 40 hours a week), includes religious programs daily and Sunday.

Shaw also considers good entertainment part of public service in its way. Right now he's busy taking a measure of the musical tastes of the WBUZ-FM audience. "Preferences indicated by mail will certainly be reflected in the programming," he says.

Sounds Promising

PROGRAM-WISE, there's nothing startling going on at the station, but there are several shows which sound promising. On Sundays at 2:45 p. m. there is a "Little Red School House" program which is a essentially a children's amateur hour—for people who like that kind of thing.

"Fur, Feather and Fin" which starts today at 1 p. m. will be conducted by Margaret Hines who has almost 2000 birds on her Hyattsville bird farm. The program will deal with furry and finny creatures as well, and will include hints on how to choose a pet.

"Buzzin' with Freddie," the wake-up show from 7 to 9 a. m. and the bedtime "Slumber Hour" from 11 p. m. to midnight have the station personnel delighted.

Roberta Rule, who doubles in brass as secretary to the boss, has a daily Hollywood news show at 1:35 p. m. Muriel Evans, who once did a Hollywood news show for WINX, is now women's commentator at WBUZ-FM, eschewing household hints for suggestions on beauty and fashion, and reviews of books of particular interest to women.

A 1000-Watter

OPERATING at 96.7 mc, with its studios in the Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis Motor Lines terminal at 1510 Southern ave. in Bradbury Heights, WBUZ-FM is licensed as a 1000-watt station. Its owners, the Chesapeake Broadcasting Co., Inc. have filed petition for a sister standard band station and have their fingers crossed.

Officers of the company who own the controlling interest, are President A. B. Curtis, Vice President A. K. Porter, Secretary H. W. Berry, and Treasurer L. L. Altmann.

Porter came by the idea of a radio station honestly, having handled radio accounts for an advertising agency for years, and having been founder and dean of Southeastern University's radio department.

Altmann, who is president of the W., M. & A. Motor Lines, was a Navy radio man during the first World War. Feeling that a radio station could be a great asset to Prince Georges County, which he predicts to be the Washington suburb most likely to be built up next (having made a good start in that direction even during the war), he wasn't hard to persuade either.

Real Shortage Is in Receivers

Video Is Expanding To 59 More Cities

By Wayne Oliver

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (AP).—People in areas where television has not yet arrived have been asking, when do we get it? The answer for most of them is, it won't be long now.

The television situation in brief is this:

There are now 19 television stations on the air in 13 cities located in nine States and the District of Columbia.

Sixty-one other stations have construction permits. When they go on the air, television then will be available in 47 cities in 28 States and the District of Columbia.

At last count, there were 80 applications on file for still other stations. These include applications for 25 additional permits in cities that already have television or for which construction permits have been granted.

Thus television either has arrived or is in the works for 72 cities in 31 States and the District of Columbia. In other words, 59 additional cities have definite television plans. Many other applications are being prepared and the list grows from week to week.

Fifty by Year End

THAT doesn't mean that television will come overnight to most of the country. But it is just around the corner for a number of new areas and not far around the corner for others.

At least five new stations are expected to go on the air in a matter of days. The Television Broadcasters Association estimates that by midyear 35 to 40 stations will be on the air and that the number will rise to 50 by the end of the year.

Even now, the 19 stations already on the air reach only a small fraction of the potential total of television viewers in their areas because of the small number of sets in the public's hands.

Industry sources estimate those stations can be received in areas with a total of some 35 million population. But, the catch is, there are only enough sets for about one to one and one-half million persons.

Ten Million Increase

BECAUSE many of the stations going on the air in 1948 will be in areas already having one or more stations, only about ten million more persons will be brought within range of television. In 1949 the spread is expected to be much greater as stations start springing up in smaller communities.

To meet the demand for more transmitting equipment and more receiving sets, manufacturers are greatly expanding their television production facilities. A number of manufacturers are entering the field for the first time.

Last year, 178,000 television sets were turned out—a big gain ovr the 6476 of the previous year but still only a comparative handful. Industry leaders forecast 500,000 to 750,000 sets this year with much greater output in 1949.

Although higher priced sets are selling as fast as produced, manufacturers are devoting major attention to trying to bring prices down to mass market levels. Prices now range up to $2500 and more for de luxe sets with large screens, and down to $169.50 for table models with seven-inch picture tubes. Some manufacturers have promised even lower priced sets a little later, but the $100 set is not yet in sight.

Sponsors Loosen Up

TELEVISION brodacasters say the quality of video programs will improve rapidly as the number of sets increase and network facilities expand. Up to now, advertisers have been reluctant to pay to broadcast programs to mere handfuls of potential customers. Broadcasters have been operating in the red to establish themselves for the time when television will start paying off. They have had to hold down on program expense.

But in recent weeks sponsors have been moving into television in increasing numbers and the program situation has perked up.

Network facilities now extend from Washington to Boston, from New York to Schenectady and from Chicago to South Bend.

Industry leaders expect networks to develop along regional lines, with an eventual linking of Eastern, Midwestern and West Coast networks into coast-to-coast hookups.

Television broadcasters are agreed that 1948 is television's year. Some predict it will reach 500-million-dollar proportions before the year is out and that in five years—ten at most—it will attain the status radio enjoys now.

Mutual Keeps 476 Fingers On the Pulse

Mutual, which takes a teasing for having so many stations (476) making up its network, has the last laugh now. For its new "Radio Newsreel," which begins tomorrow night at 9:15 over WOL, Mutual can call on all of its affiliates to gather on-the-spot news.

People who make the news will be asked to appear on the show whether the news took place in New York or Grinders Switch.

In addition to this "news for the people, by the people," other domestic and foreign news will be provided on the nightly show by a regular network staff.

WOL Beginning U. N. Dramas Tomorrow Night

A six-broadcast series of dramatic programs highlighting the least publicized activities of the United Nations organization begins tomorrow night at 11:30 over WOL Mutual.

The first broadcast will feature Edward G. Robinson as dramatic narrator. The subsequent broadcasts, which are scheduled at 11:30 p.m. Wednesday and Friday night of this week, and Monday, Wednesday and Friday night of next week, will star Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., George Murphy, William Bendix and Ronald Reagan.

Based on actual UN activities and prepared by the UN staff, the series is to present to the public, phases of UN work which are seldom publicized because they lack immediate news value or color.

Jack Benny, caught here talking to his girl friend, Gladys Zybisco, will travel in higher society tonight at 7 when the Ronald Colmans visit his WRC-NBC show for the eighth time

WQQW Starting 'Lighter Side' Program Tomorrow Morning

REMEMBER when WQQW's listeners flooded the station with protests because it tried to serve up popular music in the early a. m.? Delighted to find out to a fare-thee-well what the listeners wanted, WQQW put them back on a Bach and Beethoven for breakfast regime.

WARREN

However, for a period of three months it has been offering popular music in the midday. Listener response to that has been watched carefully and as of Monday at 11 a. m. that period undergoes a metamorphosis.

Charles Warren, disc jockey for "Variety Hall" which has been heard from 11 a. m. to 2 p. m., will continue as platter man for the new "Charles Warren Show" which is subtitled "Music on the Lighter Side."

The change in mood won't be major. This one period in WQQW's musical day not devoted to classics will remain nonclassical. But it will now be a kaleidoscope of show tunes and sweet music which has been popular over a period of years—anything sweet and light that is NOT, repeat NOT, one of the top 50 tunes of the week.

This will be a refuge from all the platter shows which make a special point of playing all the hits tunes.

Classical music fans seem to like musical comedy tunes that aren't hackneyed, Dave Rose and Morton Gould stuff, and the old favorites like "Stardust," "Begin the Beguine" and "My Blue Heaven," according to Warren.

And pops and jazz addicts seem to like them, too. They catch the overlap from each extreme in taste.

Warren, who became an announcer at 15, doing his homework between announcements, intends to be "an unobtrusive visitor in the listener's living room," but will offer some chatter and commercials of a "sophisticated type." The sponsors will be kidded as is the current radio custom but in a "dignified manner," he says.

The music on the show will be lined up this way: Old standards with a few novelties (even Spike Jones!) from 11 to noon, then an hour of sweet music by Kostelanetz, David Rose, Harry Horlich and such, and musical comedy tunes from 1 to 2 p. m. "I promise never to play 'Racing With the Moon' by Vaughn Monroe," says Warren, "and no Carmen Lombardo records."

ALTHOUGH the four winners of the "I Speak for Democracy Contest" turned out to be very attractive young women, they were judged entirely on the material they had written and how they read it. The judges didn't even see the contestants, since the five-minute dissertations were transcribed by stations in the contestant's home communities and submitted to the judges in that form.

If the voice quality and writing ability of the winners, which counted in the judging as much as the thought content, took the coveted $500 cash prizes and the laurels away from the many boys who were among the 20,000 original contestants, what makes radio so certain that women belong on radio programs beamed exclusively at women?

Since the contest was sponsored by the National Association of Broadcasters, as well as the Radio Manufacturers Association and the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, maybe the point will hit a mark.

The contest is scheduled to be continued next year. Meantime, the United States Office of Education is making transcriptions of the winning talks in this year's contest available to schools throughout the county.—S. S.

Biscuit Eaters Move to S. and W.

WOL's daily brunch show at 10:30 a. m. will begin broadcasting from the S & W Cafeteria tomorrow. Coffee and biscuits will be served as usual.

A law, prohibiting the giving of prizes where liquor is sold, gummed up the works at the Neptune Room where the show started out, although WOL guests were treated only to java and hot buttered buns.

British 'Tracy' Is Cooled Off

London, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Britain's blood and thunder radio serial Detective Dick Barton was ordered recently to be a little more refined and intelligent.

The fictitious two-fisted Barton—Britain's Dick Tracy—hereafter cannot mention sex or drink or resort to cuss words. All fisticuffs except "clean socks in the jaw" were ordered eliminated from the script.

BBC ruled that Barton no longer can use commando tactics in subduing criminals. It admitted that his enemies "have more latitude in behavior but may not inflict any injury or punishment which is basically sadistic."

Barton's behavior pattern as laid down by BBC provides that he must be intelligent as well as hard-hitting, that he use force only when normal peaceful means have failed and that he never commit an offense under the criminal code "no matter how desirable the means may be to justify the end."

The curtailed exploits of Barton still will be heard 15 minutes daily. Presumably Barton fan Herbert Morrison, lord president of the council, still will tune in.

Preview Tonight at National

New Acquisitions Displayed

By Jane Watson Crane

TONIGHT THE National Gallery is holding a special preview of the fifteenth and sixteenth century Italian and German paintings recently added to its collections through the gift of Mrs. Ralph Harman Booth of Detroit. These augment a previous donation of works from the Booth collection in 1942.

Though not a foregone conclusion, it is generally assumed that the era of large-scale private ownership of art is passing. The Booth collection, formed over a period of years by the late publisher and his wife, is in the grand tradition. The present gift, though relatively small numerically, fills several important gaps in the National Gallery's collection, notably the German paintings. The Giovanni Bellini "Madonna and Child" enriches the already sizable Italian section.

'A Prince of Saxony," by Lucas Cranach, the Elder, which is among new acquisitions being placed on display tonight at the National Gallery

What is there to offset the decline of princely private patronage? Paradoxically, American industry itself is one answer. With generous purchase policies, such firms as International Business Machines, Encyclopedia Britannica, and Pepsi-Cola are building up collections, mainly of contemporary art. But there is another element which has not been taken sufficiently into account—American colleges and universities. It is little recognized how many campus collections there are, and most of them in the growing stage. Some are dependent on gifts, but many now have special purchase funds.

AMERICAN University's Watkins Memorial Collection, one of the youngest, is probably the only one to have been started by artists. It had a dual purpose—to honor the memory of Law Watkins, teacher and painter greatly loved and respected, as well as to give inspiration and enjoyment to the students.

In Watkins Gallery, situated on the campus at Massachusetts and Nebraska aves., American University is now showing the collection, started in 1945 and since augmented. In his introduction to the catalogue Charles Seymour sums up the whole point of the enterprise: "What might have seemed but memory of a past is a future's promise."

The nucleus of the present group was formed by donations of work by artists, mainly of Washington, who were pupils, friends, and associates of Law Watkins.

Considering that Washington is rich in works of the past, the venture has so far wisely been limited to contemporary work. Recent additions by gift or purchase include oil paintings by Max Weber and Frank Gebhart, water colors by Jean Charlot, Romare Bearden, and Boardman Robinson, sculpture by Henry Kreis.

Representing original work of no set school, the modest beginnings of this collection are consistent with the ideas of the man they honor. As it grows, it can become a tremendous asset to the art department, established by Law Watkins and continued under William Calfee, which has already proved to be a creative force in the community.

Supplementing the main exhibit is a group of entertaining caricatures by Aline Fruhauf, formerly of New York and now living in Washington. In color and black and white, these are mainly studies of artist friends, many of them made while they were at work in their studios.

THE MEMBERS' show by the Society of Washington Artists at the Arts Club brings this veteran group once more to the fore. The show, of informal, intimate character, consists of paintings and sculpture, with about the usual division of landscape, still life, and portraiture. We enjoyed particularly Emilie Arlt's "Rainy Night," Helen Rennie's "Portrait of Helen," Arnold Hedin's "Meadows," Jessalee Sickman's "Bobby Soxers," and, for originality, Carnelli's "Temptation of St. Anthony." Among the small group of sculptures Clare Fontanini's wood-carving "Madonna," and Russell Houston's "Kneeling Woman" seemed to stand out.

Catholic University has launched an exhibition program with wood-carvings and paintings by Father Alexis Robertson, which may be seen in Salve Regina Building on the campus. Simple in design and ingenious in construction, these are works of considerable creative originality. Particularly notable are the drawings, the self-portrait as the Father remembers himself a decade ago, and "Black Virgin" I and II, the last two on composition board with improvised media.

Franz Bader of the Whyte Gallery and Bookshop, 1518 Connecticut ave. nw., is undertaking a new program of exhibitions by artists of Washington and vicinity which starts today. In the first show are featured new paintings by seven local artists—Robert Gates, Mitchell Jamieson, Sarah Baker, Bernice Cross, Edward Rosenfeld, John Gernand and Prentiss Taylor, all well known here.

Art Notes

'Pan Am' Has Works by Dosamantes

FRANCISCO DOSAMANTES, one of the younger generation of Mexican artists, is featured in a small one-man show at the Pan American Union. A protege of Diego Rivera, he has painted murals in the Mexican capital and other parts of the country. He is mainly known in the United States for his skillful engravings and other prints, which have been widely exhibited. After living for some time in New York, Dosamantes has returned to Mexico to complete a new set of murals in Michoacan. In the current exhibition the oils take precedence, but the few sketches and prints shown still have the greater flexibility and interest. Characteristic throughout is the strength and simplicity of the artist's drawing. The group will continue on view through February 8.

Other new openings include an exhibition of work by Negro artists of Washington at the Central Branch of the Public Library, and "New England Landscapes and Interiors," by Alice Coffin, at the United Nations Club, the latter for the benefit of Children's Hospital.

Opening this afternoon at Chequire House at 202 King st. in Alexandria is an exhibition of oils, drawings and water colors of Curacao painted by the young American artist, Scribner Ames, during a recent visit to the West Indies. Previously shown at the Cultur Centrum in Curacao, this is the first time the work has been on display in this country. To February 27.

Richard Lahey, principal of the Corcoran School of Art, will give three lectures in February on Tuesday evenings at 8:30 p. m. On February 3 the subject will be "Art in Everyday Life;" February 10, "Each Person Chooses His Own Art Collection;" February 17, "Reminiscences Concerning American Artists." Admission charge, 60 cents for each lecture. On February 6, also in the Corcoran Art School auditorium at 8:30 p. m., Curtis Cook and Charles Cook will give a lecture with motion picture illustrations on the process of offset lithography. No charge for admission.

Five artists from the District are represented in the 143d annual exhibition of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts in Philadelphia—painters W. A. Carnelli, Anthony Lauck and Dean Stambaugh; sculptors Heinz Warneke and Jean Donner Grove.

Record Player

Here's a Top Set if You Like Mahler

MAHLER: Symphony No. 5 in C Sharp Minor. New York Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra under Bruno Walter. Columbia 718. $10.85. Well, it's a lot of Mahler. If you like the Song of the Earth, or if you know the other late symphonies and like them, this will fit well with your record library.

WALTER

It takes just about an hour to play, and there are times during that hour when my mind wandered among such names as Wagner, Bruno Walter and Strauss. The orchestra is huge; the conception of the total work the same. The melodrama of the harsh, jagged sections seems to me more noise than form, more sound than shape. But the quieter spots, and particularly the profoundly moving adagietto (recorded once before by Walter and the Vienna Philharmonic) are truly beautiful.

In recording Columbia has succeeded brilliantly. It is a matter of highly individual preference to like Mahler. Make up your own mind.

BEETHOVEN: Symphony No. 4 in B Flat. Cleveland Symphony under George Szell. Columbia 705. $5.85. No great soul-searching here. If you don't like this symphony, you will when you know it. Like its wonderful partner, the sixth, the B Flat symphony of Beethoven is one of the gems of orchestral music. Szell is one of my favorite conductors, and here he and the Cleveland make a fine first joint appearance on records.

Columbia has always done wonders in recording this orchestra, and this set is a worthy successor to their great albums under Rodzinski. There is an early set of this work under Toscanini, and a much more recent one by Beecham. I like them all, yet prefer this to the rest. Try them out and see how you feel.

CHOPIN: Etudes. Alexander Brailowsky, pianist. Victor 1171. $9. Here finally are the Etudes of Chopin, in a complete, modern recording, performed in a manner to do them full justice. There are perhaps too many ways of playing Chopin. Certainly there are several interpretations which can be justified. I happen to like Brailowsky's work in these studies, and find the average level of performance very high.

No pianist has more experience or a larger following for his Chopin than the Russian pianist, who has often played the entire works of the Polish genius in public. The Etudes are for every serious piano student a continuing source of interest and a challenge to techniques. They are far more than that, however, containing every kind of melodic and harmonic device known to the second quarter of the nineteenth century.

Chopin was one of the greatest innovators for the piano, and these works display many facets of his talent. If you enjoy fine piano playing and Chopin, you are safe in acquiring these for your collection.

VERDI: Il Trovatore: Il Balen del suo Sorrise: also: Per Me Ora Fatale, and Nuns' Chorus. Leonard Warren, baritone, with RCA Victor Chorale, under Jean Paul Morel. Victor 11-9956. $1. Warren is the Met's leading Count Di Luna these days, and his rich voice is well suited to the part. Little dramatic expression comes out in these scenes, but for sure, dependable vocalism from a fine voice, Warren is an easy winner. The Nuns' Chorus is a welcome addition to a scene often recorded but seldom completed with the ladies' singing. Victor's surfaces seem to be improving.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Traffic Lights Will Soon Blink All Night Long

Several District Liners have complained recently about the hazards of night-time driving.

They point out that most of our traffic lights are turned off at 1 a. m., and that until 7 a. m. there's the constant danger that some irresponsible oaf will come charging out of a side street and cause an accident.

Traffic Director Keneipp tells me that he's well aware of the situation, and that some of our worst accidents have occurred during this period when most of the control signals are turned off.

As a result, he's planning a new approach to the problem. Instead of turning off the lights at 1 o'clock, he'll have them flash red in one direction, and amber in the other.

The flashing red lights will have the same force as stop signs, and will bring side street traffic to a halt when it approaches a main thoroughfare. The flashing amber along main streets will serve as a caution light at dangerous intersections.

When the flow of traffic becomes too heavy at any given corner, the regular lights will be kept in operation on a 24-hour basis (just as they are right now at some intersections).

District Liner Keneipp estimates that it will take several months of planning to put the new system into operation. Meantime he reminds us:

"Drive carefully and save a life. It may be your own."

PIED TYPE DEPT.

B. L. Tesh of 752 Silver Spring ave., Silver Spring, Md., found this startling bargain offered in one of our afternoon contemporaries:

"Ladies' coats and fur jackets, formerly sold for up to $9.95, now only $19.88."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three-month-old black kitten with white markings." (Oliver 9186).

"Housebroken female wire-haired terrier, 11 months old," (Owens 5746).

REBUTTAL

The veiled inference here that there really is a housing shortage brings this reply from Kent Godfrey of Falls Church, Va.:

"Permit me to say there is no housing shortage—only a rental shortage (due to ceilings artificially held).

"I have 50 houses for sale, priced in relation to food and clothing. You forget that bricklayers get $25 a day. Wages are up 110 per cent since 1938, houses 75 per cent."

MISCELLANY

A District Liner who lives in a boarding house reports that she recently expressed a preference for shredded wheat for breakfast. So now she gets it—one-half of a shredded wheat biscuit each morning. No wonder girls have such enormous appetites when they're being taken out to lunch . . . Speaking of food, Caroline Hunter of 1900 F st. nw. wonders why the Navy Department cafeteria displays a sign urging "Boys and Girls, Join the Clean Plate Club." Caroline says the idea is fine but aren't the patrons of the Navy cafeteria a bit too old to be called "boys and girls?" . . . Tokens for Children's Hospital have been received from Alphonse F. Brosky, 214 South Royal st., Alexandria, Va.; R. R.; Mrs. J. L. Austraw, 1714 North Wakefield st., Arlington, Va. (cash, too); O. K. Larson, 4401 28th pl., Mount Rainier, Md., and Paul Maxwell, composing room straw boss at The Washington Post . . . Thad Page of the National Archives is the latest to join the controversy over the origin of the "Not Drunk Is He" poem. Thad says the late Josephus Daniels and the late Senator Josiah Bailey both quoted the poem and credited it to Dean Henry Mordecai of the Duke University Law School. Anybody care to argue with an elder statesman, a Senator, a lawyer and an archivist?

PERSONAL NOTES

Ruth A. Falek, 966 N. Longfellow st., Arlington, Va.: I pose for the Weebee cartoons. Irwin's models are the pixies who use his drawing board as a playground.

Mrs. Donald E. V. Henderson, 4460 Greenwich pkwy. nw.: Joseph B. Irvine, chief of the Bureau of Vital Statistics, says 'taint so. The relative who authorizes cremation is given the ashes, and may dispose of them in whatever manner he wishes, or keep them.

Jerry Strong, WINX: Why don't you ever have a program of request numbers? I'd like to ask you to play hooky.

Elwin R. Main, 640 C st. ne.: Possibly it was another station. If the Library of Congress says Mr. Garfield was shot on the present site of the National Gallery of Art, I believe 'em.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

By noon or night, in restaurants,
Wherever I may be,
I find upon each bill-of-fare
For all to plainly see:
Vienna loaf, Salisbury steak,
Chopped sirloin or French roast,
And many other tempting things
Like ground beef served on toast;
A super-special chef's delight—
Quite tempting, I'll agree.
But when they're served I find that they FOREVER 'AMBURG me!

SAVED BY A COMMA

J. B. Jordan of Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va., writes that only a comma saves a Staunton junk agency from being self-confessed wastrels. The firm's sign reads:

"Klotz Brothers, Waste Materials of All Kinds."

That reminds me of the classic example of how a change in punctuation can completely alter the meaning of our words. Consider these two:

Woman! Without her, man is helpless.

Woman, without her man, is helpless.

QUICK BROWN FOX

Lyman L. Woodman of Greenbelt, Md., is intrigued by the things people write when they're testing typewriters.

While shopping for a new typewriter, Lyman noted the usual quick-brown-foxes and now-is-the-times. But he also spotted one machine on which somebody had written only half of the test line:

"Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid . . ."

The next shopper had finished the thought, on the next line, with:

". . . of the management of the Capital Transit Co."

Some cab driver, no doubt.

Memorial Stamp Ideas Piling Up

By William M. Stuart

ALTHOUGH several commemorative stamps have been approved for 1948, it is rather surprising that so many suggestions are still coming in. The suggestions include stamps for Wisconsin statehood, Will Rogers, dogs of World War II, the poet Lanier, Spanish-American War veterans, 100 years of peace between Canada and the United States, memorial for war dead, Marquis de Lafayette and the American Indian.

That is quite a list, and it will tax postal officials to render a satisfactory decision as to the stamps to be issued. Many of the suggestions have been before the Department for years, and several have been rather sharply turned down.

The law justly gives the Post Office Department the right to issue stamps, but it is not obligated to give its reasons. It is assumed by many that political pressure plays quite a part in its selections.

Indies Collection Wins

VALDEMAR Weiergang, of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., won a second award for his collection of Danish West Indies at the 1948 National Stamp Exhibition, sponsored by the Ridgefield Park Stamp Club, Inc., at Hackensack, N. J., January 15 to 18.

A. Halperson, of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., has received a first-day cover from Vienna, Austria, with two of the new Olympic Games commemoratives. The value is the 1sh. plus 50gr., bright blue, canceled January 18. The design of the stamp shows the Olympic fire coming from a sacrificial bowl atop a pedestal bearing the five-circle symbol of the Olympic Games. The stamp was designed by Alfred Chmielowski, engraved by Georg Wimmer and printed by the Austrian State Printing Works.

GI Franking Ends

THE free franking privilege to all members of the United States armed forces ended December 31. This privilege went into effect March 27, 1942, and men and women in the service simply had to write on their mail the word "free" in place of a stamp.

The dead letter sale of stamps, covers and coins will be held March 24 in room 3038, main Postoffice, North Capitol st. and Massachusetts ave. Postal officials will act as auctioneers. The sale will begin at 7 p. m. Lots will be on exhibition on Tuesday, March 23, in room 3083 from 7 to 10 p. m., and on the day of the sale from 9 a. m. until 4 p. m. Admittance to room 3083 will be by the G st entrance.

Numismatists' Meeting

THE Washington Numismatic Society will meet at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the National Museum, 10th st. and Constitution ave. nw.

The House has passed the joint resolution of Representative Robert J. Twyman of Illinois authorizing the issuance of a 5-cent stamp to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the settlement of the Swedish pioneers in the Midwest. The measure now goes to the Senate.

In his address at the first-day ceremonies of the 3-cent Gold Discovery Centennial Stamp, at Coloma, Calif., on January 24, Third Assistant Postmaster General Joseph J. Lawler said:

"There are many requests each year for stamp recognition, some of which carry great merit, but it is practicable to issue but 8 to 12 each year. The new stamp is worthy of what it recognizes. The first printing order called for 125 million stamps . . . and more will be printed if the public indicates a continued demand."

Collectors Club

AT THE meeting of the Collectors Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., in Pythian Temple on Tuesday evening the speaker was John J. Gillen, deputy Second Assistant Postmaster General, in charge of international postal transportation. Ellery Denison presided and at the close of Gillen's address, C. H. Vaughan gave an interesting exhibit of King Edwrd VII issues of Great Britain. At the meeting on Tuesday evening at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., a donation auction will be held and many excellent lots will be offered. All collectors are invited.

The Woodridge Stamp Club will meet Thursday at 8 p. m. at 1818 Rhode Island ave. ne. In the future meetings will be held on the first and third Thursdays of each month.

Two-Volume Work On Stamps Written

Stamp collectors specializing in American commemoratives will be delighted with Max G. Johl's two-volume work, The United States Commemorative Stamps of the Twentieth Century. (H. L. Lindquist, $10 set.)

Johl traces the history of each stamp—from the time it was first suggested until it went off sale at the Philtalic Agency. The books, each running to more than 350 pages, are printed on slick paper that makes the most of the hundreds of engravings that show not only the completed stamps, but the original drawings and proposed designs that were discarded.

Fairfax-Gilpin Studio Exhibiting Works

Water colors, drawings and prints by Eleanor Modrakowska are on view at the Fairfax-Gilpin Studio, 106 Prince st., Alexandria, until February 15. Mrs. Modrakowska, who is represented in the National Collection of Fine Arts, has exhibited in numerous print shows here and abroad.

A benefit exhibit of art and photography for Seminary Hill Episcopal Parish House will be shown there February 7, 8 and 9.

Baltimore Show

Continuing until Wednesday at the Baltimore Museum of Art is a show of work by "Ten Painters of the Pacific Northwest," offering a rare opportunity to see fresh talent little known in this section of the country.

If Education Is to Progress

More School Money Needed

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A PROJECTION of public education to prekindergarten and two years beyond high school was indorsed last week by the National Conference on Social Welfare Needs.

BENJAMIN

A report prepared by the conference's commission on education also said that schools should pay increased attention to adult education.

The conference held a three-day session at the Washington and Willard Hotels. Harold Benjamin, Maryland University dean, was chairman of the commission, composed of prominent educators.

In presenting its recommendations the commission warned that the Nation will have to spend more money for schools if education programs are to meet the needs of modern life.

Financial support must come all along the line—from local communities, from the States and from the Federal Government, the commission said.

More Teachers

THE REPORT pointed to the need for more and better teachers, encouraged by substantial pay increases. A teacher should be able to command a salary in the neighborhood of $4000 within six or eight years after first appointment.

Effective teaching also demands that the total number of teachers to pupils not exceed 1 teacher to 20 pupils, the report said.

The educators said that the special skills of counselor, nurse, physician, psychologist and psychiatrist must supplement those of the teacher if children and youth are to make the best use of school experience.

"These services are essential if we are to assist pupils mature emotionally and socially as well as intellectually," they said.

Among those assisting Dr. Benjamin in drawing up the report were Dean Henry Grattan Doyle of George Washington University, Dr. Walter Hager, president of Wilson Teachers College, and Dean Elizabeth Eckhardt May of Hood College.

Early Learning

IN CALLING for nursery schools, the educators said that recent findings that a child's most rapid rate of learning is during the very early years. A child's personality is fairly well established before he is 5, they said.

The educators said they agreed with the President's Commission on Higher Education that there is need for public education beyond the present high school level. Two years of college should be provided in the same way that high school education is now availablie, the report said.

"The various serious problems facing the American people emphasize the need for increased attention to adult education," the report said.

New buildings and equipment to replace obsolete plants and to provide facilities for a rapidly increasing school population was called for.

Buildings, the commission said, should be neither very small nor very big. In general, elementary schools should enroll between 100 and 400 pupils and secondary schools not more than 1200 to 1500 pupils.

Curriculum Revision

THE REPORT also recommended a broad curriculum revision.

The educators said that more recognition should be given to the primary purpose of education which is the development of the learner.

Students should receive an education that will enable them to cope with the problems of everyday life, including the problems of the consumer and the rights, privileges and duties of the citizen.

In the curriculum should go "truly effective preparation for wholesome human relationships, including preparation for marriage and family life, for all social relationships and especially education for better relationships among various groups—religious, racial, labor-management and other similar groups."

To this the educators also would add the "most effective possible education for better international understanding, including study of the more frequent causes of international friction."

Brief News Items About The Schools

THE Stenotype Institute of Washington (1428 G st. nw.), is holding its annual banquet and dance at the Wardman Park next Saturday. High spot of the evening is expected to be the coronation of a "stenograph queen" selected by the student body. Also, diamond pins will be awarded all who have passed the official 250-words-a-minute test.

SOME OPENINGS are available at Capitol Radio Engineering Institute (16th st. and Park rd.), for high school graduates and veterans. Applications are being taken for courses in practical radio electronics, broadcast and television engineering, and broadcast and television servicing.

TWO PROGRAMS particularly designed for veterans and approved for GI benefits are being offered by the Washington Workshop (2020 Massachusetts ave. nw.) for its new semester, which begins tomorrow. The courses are in commercial art and in radio acting, microphone technique and script writing.

HIGH SCHOOL education must be improved and should be provided for all normal youth . . . Education through the fourteenth grade should be made available in the same way that high school education is now available . . . Financial assistance should be provided to competent students in the tenth through fourteenth grades who would not be able to continue their education without such assistance . . . Public education at all levels should be made equally accessible to all without regard to race, creed, sex or national origin. These pearls are from the report of the President's Commission on Higher Education. The report is available for 40 cents from the Superintendent of Documents, U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C.

To Prolong Life

Medics Seek Source Of Heart Diseases

MINNEAPOLIS, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—A 10-year study of the effects of exercise, diet, worry and tension in developing heart disease and hardening of the arteries began this month at the University of Minnesota.

The study is tied to medicine's fight against the degenerative diseases of heart and arteries which science must like before man's life span can be lengthened. It is termed by one researcher "one of the Nation's most important in the field."

The men conducting the examination consider their decade-long study "absolutely fundamental" to progress in the prevention of heart disease. However, they avoid forecasting the day when man will live to be a hundred.

A group of 300 human "guinea pigs" between 45 and 54 will be studied by seven medical school scientists, under the direction of Dr. Ancel Keys, noted for his wartime studies of semistarvation in humans.

THE RESEARCHERS hope to learn if conditions leading to degeneration of the heart and blood vessels can be detected at an early stage. They will try to find out what habits of diet and physical activity prevent or delay such degeneration, and what effects worry or strain have in producing heart diseases.

Keys explained that high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries account for between two thirds and three fourths of all heart and circulatory disease. Heart disease, he said, "is the greatest single threat to life and productivity" of men past 40.

Sponsored and partly financed by the United States Public Health Service with five $30,000 yearly grants, the study will be based on detailed annual examinations of the hearts and artery conditions of the subjects during the first five years.

DURING THE SECOND five-year period, the data collected will be compiled and studied.

The 300 subjects, all volunteers from the Twin Cities, will be classified in several groups. They will include the overweight, the "completely sedentary" (such as office workers), sedentary workers with athletic hobbies and those revealed by tests to be especially susceptible to heart and artery diseases.

Forming a special group will be 30 businessmen-athletes — members of the St. Paul and Minneapolis athletic clubs. Examination of the latter group is expected to reveal whether systematic exercise after the age of 40 benefits or harms the heart and blood vessels.

Also under examination will be 180 university students.

Schools Proposed To Be "Capitols" Of Neighborhood

TOLEDO, OHIO, Jan. 31 (U.P.).—Schools designed and located to serve all citizens 24 hours a day as "capitols" of neighborhood and community activities are proposed for cities.

Writing in the year book of the American School and University, Frank Sohn, Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Co. architectural consultant, suggests a city plan based on the elementary school as the neighborhood "capitol," while the high school would serve the same purpose for the community.

The plan makes heavy-traffic streets the boundaries of each neighborhood and limits traffic within the neighborhood to necessary servicing. The elementary school layout would include parks, playgrounds, community bouldings and services for such round-the-clock neighboring activities as night classes for adults, civic meetings, theatricals, games athlectics, home making, library service, musical training, and arts and crafts work.

Course for Dentists

Philadelphia, Jan. 31 (AP).—The first cancer course for dentists is given at the University of Pennsylvania School of Dentistry, its purpose being to have dentists learn the signs of cancer in the mouth. The course lasts two weeks and is given to graduate dental students.

Delaware U. Planning Changes To Give Students 'Full View'

NEWARK, Del., Jan. 31.—Recommendation for curricular changes at the University of Delaware are expected to be made this year by a special faculty committee on educational theory and practice, appointed a year ago by Dr. William S. Carlson, president of the university, to reexamine the entire program of liberal education in the university's five schools.

The committee believes "it will be possible this year to make recommendations to the faculty on long-range educational policies," according to Dr. C. L. Day, professor of English and chairman of the committee. At least 18 meetings will be held during the academic year, and 12 subcommittees are compiling facts on curricular matters.

The subcommittees have studied such matters as entrance requirements, teaching of English composition and foreign languages, general education for science students and the philosophy and the function of a State university.

"It is clear that the need for drastic reorganization in American colleges was never greater," President Carlson said when he appointed the committee soon after he took office.

Matches for Fours End Maryland Play Tonight

By Marian H. Barre

A MARKED slump in attendance at local duplicate games over the weekend is the natural result of Maryland's annual State championships, now in play at the Emerson Hotel in Baltimore. The tourney opened Friday and ends tonight with a match for teams-of-four. Trophy for this event is the Baltimore News Post Cup, currently held by a Philadelphia-New York lineup formed by Charles H. Goren, Edward Cohn, Marie Basher and Ruth and Herbert Sherman.

While Washington will have numerous entries in today's field, there will be more intercity teams than purely local ones. Among exceptions to this rule is the quartet of Mrs. Marianne Boschan, Mrs. Frederick Eberson, W. A. Poissant and J. G. Stone, and that of Mrs. Edward Cotter, J. D. Boyd, David Murray and Joe White. J. J. Parish, Lewis Tubbs and C. C. Johnson may make up another team when they announce their fourth member, other District players are paired up outsiders.

Next tournament on the schedule is a first annual at Fort Monroe, Va., next Friday, Saturday and Sunday in the famed Chamberlin Hotel. Championships in competition will be women's mixed and open pairs and open teams.

The monthly disbursement of master points on the home front begins with the Agriculture Bridge Club game on February 7 at Euclid Studios, Mrs. D. E. Stephan directing. Starting time is 1 p. m.; the game is open to nonmembers but reservations must be made in advance. Phone Columbia 7857.

THE big snow storm failed to decrease attendance at the Women's Auxiliary bimonthly meeting on January 24 at Hotel Burlington, when Mrs. John Fletcher and Mrs. W. A. Poissant served as joint hostesses. North-south winners in the 12-table duplicate were Mrs. Dora Schwartz and Mrs. Boschan, who had a 3-point lead over Mrs. C. E. Meissner and Mrs. N. G. Olmstead. In the east-west seats, Mme G. N. Poulieff and Mrs. T. M. Boyle defeated Mrs. L. L. Gibson and Mrs. Howard Campbell by the enormous margin of 27½ match points, more than two boards.

Mrs. Roy Hackett presided at the business meeting. It was voted that the March of Dimes be adopted as the "Cause of the Month."

Euclid Studios' first annual open pair championship was concluded on January 23, the winners being Joe White and B. Jordan with 298 cumulative points through two sessions of play. There was a tie for second place between Dr. W. H. Gorton-Dr. N. J. McHugh and Mrs. Eberson and J. G. Stone, each pair having 288 points. The O'Donnell-Poissant partnership led in the final round but a slim carry-over kept them out of the running.

Next annual event at the studios will be men's pairs, the date of which will be announced later.

ANOTHER recently concluded annual was the Arlington Duplicate Bridge Club's championship for women, won by Mrs. Florence Millspaugh and Mrs. Elizabeth Count with Mrs. Edward St. John and Mrs. Henry Walker runners-up. The game was played in one session at La Salle Studios.

January master-point awards at Arlington Farms were captured by Paul Kalavski and A. E. Camire in one position, while the Count-Millspaugh partnership triumphed in the other.

A 50-50 split between newcomers and the veterans distinguished the Washington Bridge League's nationally awarded monthly at Hotel Burlington. With two sections in play there were four sets of winners, they included J. D. Ferry-L. J. Field, E. G. Harris, jr.-Robert Bierley, J. D. Stone-Merrill Flood, Dr. Cawdell-J. F. Overland. Second place awards went to Mark Kurtz-E. Levis, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Lingley, Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys-Mme. Poulieff, W. S. Benedict-Sumner Marcus.

Next WBL game will be the open pair match on Wednesday at 8:15 p. m. at the Burlington.

Until the Federal Bridge League resumes team play on Tuesdays at Pierce Hall, the following teams remain top in the various sections: in Section A, the "Off Chance" foursome; Section B, the "Allies;" Section C, the "Bees."

Video Develops Tuning-In Tricks For Radio and Television

New York, Jan. 31 (AP).—The ultimate effect of television on regular radio "listening"—some say everything will be done via television—some day—is not yet clear, but Video has already begun to develop something different in tuning in.

It is being called listen-look, and works like this: both the radio and television have programs of basically different types, say Fred Allen on the network and a sporting event on the television. To get the effect of both—listen to Fred and watch the sport show—it becomes a simple matter to switch on both the radio and tele-sets and then turn down the sound on the television.

This may eliminate some background detail as given by an announcer, but it won't spoil the view nor drown out the Allen quips.

Sorting 'Geniuses' From Dull Defies the School 'Nut' Tests

By W. G. Rogers

NEW YORK, Jan. 31 (AP).—Unrecognized genius, said to be a pretty painful state, apparently will have to worry along as is for some time.

That seems to be the consensus at Cooper Union Art School, which for years has been developing tests with a triple objective. Dr. Walter S. Walton, admissions officer, says the tests are designed to:

Differentiate the dull from the smart; to distinguish the "nice girl or boy" who studies hard from the one with real talent, and to judge between the "genius and the nut." The third is a real job.

The school has from 400 to 1600 applicants every year for the 90 students it can admit to its free courses. Once they were selected on the basis of personal interviews, but it was found, Dr. Watson says, that some more reliable check was required.

Series of Tests

DR CARL E. BRIGHAM of Princeton, who began to work on the problem in the early 1930s, set up a series of tests as substitute for the interviews. They consisted of two parts, one on general intelligence, which weeded out many applicants, and one on artistic abilities.

Each of the Brigham tests lasts 45 minutes and must be marked by more than one judge, and each must be used in conjunction with all the others, not alone.

Later it was realized that the first tests might be eliminating students bad in the three R's but good in art. So another preliminary test was introduced on the subject of art capability.

That led to a still unsolved problem. The general tests showed few differences among admitted students; they all looked like top material and most of them got good marks. But somewhere destined to show some degree of genius, and it would help to be able to pick them out early in the game.

The school called in Dr. Molly R. Harrower to apply the Rorschach or so-called ink-blot tests, by which the applicant is judged by his responses to a variety of shapes hard to identify. They have been given twice, but for the present they serve only as a check on the other testing methods.

Results Unsatisfactory

DR. HARROWER, who is now engaged in private practice, says the results were unsatisfactory. They revealed some disturbing elements in some students, but the same findings had been made by psychiatrists. In other words, the Rorschach tests served as a double warning that certain pupils were potential trouble makers.

But the very same pupils, as far as tests now show, may be the geniuses. A rich personality is like an unstable personality, but is perhaps not identical. The difference between the potential trouble maker and the actual genius now eludes Rorschach tests, Dr. Harrower says. Any investigation would take a staff of researchers and a long time.

The only effort made in this direction about which she is informed consisted of the application of the tests to some acknowledged artists. The results were not satisfactory, she says, but she is not certain whether the "acknowledged" artists were also recognized by competent critics as geniuses. Somebody will have to define the genius before the rorschach experts can set tests to catch him.

But It's a Big Order

Regional Graduate Plan Is Supported

By Henry Lesesne

COLUMBIA, S. C., Jan. 31.—The plan of a Southern Governors' Conference committee, to set up a regional system of graduate education, has found general support in the South, but usually with some reservation. The reaction generally is that it is a good plan if it is a workable plan.

The whole question revolves on whether the plan is accepted as a scheme to solve the dilemma created by the segregation laws and the recent edicts of the Supreme Court, or whether it is viewed as a sincere attempt to put all graduate education, for both races, on a regional basis—admittedly a large order.

Gov. Millard F. Caldwell of Florida, chairman of the committee, has emphasized repeatedly that the regional plan antedates recent Supreme Court decisions ordering Southern States to provide Negro and white students with equal educational opportunities. Likewise, Gov. M. E. Thompson of Georgia has pointed out the plan should not be considered solely in the light of the racial problem.

Headway Made

THE plan, it is true, has been discussed at length at every annual session of the Governors' Conference in recent years, but only within the last few months has any headway been made and quite obviously, even now, it will take months and years to get a regional system launched on any comparative scale.

"If the Southern States work together, they can establish and maintain the very best in educational opportunities in all fields for all citizens, regardless of race," says Governor Caldwell, stressing that the regional plan embraces schools for both whites and Negroes.

The full Governors' Conference meets in emergency session in Tallahassee, Fla., on February 7-8, to consider the committee's plan, and there is little doubt that it will be wholeheartedly approved. Six Southern Governors are members of the education committee which drafted the plan.

It is generally agreed, however, that congressional action will have to be obtained to authorize the 15 States to enter into contracts among themselvees. The State Legislatures would also have to be asked to approve the idea and provide the funds. Most of the Southern Legislatures do not meet until next year, although a few are in session now.

Details Being Drafted

DETAILS of the plan to be submitted to the Governors' Conference are now being drafted. It is expected the committee will suggest creating a board of control to consist of three members from each State, including the Governor. The committee is also expected to propose that costs be borne on a population basis.

The Atlanta Journal points out that a broad system of regional schools, such as proposed by the committee, would help Southern States "not only to solve the problem of higher and specialized education for Negro students, but give white students advantages in fields of special training which the individual States cannot afford."

This is the general reaction in the South. However, some who view the program in the light of an attempt to sidestep the recent Supreme Court decisions suggest the South should proceed cautiously. The Charlotte (N. C.) News, for instance, points out something of a new issue would be before the Supreme Court if the regional schools are set up and the plan is then contested.

"Admittedly," the News says editorially, "the regional school proposal is a method to evade the segregation issue. If it could be assumed that the Supreme Court would issue no further rulings pertaining to educational facilities for the Negro, it would seem to be the most reasonable and economical solution to the dilemma.

"This is not a valid assumption, however, for there is no reason to suppose that the regional system will not be tested in the courts or that it would be held a valid fulfillment of the court requirements in a test case. A Negro student could refuse to attend such a regional school, if it were established, and insist upon his right to equal facilities within the State of his residence."

Vassar Has One Negro, Wishes It Had More

By Dorothy Dunbar Bromley

VASSAR COLLEGE has only one Negro student and wishes it had more applicants, its president, Miss Sarah Gibson Blanding, said one day. It has long been the college's aim, she explained in her campus office in Poughkeepsie, to have a truly cosmopolitan student body representing various economic and cultural groups. Miss Blanding was the only woman's college president who served on the President's 28-man Commission on Higher Education for American Democracy. Recently the commission issued the second of its front-page news reports.

The president of Vassar explained that her institution is doing its best—within the limits of its physical capacity and its scholarship fund—to provide higher education for young women without regard "to the family or community into which they happen to be born or to color of their skin or the religion of their parents."

With her fellow commission members, Miss Blanding thinks it deplorable that the opportunity for higher education today depends "so largely on the individual's economic status." "We are not only denying to millions of young people," the committee's first report said, "the chance in life to which they are entitled; we are also depriving the Nation of a vast amount of potential leadership and potential social competence which it sorely needs."

Favors Doubling of Rolls

THE COMMISSION would like to see the present college enrollment doubled by 1960, to equal 4,600,000. Higher education for so many young people could only be made available if a large number of "community or junior colleges" were built and if Federal scholarships to other colleges were granted on a large scale, to 20 per cent of nonveteran students by 1960.

Actually, at Vassar today, 22.6 per cent of the 1350 students are receiving scholarships, Miss Blanding said, at a cost to the college of $261,795 for the year 1947-'48. While 28 girls have grants of more than $1250, the average scholarship is $695.

Miss Blanding could not tell me how many girls had applied for and failed to win a scholarship this year, since all the college offices were not open during the holidays. But she said that next year the seven women's colleges hope to make up a follow-up study of the disappointed scholarship applicants to discover whether they have had to forgo college.

While the competition for grants from Vassar is keen, Miss Blanding would like it to be still livelier. "A high school senior who knows her parents cannot afford to send her to a $1600-tuition college may never think of applying for a scholarship here," she pointed out. She has urged the Vassar alumnae who have chapters in 60 different communities to encourage able high school freshmen and sophomores to prepare for Vassar and try for a scholarship. Also, a traveling representative of the college interviews counselors in public high schools with the same end in view. "We want," Miss Blanding said, "more public high school graduates."

Has No Quota System

"WE HAVE no quota system here," Miss Blanding declared, "and no questions are asked about religion on our application blanks." She did not know, she said, how many Jewish students Vassar has, since they have never been counted. "Perhaps 15 per cent," she guessed.

The percentage might be higher, the president conceded, if Vassar, in selecting its students, did not try for wide geographical distribution. More than half the students come from non-Eastern areas. "We feel sure," she said, "that our students profit from associating with students from many other States."

The common assumption that most Vassar girls come from economically privileged, if not very rich families, is a generalization that could not easily be proved, Miss Blanding insisted.

"The size of a girl's allowance or the fact, unknown to other students, that she is on a scholarship does not affect her popularity or her election to student offices," Miss Blanding asserted.

Can Adults Get Needed Schooling?

By James Marlow

ADULT education means only that grown people, most of them after working hours, try to get more schooling or learning.

This would include those who have finished their regular schooling and those who haven't.

And the things they study range from a correspondence course in engineering to class work in grammar or group discussion in English literature.

The special commission which President Truman set up to study the whole problem of higher education has a good deal to say about adult education in its recent report.

The commission is very critical of what the colleges and universities are doing, or failing to do, about it. Why?

The Best Citizen

ON THESE grounds: That the best citizens are educated, thinking citizens and all citizens ought to get a better chance for learning than they're getting now.

In its report the commission said in brief:

1. There's not enough adult education.

2. Colleges and universities don't seem to realize how important a part of their work adult education should be.

3. It's time they started doing more about it.

Roughly, there are four kinds of adult education:

1. Evening courses in colleges and universities, on the school grounds.

2. Resident extension courses. This means teachers go out to instruct groups in homes or some meeting place off the college campus.

3. Correspondence courses, which means education by mail.

4. Informal instruction, such as a university can do over its own radio station.

But who does the teaching? Teachers who take on adult education at night to make extra money after teaching in colleges or universities by day.

Not Too Well

HOW well do they do it? The commission says that "candidly" many of them try to make it as easy on themselves as possible.

The commission says:

"This state of affairs cannot be permitted to continue. The colleges and universities should elevate adult education to a position of equal importance with any other of their functions.

"Adult education, along with undergraduate and graduate education should become the responsibility of every department or college of the university.

"It should be the duty of the English faculty or the physics faculty, for instance, to teach English or physics not just to those who come to the campus but to everyone in the community or State who wants to learn or can be persuaded to learn English or physics."

BOOBY—From Page 1

five hundred from his dentist, and so on and so on, until his budget of $200,000 is made up.

Joe now has his $200,000. He signs up scenic artists, publicity men, costumers, a book director, a dance director, a musical director. He spends a full month lining up an adequate cast.

There are only half a dozen theaters in New York desirable for a big musical-comedy production, but again Joe is lucky. He is half-promised a house for his show.

"Getting Gracie's Garter" goes into rehearsal. For five weeks Joe Duddy scarcely takes his clothes off. He is busy straightening out production snarls, settling arguments, okaying costumes and sets, arguing about costs, making out contracts and financial accountings, firing personnel who are no good, hiring personnel who are worse.

The show opens Monday night at the Shubert Theater in Philadelphia. All Philadelphia is there in bib and tucker. It is a gala occasion—until the middle of the first act, when the lighting fails, the actors fluff their lines, the scenery falls down around the ingenue lead and the band plays "Nearer My God to Thee."

Opening nights bring out the worst in show business. So Joe awakes Tuesday morning with a headache from the newspaper reviews and a stomach ache from the Philadelphia drinking water.

Enter: Play Doctor

HE DASHES for New York to sign up a "play doctor" and collect an extra $50,000 from the angels.

The show stays in Philadelphia four weeks, during which time the play doctor rehearses the company every waking hour in between performances, and every member of the company drops 20 pounds. Joe Duddy drops 30.

He never undresses at all now, merely changing his shirt every three days because a big producer must keep up appearances. Twenty hours a day he rehires, refires, rebudgets, reorganizes, recostumes, repents and relapses. And in his spare time he worries about the $15,000 weekly operating loss the Philadelphia engagement is costing.

But once more Joe is lucky. The play doctor gradually whips the show into shape. The composer comes up with a couple of good tunes. A new writer has inserted some nice comedy business. The show has been reroutined so that the second act is played first and the first act second, and the whole thing is beginning to make sense.

A Real Smash

ON TO BROADWAY! Glamorous first night! Critics rave; "Getting Gracie's Garter" is in like a thief—a million-dollar hit!

Outside of prestige, just what has Joe to look forward to? Very little, at least for about 40 weeks, because it takes that long for the average big musical to pay back its investors. After 40 weeks, if the show is still running—Joe will split the weekly profits 50-50 with the investors (and that's assuming that the show will be making a profit at that late date).

Now, if Joe doesn't collect much during the first 40 weks, who does? Well, let's assume that "Getting Gracie's Garter" takes in $48,000 gross receipts weekly. Here's where the money goes, in the simplest approximate figures:

U. S. amusement tax	$8,000
Theater rental	11,000
Actors' and staff salaries	12,000
Royalties to authors, composers, directors	3,500
Stagehands' salaries	2,500
Musicians' salaries	3,000
Advertising and publicity	2,000
Repayment to investors	5,700
Joe Duddy	300
	$48,000

The $300 is an allowance granted to Joe for his office expenses. And if Joe Duddy can run his office on $300 a week and squeeze out a profit, too, he should be able to squeeze champagne out of a potato.

Storehouse of Data About South Being Built

By Jud Kinberg

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Jan. 31.—They're master-minding a running battle against lethargy and lack of knowledge from the top floor of Alumni Building at the University of North Carolina.

Gains already made mean that "science and technology are going to work for the good of the people in the entire Southeastern region. Some call it planning or grass-roots of democracy, but it boils down to effective ultilization of our reservoir of information, rather than subservience to it."

That's the broad campaign that Dr. John E. Ivey, jr., has outlined for the two groups he administers from his Alumni Building offices.

As executive secretary of the Committee on Southern Regional Studies and Education of the American Council on Education, he has a major voice in one of the South's most dynamic mediums for consolidated study and solution of this area's problems.

As chief of the division of research interpretation of the Institute for Research in Social Science, Dr. Ivey heads a UNC unit currently crumbling the wall existing between the mass of men and women and the facts they must have in waging their own struggle for better living.

Resource-Use

DR. IVEY and his staff have taken a newly hyphenated phrase for their password: Resource-Use. They see those resources as not physical alone, but human and social as well. It is this approach to regional studies that broadens the accomplishments and promise of their work.

"If we give today's students a true picture of the potential and problems of the South, more of them will remain here during their productive years to help strengthen the economic life of the region. It will mean a constantly expanding circle of increasing returns for everyone."

The Committee on Southern Regional Studies has top-name membership, including college presidents, reesarch scholars, school-system superintendents and Tennessee Valley Authority leaders.

One of the Nation's most successful attempts at such intensive work, the committee has already made possible the award of foundation grants totaling more than one million dollars for programs in 14 Southern States. The University of North Carolina, the University of Kentucky, George Peobody College for Teachers, and the TVA cooperate in furnishing staff services and facilities for the work of the organization.

SINKIANG IS MOVING CLOSER TO RUSSIA

Hatred for China Increases in Western Province After Long Period of Misrule

ONLY 5% 'TRUE' CHINESE

Ili Rebels on the Soviet Border Already Control Areas With Best Mineral Resources

The author of this dispatch, an Australian journalist, served as an American news agency war correspondent with American Forces in the Pacific throughout the war and afterward worked in Japan and China. Last summer he went to Sinkiang, China, to gather material for articles and a book. He summarizes the situation he found in eight months' study in a Central Asian area where Russo-Chinese and indirectly Russo-American interests are in uneasy juxtaposition.

By FRANK ROBERTSON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PEIPING, Jan. 28 (Delayed)—Current trends in Sinkiang indicate that the predominantly non-Chinese population of China's largest and most remote province, goaded by misrule and enticed to some extent by realistic Soviet propaganda, is moving toward allegiance with the Soviet Union.

This movement has not yet taken full hold among the Turkis and Kazakhs, 90 per cent of Sinkiang's population. Probably the majority still want complete independence for Sinkiang because they abhor China and fear Russia. But more and more are beginning to think that they have nothing to lose and much to gain from allegiance with Russia.

The usual argument against life under Soviet rule, the loss of personal freedom, does not impress them. They answer that they have no personal freedom now and are not likely to have any as long as Sinkiang is a part of China.

They have been hearing from returning fellow countrymen and through Soviet propaganda stories of modern hospitals, schools, hydroelectric plants, scientific production and modern cities that Russia has brought to Soviet Turkestan, just across Sinkiang's western border. Such stories strike deep in backward, undeveloped Sinkiang.

Only 5 per cent of Sinkiang's population of approximately 4,000,000 are "true" Chinese. Chinese Moslems, Mongols, Manchus and White Russians constitute another 5 per cent that is predominantly pro-Chinese. Of the remainder roughly 80 per cent are Turkis — Uichurs, Kirghiz and lesser groups — and 10 per cent are Kazakhs.

The Chinese minority rules by force of arms. This is militarily feasible despite the vastness of the province for most of the population is gathered in densely populated desert oases and in several fertile valleys.

A majority of the Turkis and Kazakhs in Sinkiang are opposing Chinese rule actively or passively. One-fourth of them, led or dominated by the Ili group, are temporarily removed from Chinese jurisdiction. These rebels occupy three of the province's ten administrative zones, Ili, Tahcheng [Tarbaghatai] and Altai, all of which are adjacent and border on the Soviet Union.

In November, 1944, the Turkis and Kazakhs of Ili rose in revolt against the Chinese and were joined by non-Chinese Moslems of the two neighboring zones. They had good reason to revolt. For the preceding ten years Sinkiang had been ruled by Gen. Sheng Shih-sai, a vicious war lord who murdered or tortured close to five per cent of the population during his reign of terror.

General Sheng scorned the Chinese Government and formed and alliance with Russia. In 1942 he switched his allegiance to Chungking and the Russians were virtually expelled from the province. It seems safe to assume from available evidence that the Ili revolt to some extent was fostered and supported by the Russians.

In 1945 the Chinese Government sought peace with the Ili faction and in June, 1946, Gen. Chang Chih-chung, who had been sent to the province as Governor a few months earlier, signed an accord that reduced Chinese influence in Sinkiang, gave fundamental rights to the Turkis, allowed them a separate army and assured them a clear majority in the provincial Government.

The agreement never really came into effect. Both sides violated its terms, but since China stood to lose and the Ili group would gain from its implementation most responsibility for the failure should rest upon the Chinese. Full implementation of the terms would have meant a considerable weakening of China's position in Sinkiang and a progressive strengthening of Soviet influence.

When the United States hardened its attitude to Russia the Chinese appear to have followed its lead in Sinkiang.

In August, 1947, Ahmed Jan, chief Ili negotiator and a provincial vice governor, walked out of the negotiations and took his group to Ili. In September Gen. Chang sent him a letter which in essence asked if Ili wanted war or peace.

In his answer, two months later, Ahmed Jan said his group did not contemplate secession from China and stated that it would return to the provincial capital if the Government complied with four demands. These included the removing from office of Governor Mesud Sabri, a pro-Kuomintang Turki.

In his reply last December General Chang stated the Government would not consider replacing Governor Mesud without an election and that he was still waiting for the Ili representatives to return to Urumchi, the capital. There matters stand. Soviet consuls have been go-betweens in these negotiations by letter.

Meanwhile the majority of articulate Turkis outside the Ili zones have been shifting ground and from the loosely knit ranks of this large middle group a strong nationalistic movement is taking shape, which on the whole is more strongly opposed to China than to Ili or Russia. A year ago the reverse was true.

Chinese oppression, which has increased rather than eased during the past year, has been largely responsible for this trend.

Recently the Chinese publicly recognized the existence of the nationalistic group for the first time. In an address to a newly formed rightist political association on Dec. 1, Gen. Sung Hsi-lien, army commander in Sinkiang, declared:

"If our first enemy is the Ili party, our second is the nationalist group. The Nationalists had better forget their slogan 'Turkestan first' or there will be trouble."

There has been far too much trouble already. Last July a group of Turkis around Turkan, apparently incited by Ili agitators, rose against the Chinese. The rebellion was snuffed out by Chinese cavalrymen who jailed more than 100 persons and executed others, including women and children suspected of carrying food and water to the rebels.

Using this incident as a pretext, the Chinese imprisoned more than 1,000 Turkis throughout the province on charges that they were in league with the Ili group. Only 10 per cent of them may have been, but all are still in prison.

Indiscriminate use of force is the main reason why the Chinese administration has alienated thousands of Turkis but there are other important factors. Elections have been rigged to assure that Turkis on whom the Government could count, usually priests and landlords, were put in office.

Turki peasants have been taken from their farms and forced to work on road building and other projects, often without pay. Taxes are crippling. Food for Chinese troops is confiscated in some areas. When food is bought the price is considerably lower than the market price.

Business men are unhappy because no safe transportation is provided to move to markets their mounting stockpiles of wool, furs and hides. The few privately owned trucks are liable to requisition by the army.

Some statistics about Urumchi throw considerable light on the Chinese approach to governing Sinkiang. The two provincial hospitals have sixty beds. The five prisons have a capacity for close to 10,000. At the Sinkiang Academy, the only institute of higher learning, there is only one Turki student because only the Chinese language is used.

The Soviet influence in Sinkiang undoubtedly is more than commensurate with Russia's lawful interests in the province. Propaganda is disseminated from five heavily-staffed consulates, mostly through branches of the Sino-Soviet Cultural Association. Last November the Chinese Government protested the distribution of anti-Chinese handbills at a mass meeting of the Urumchi Cultural Association.

The Sino-Soviet Airline, now wholly Russian in operation, flies from Alma Ata in Soviet Kazakhstan across Sinkiang to Hami. The line maintains its own airfields and Chinese generals assert the radio stations on these fields are used for the transmission of military intelligence.

Russians Studied Minerals

Russia certainly knows much more about Sinkiang's mineral resources than do the Chinese. During Gen. Sheng's rule hundreds of Soviet scientists and technicians explored the provinces. The richest resources are believed to be in the three Ili zones.

Wolframite, molybdenite and an extensive oilfield are there. Recurrent reports about uranium deposits have yet to be proved true. China has not been able to make any effort to develop Sinkiang's mineral resources.

China has a very strong military force in the province, considering the scale of warfare in China. Gen. Sung has three armies totaling about 100,000 troops. Strong fortifications are being built, facing west.

The Ili group is reported to have 40,000 men under arms. There has been no evidence to support Chinese charges that Ili troops are armed with modern Russian equipment.

To save Sinkiang, China would have to make spectacular reforms on a scale unknown in the Orient. But even if this were possible and if it were done, China's efforts might break down against the barrier of emotion—leaving aside possible Soviet obstruction—for bitter hatred against Chinese is spreading throughout Sinkiang.

Inhabitants of Sinkiang (shown in shading) are said to eye with increasing favor the possibility of allegiance with Moscow.

NANKING AIDE SETS 4-YEAR CASH NEED

Tsiang Says $500,000,000 a Year Would Establish Peace, Save Economy

BY THOMAS J. HAMILTON
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Jan. 31—Dr. T. F. Tsiang, who was recently appointed permanent Chinese representative to the United Nations, expressed the belief today that the Nanking Government would be able to establish peace and economic order if it could get $500,000,000 a year in outside aid for the next three or four years.

Dr. Tsiang did not say whether China would ask the United States for such an aid program, but emphasized that the $60,000,000 now under discussion in Congress would be "entirely inadequate" as far as substantial help was concerned. Dr. Tsiang explained that the problems created by the civil war and by the inflation in China were interrelated. If China could count on $500,000,000 a year from the United States, he said, his Government would be able to restore its authority everywhere except in Manchuria.

There, he said, the situation would remain "doubtful." China has already bought a considerable amount of surplus American war materials, and Dr. Tsiang said that when he flew here from China a few days ago, one Chinese general stopped off at Okinawa and another at Guam to supervise the shipment of this equipment.

Explaining the needs of the Chinese forces, he said that no heavy equipment was needed. However, he said, large quantities of rifles, machine guns and other small arms were required, together with ammunition to supply units already equipped with American rifles.

The Chinese Government hoped at the same time to take effective measures to deal with the mounting inflation in China, he said, adding that it would have a much better chance of success if it received American help.

Foreign Exchange Needed

In addition to food, he said, China needed foreign exchange for the purchase of fertilizer, cotton and other raw materials. Before the Japanese invasion, China produced almost enough cotton for her own needs, but many Chinese farmers shifted to raising foodstuffs during the Japanese occupation and China needed large quantities of cotton, he said.

The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration has supplied China with about $600,000,000 worth of food, cotton and other help, Dr. Tsiang said, but its activities have now stopped with the exception of a few scattered shipments that are scheduled from Great Britain and Australia. Once China's production problem was met, Dr. Tsiang said, the Government would be in a position to stabilize the currency. At the present black market rate, he added, only $500,000,000 would be needed to retire the entire existing currency and make a new start.

Dr. Tsiang emphasized his belief that the military situation in China would not reach a stalemate provided China obtained sufficient United States help. The Chinese peasants, he said, were attracted toward the Communists by the Communist land confiscation measures, but he insisted that conscription, together with the heavy taxes imposed by the Communists, had alienated the peasants. In any case, he pointed out, the Chinese Communists controlled only the agricultural areas and the Central Government had greater economic potentialities because it was in possession of the principal ports and cities.

Wang Proposal Recalled

Last October the Chinese Foreign Minister, Dr. Wang Shih-chieh, suggested a compromise in the deadlock between the United States and the Soviet Union on the method of drafting a peace treaty with Japan. Dr. Wang proposed that the treaty be negotiated at a conference of the eleven countries that took an active part in the war against Japan, subject to the veto by the Big Four in the Pacific war, the United States, the Soviet Union, China and Great Britain.

This suggestion, however, has not been accepted by the other powers, and Dr. Tsiang said he saw no possibility that the Japanese treaty would be concluded in the near future. In the meanwhile, he pointed out, General Douglas MacArthur, as Supreme Commander for the Allied Powers, would continue to administer Japan.

Dr. Tsiang praised the administration of Japan under General MacArthur, but expressed concern over recent steps to increase the level of Japanese industrial activity.

"General MacArthur has done a good job, but the Japanese militarists did a good job before him in producing a warlike spirit," said Dr. Tsiang. He emphasized his belief that none of the great powers should try to build up Japan as a possible ally in the event of a future war.

Dr. Tsiang pointed out that no final settlement of the Korean question was possible until a pi .e treaty with Japan was signed. Although the Soviet Union has refused to admit the United Nations Korean Commission to northern Korea, the commission should go ahead with its efforts to hold an election and set up a provisional government in southern Korea, occupied by the United States, Dr. Tsiang said.

Warren R. Austin, the United States representative to the United Nations, recently suggested that the commission follow this course, but the State Department has not yet revealed its final position.

The fund is a joint project of the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies, Inc., and the Protestant Council of the City of New York, Inc. More than 400 workers will conduct the Brooklyn drive in its behalf, according to the announcement. The city-wide goal is $650,000.

GERMAN ASSAILS RATIONS

Charges 'Standardized Famine' Exists in Western Zones

LUXEMBOURG, Jan. 31 (AP)—Dr. Konrad Adenauer of Cologne described the current German food ration today as "standardized famine." He demanded that the military governments in Germany increase the ration.

Dr. Adenauer made what was believed to be the first speech by a German in an international political conference since the war. He and other German leaders attended a meeting of the European Christian Democratic party as observers.

He reproached German authorities in the United States and British zones for having accepted 1,550 calories as the daily ration.

Dr. Adenauer asked close political and economic cooperation between Western Europe and Germany to prevent the continent from being overrun by what he called the potential might of the Soviet Union.

Representatives from eleven countries are attending the conference, which ends tomorrow.

Bad Weather Curbs Irish Voting

DUBLIN, Jan. 31 (AP)—An election was postponed today because of bad weather. Dwellers on the small islands off Ireland's south coast were to have voted in advance of the general election Wednesday but gales kept election officials on the mainland.

Columbia Professors to Give Series of Ten Orientation Lectures for Secretariat

Prof. Irwin Edman, head of Columbia University's philosophy department, will open a series of ten orientation lectures designed to acquaint members of the United Nations secretariat with American life and culture, it was announced yesterday.

The lecture series, sponsored by Columbia, was arranged in response to a request from the training and staff activities division of the United Nations. Dr. Sven Bjorklund, chief of this division, felt that United Nations staff members needed information on American cultural and political life, customs and traditions to adjust themselves better to their new environment.

Professor Edman's keynote lecture, to be held at 11 A. M. next Saturday at International House, will be entitled "Toward an Understanding of American Life."

In addition to the Secretariat, members of delegations to the United Nations, foreign students attending Columbia and residents of International House have been invited to attend the lectures, which will be given on successive Saturdays at International House.

Following Professor Edman, nine other Columbia professors will speak on a phase of American life on which he is a specialist. Prof. John A. Krout will speak on "American Historical Development," Prof. Louis Hacker on "The American Economic System," Prof. Adolph A. Berle on "American Government and Politics," and Prof. Paul Hays on "Labor in the United States."

"Education in the United States" will be the topic of Prof. John L. Childsn, "Minorities in the United States" of Prof. Frank Tannenbaum, "Press and Radio in the United States" of Prof. Lyman Bryson, and "United States Foreign Policy" of Prof. Grayson Kirk. The tenth lecturer has not yet been chosen.

The United Nations and Columbia University are already cooperating on a training program to familiarize Columbia students of international relations with the workings of the United Nations. A group of twenty graduate students from Columbia and other universities in the metropolitan area spent last summer at Lake Success as volunteer "internes in international administration" and the experiment was so successful that the United Nations last week announced plans to extend the program to students from each of the fifty-seven member nations. At present thirty-seven students from the new school for social research and Bennington College are interning at United Nations interim headquarters.

The Department of Public Information of the United Nations Secretariat and the New York University School of Education will jointly sponsor from Feb. 26 to 28 a three-day institute for educators. Dean Ernest O. Melby of the School of Education announced that 600 of the nation's educators were expected to attend the institute, which will be conducted at Lake Success and the School of Education.

Acting as co-chairman of the institute will be Dean Melby and Dr. Benjamin V. Cohen, assistant secretary general in charge of Public Information.

The institute will be divided into higher education and elementary and secondary school divisions.

Speakers at the opening session, which will be held at Lake Success, will be Mr. Cohen, Dean Melby, Warren R. Austin, United States representative to United Nations, and Chester Bowles, chairman of the International Advisory Committee of the United Nations Appeal for Children.

Dean Melby said that the purpose was "to acquaint a group of educational leaders with the work of the United Nations and related agencies; to give them the opportunity to observe international activities at the United Nations headquarters, and to talk with international leaders."

BRITISH VIEW IS REJECTED

Chile Says Base in Antarctic Is on Her Own Territory

SANTIAGO, Chile, Jan. 31 (UP)—The Chilean Government has rejected a British diplomatic protest against the establishment of a Chilean military base in Antarctic territories claimed by Britain,

The Foreign Ministry said today that the Chilean reply, handed to Ambassador Sir John Leeche, asserted that the protest was inacceptable because the base in question had been erected on Chilean National territory. The British protest was delivered early this week.

Chile maintained that she had sovereignty over the Antarctic sector "delimited in 1940." The Chilean base was set up in Graham Land, over which Britain claims sovereignty as a dependency of the Falkland Islands.

It Will Not Sit Again Unless There Is Grave Emergency

ROME, Jan. 31 (AP)—The Italian Constituent Assembly adjourned tonight after an existence of nineteen months. It will not sit again unless summoned for a grave emergency.

The deputies adopted an emblem of peace and strength to replace the emblem of the House of Savoy, closed up their desks and began preparations for the national elections in April.

The new national emblem displays a wreath of oak and olive, representing strength and peace, and a wheel in the background signifying industry. In the center there is a five-pointed star.

NEW PARTY LINES PLANNED IN JAPAN

Next Elections Are Likely to Be Test Between Controls and Greater Free Enterprise

By LINDESAY PARROTT
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKYO, Jan. 30 (Delayed) — New party lines are being drawn in preparation for the next general election, which almost all Japanese commentators are predicting for next spring.

If plans are carried out the elections are likely to be a much better test of Japanese public opinion than has been made between the "revised capitalism" of strict government controls for which the present Socialist coalition stands and the much greater degree of free enterprise favored by more conservative groups.

The most recent move in the situation is a step toward the formation of the long-discussed National Salvation party by representatives of the four leading moderate groups, former Premier Shigeru Yoshida's Liberals, Kikuro Shidehara's insurgent Democrats, who bolted the party over the state control of coal mines; regular Democrats and Independents.

Delegates have been named to serve on the preparatory committee for the formation of the new party and announced that they hope to have the platform ready next month.

Anti-Red Platform Likely

Should this follow the lines of the trial balloon platform recently issued by the Liberals' political affairs committee it will be strongly anti-Communist, deflationary and favor a quick restoration of free enterprise.

On the other wing the Democratic party president and Foreign Minister, Hitoshi Ashida, has announced to his party's members of parliament that he likewise favors a new grouping. This might center on more advanced thinkers of the Democrats and members of the People's Cooperative party. In case of a general election such a group might be expected again to form a coalition with Premier Tetsu Katayama's Socialists, this time assuming leadership instead of accepting a secondary role.

Both sides undoubtedly will continue to solicit United States financial aid in the rehabilitation of Japan along the lines suggested by Major Gen. Frank McCoy, which the Japanese view as a sort of Marshall Plan for the Pacific.

That the Communists might decide to oppose this was indicated today when Sango Nosaka, Communist leader, attacked Premier Katayama in the lower house for his "dependence on foreign capital." Mr. Nosaka indicated the government should try to rehabilitate Japan by its own efforts, shunning capitalist aid.

Socialist Collapse Seen

The moves toward new parties apparently are based on the widespread belief that the Japanese Socialist party, which won a plurality in last year's elections, is politically bankrupt because of the deep-seated differences between the Left and Right. The Nippon Times said tonight:

"For all practical purposes the Social Democratic party has virtually disintegrated. It can hardly be denied that the vaunted role of the left-wingers as the 'opposition party within the party' is being carried to a point where the Social Democratic party no longer functions as a single party."

Some Japanese observers think that the Socialist left wing, with its program of the suspension of interest on government war bonds, nationalization of banking and other radical measures is considerably closer to the Communist line than that of the titular party head, Premier Katayama.

Though excluded from the coalition Government, the left wing gained strength at the recent party convention, causing the critical situation the Socialists are facing.

Some attempts are still being made to avoid an election by reshaping the Katayama Cabinet. Proposals have been made by the cooperatives to Socialists and Democrats.

'LIVING MEMORIALS' GIVEN

West End Presbyterian Church Receives Donations

"Living memorials" are being presented to the West End Presbyterian Church, Amsterdam Avenue and 105th Street, which today will begin a week's dual celebration.

The day will mark the sixtieth anniversary of the house of worship and the forty-third anniversary of the calling of the Rev. Dr. A. Edwin Keigwin to West End. He was the pastor forty years and since then has been pastor emiritus.

Two members last week made gifts to the anniversary memorial fund in honor of Dr. Keigwin, whose name thus will be included in the "living memorials." The current parish bulletin says one member made a contribution in memory of his mother and as a living memorial to his father, and elder of the church.

ARGENTINA'S SLAVS HAIL TIE TO STALIN

Half of 500,000 Are Tightly Enrolled in Societies That Stress Blood Bond

Special Correspondence THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 10—Argentina's freedom from anything like a serious Communist problem has been stressed so often it has become almost taken for granted. Within the narrow confines of the word Communist, that estimate is still true.

But Argentina has a quite definite problem, which in time of crisis might well add up to the same thing as a large, well-trained, determined Communist force. Foreign observers for governments facing a possible impasse with Russia are deeply concerned about it. So is the Argentine Government.

The basis for this concern is the impressive Slav population. A conservative figure places it at 500,000 persons. Between 50 and 60 per cent of that number are tightly enrolled in societies or clubs. All these societies are devoted to exalting Slav blood and paying tribute to "the great Russian people and their genius leader, Stalin."

One of their papers, the semimonthly Union Eslava, edited by Christo Gonevsky, a Bulgarian, is far more enthusiastic about Russia and Stalin than the Communist party's publication, the Hora. In almost every issue there are copies of telegrams sent to and received from Moscow, mostly greetings and expressions of the deep brotherly feelings among all Slav peoples.

Societies Active Since 1942

The Slav societies have flourished since 1942 and have consistently made as much of a fetish of blood ties as the Nazis did. It is not the Slavs who have recently changed, but the trend of world politics. With the threat of ideological cleavage between East and West coming closer to reality each day, authorities and observers here feel they can no longer regard the matter with complacency.

During the war and for sometime thereafter it did not seem so remarkable that approximately one person out of every sixty-four in Argentina was becoming obsessed with his oneness with other Slavs and was bent upon considering Stalin the most admirable figure on this earth. Nor was any significance attached to the fact that Slavs, by their concentration at the coastal settlement of Comodoro Rividavia, were virtually in control of Argentina's only great oilfield.

Even now, with the present tension throughout the world, no one has suggested that the Argentine authorities do more than maintain careful watch. The societies meet, openly and orderly, for social affairs or sports events or to plan good works. They cheer Stalin, Tito and other leaders of Russia's satellites.

If the Perón Government were to make an issue of such procedures it would probably prove as embarrassing, and as futile as if it were to object to the Anglo-Argentine community's toasting Winston Churchill. If President Perón should outlaw the Communist party, the Slav groups could keep right on with their program.

Most persons who belong to the Slav societies are not Communists, again using the word in its strictest sense, and have no interest in Marxian dialectics. They profess to despise Marxism and to be contemptuous of the Argentine Communist party.

What the Slavs in these societies are interested in is their blood ties with all other Slavs. From that premise they find it no trouble to progress to the point of idolizing Stalin as the most illustrious person with whom they are linked.

Strong Bond Is Seen

Some observers consider them more strongly bound to Russia than out-and-out Communists since their ideology suffers no qualms over the Soviet's seeming departure from Marxist principles. One of their most active leaders, a one-time White Russian, has been heard to say that Stalin has seen the light and is now carrying out Czarist imperialism, something in which all Slavs can take pride.

While most of the members of the Slav societies in the Argentine Slav Union refuse to consider themselves Communists, they are under the direction of the Moscow Slav Committee, headed since its formation in Russia, Aug. 11, 1942, by Alexander Gondurov. This committee is regarded as the unofficial high command for overseas Slav pro-Soviet propaganda and penetration.

The Communist party in Argentina reports it has 53,000 members and about an equal number of sympathizers. Almost all these are non-Slavs. When the 250,000 members of the Argentine Slav Union are added, it can be seen that the Soviet is not without friends here.

Argentina is not the only South American country with this problem. In South America there are around 1,250,000 Slavs. Many are in Brazil, Chile, Uruguay, Bolivia and Paraguay.

About the same proportion as in Argentina—50 to 60 per cent—are organized in the usual societies. Uruguay has the largest number next to Argentina. Montevideo is the seat of the Coordinating Committee of Slav Organizations, established there Oct. 6, 1942, to further Slav unity in South America.

RELIGION IS TERMED KEY TO U.N. SUCCESS

Dr. Baeck, Leader of German Jews During the Hitler Era, Talks to Refugees Here

Without religious faith there can be no successful United Nations, Dr. Leo Baeck, leader of German Jews during the Hitler era, told a congregation of refugees here yesterday.

Dr. Baeck, president of the World Union for Progressive Judaism, who is here from London on a three-month tour for the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, spoke at the Habonim Synagogue, 150 West Eighty-fifth Street.

Dr. Baeck, who spent more than two and a half years in a Nazi concentration camp at Theresienstadt, was reunited here with many members of his former Berlin congregation and some German Jews who had lived at the camp.

Calling the occasion "a service of reunion and thanksgiving," Dr. Baeck expressed the gratitude of surviving German Jews for the part played in their liberation by Americans.

Expressing the belief that the success of the United Nations was essential to world peace, he said the United States was the keystone around which the success of the United Nations must be built.

In Temple Emanu-El, 1 East Sixty-fifth Street, Rabbi Nathan A. Perilman, preaching on "Religion in the News," charged that the press in dealing with religion, as with other areas of life, emphasized the sensational.

"If one were to base his judgment of religion in American life solely upon the treatment of religious news in the press," he said, "one might very easily conclude that religion on the personal level is little different from what it was in the middle ages, and in terms of social values it might be considered one of the most turbulent centers of confusion in our time, and in terms of theology, it might easily be concluded that religion has either forgotten the meaning of God or very rarely makes reference to Him."

In the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, Seventieth Street and Central Park West, Rabbi David de Sola Pool said that "in our secular age, if religion is going to save men from self-destruction, it must insist that there be no rigid separation between heaven and earth, soul and body, sacred and secular."

Rabbi Israel Goldstein, in Temple B'nai Jeshurun, Eighty-eighth Street, near Broadway, said he felt sorry "for those Jews who find it necessary to keep avowing their Americanism and their patriotism."

"American Jews," he said, "can afford to let their record speak for itself, their record in peace and war, in culture and in commerce, in civic enterprise and philanthropic activity."

Endorsing the March of Dimes campaign for infantile paralysis victims, Rabbi Samuel M. Segal proposed, in Mount Neboh Temple, 130 West Seventy-ninth Street, an "International March of Dimes project to help in uniting mankind for a world endeavor in saving the afflicted young."

In Temple Ansche Chesed, 100th Street and West End Avenue, Rabbi Joseph Zeitlin declared that the situation in Palestine was a test case for the United Nations.

"If the U. N. is to be not merely a debating society," he said, "then it must have the moral fortitude to implement its recognition of the Jewish state."

"Until an international police force can be set up," said Rabbi Bernard J. Bamberger in West End Synagogue, 160 West Eighty-second Street, "the Jews of Palestine must be given the means to defend themselves. The present arms embargo is not only a threat to their safety but a contradiction of our own professed policy."

U. N. KOREA GROUP SET TO REPORT FAILURE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SEOUL, Korea, Jan. 31—It was learned today that the United Nations Commission on Korea will adopt a resolution outlinging the failure to implement the United Nations resolution on Korea in face of the Russian refusal to cooperate. The document will be forwarded to the Little Assembly.

The commission, according to sources close to the delegates, will tell the Little Assembly that the observation of elections in the Soviet occupation zones of Korea is impossible. At the same time the commission will outline possible alternatives, including the holding of separate elections in South Korea in which two-thirds of the country's population of 29,000,000 will be eligible to participate.

Although a majority of the delegates oppose this step, it is believed that the Little Assembly's recommendations would persuade the commission to go ahead with such a plan.

It was learned that the drawing up of a report to the Little Assembly would consume the better part of next week and that the communication should be in the hands of the Little Assembly the second week in February.

Miguel A. Pena Valle, delegate from El Salvador, who arrived here yesterday, addressed the commission this morning. He said that his Government favored elections in South Korea alone if Russian cooperation was not forthcoming.

This morning the commission discussed the advisability of calling in P. O. Chough, director of the national police in South Korea, for consultation on Monday.

TRADE GROUP ACTS TO END STALEMATE

Names Coordination Committee to Consider Requests Made by Latin Americans

By RUSSELL PORTER

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, Jan. 31—The heads of the delegations to the United Nations Conference on Trade and Employment decided today to appoint a coordination committee ti seek compromise on issues that still deadlock the conference.

The proposal for the committee was made by Dr. Cesar Charlone, chairman of the Uruguayan delegation, on behalf of the sixteen Latin-American Governments. Dr. Charlone's statement emphasized the need for a special group to harmonize the views of industrialized and undeveloped nations on the kind of world trade charter that should be written.

The chief reason for the stalemate, according to the statement, has been the failure to give adequate consideration to the desire of the undeveloped countries for industrialization. Those countries regard this step as of "fundamental importance."

The statement said the Latin-American countries wanted a charter that would gain the unanimous approval of all Governments participating in the conference.

Of the Latin-American countries represented at the conference, Cuba, Nicaragua and Paraguay were the only non-signers of statement.

Clair Wilcox, chairman of the United States delegation, moved adoption of the proposal. He recalled he had opposed it when first suggested a fortnight ago because of the danger that it might act as a fifth wheel to retard work of the conference but said it deserved a trial in view of its backing by so many delegations.

The General Committee of Conference was instructed to detail plans for the special committee, subject to the approval of the delegation heads.

Mr. Wilcox indicated for the first time the possibility of a compromise with Latin-Americans and other undeveloped countries on three major unsettled issues dealing with economic development.

He said the new Brazilian draft of the article on the use of quantitative restrictions, such as import quotas to encourage economic development, might solve this problem.

Mr. Wilcox also said the difficulty over the use of new preferential tariff arrangements by the same group of countries for the purposes of ecnomic development without prior approval might be solved through proposals regarding the establishment of customs unions and free trade arrangements.

The chairmen of the main committees of the conference said they were satisfied with the progress made, although the session already has exceeded its deadline by two weeks.

Tugs Using Barge as Ram Open Illinois River Lane

By The Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Ill., Jan. 31—Two powerful Mississippi River towboats, driving in tandem with 5,600 horsepower behind a steel barge fitted as a battering ram, have cut a narrow path through the worst ice in the Illinois River in twelve years.

Col. W. P. Trower, the Army's Chicago district engineer, said today that the river channel should be wide enough within two or three days for barge traffic, stalled for a week, to be resumed.

Held back by the ice are more than thirty barges with 3,000,000 gallons of petroleum products and 28,000 tons of coal, products vitally needed in fuel-short Chicago.

Capt. A. C. Ingersoll Jr., president of the Government's Inland Waterways Corporation, took personal charge of the ice-breaking last Wednesday. Since then, the 2,400 horsepower steam vessel Vicksburg and the 3,200 horsepower motor vessel Huck Finn have pounded continuously, except for time out to make repairs, in their battle.

All locks in the Illinois waterway were reported functioning, but little new traffic was entering from the south due to low water in the Chain-of-Rocks area of the Mississippi River above St. Louis.

Brodetsky Sees 'Weighting of the Scales' Against Jews

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 31 — Britain's current policy of doing nothing toward the implementation of the partition of Palestine was described today by Professor Selig Brodetsky, British Zionist leader, as "weighting the scales heavily against the Jews."

"The government's insistence on neutrality means that the Jews being frustrated in their attempts to defend themselves while the Arabs have access to arms and volunteers who are coming in freely from neighboring countries," said Professor Brodetsky. "This is an intervention, whatever interpretation may be placed upon it by His Majesty's Government.

LONDON, Jan. 31 (AP) — Dr. Chaim Weizmann, veteran Zionist leader, tonight urged Zionists to strive for British aid.

"We must achieve once again that cooperation between Great Britain and ourselves without which a great deal of our work in Palestine, particularly in the early days, could never have been done," he said.

United Nations Seeks Fund to Help 400,000,000 Who Still Suffer From War

By KATHLEEN TELTSCH
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Jan. 31—To help 400,000,000 children, underfed, ill-clothed and suffering from years of war, the United Nations will send out tomorrow an appeal for assistance from peoples throughout the world.

The campaign, the largest ever undertaken, will be carried out in at least forty-five countries through the United Nations Appeal for Children. Tomorrow the drive will start in the United States, where a goal of $60,000,000 has been set. In Canada the collection of funds will begin next week. In Finland and Czechoslovakia campaigns will be started later in February, and in the other countries throughout the spring.

In each of the member nations the collection of contributions will be carried out by a national organization, assisted by welfare agencies, Scout groups, labor unions, clubs and religious organizations. The appeal will be carried to the public through motion pictures, press and the largest network of radio stations ever used to broadcast a message from the international organization.

Ill Girl, 4, to Make Plea

Radio stations in all countries will carry a recording of the voice of a 4-year-old Polish refugee girl, Pessel Fachler. The recording was made by the National Broadcasting Company in a German displaced persons' camp where she is recovering from tuberculosis and malnutrition. When the record was made the girl weighed only twenty-seven pounds. Underdeveloped and undersized, she resembled a 2-year-old child.

From the United Nations headquarters broadcasts will be beamed all over the world, carrying a message by Secretary General Trygve Lie hailing the campaign as a "great and common effort to relieve the distress of children." Mr. Lie's message named Feb. 29, the extra day in 1948, as the "symbolic" day on which all persons will be asked to "give one day" to the campaign. The contribution will be asked either in the form of a day's salary or income or in produce.

Chester Bowles, chairman of the international advisory committee, who is on his way from Europe, radioed a message to the United Nations, asking the peoples of the world to "join hands around the globe and support the international drive." Europeans, Mr. Bowles maintained, are determined to keep peace. They know, he added, "by saving the generation they will save themselves and they will have their peace."

Hailing the opening of the campaign, Dr. Aake Ording, executive director, recalled that only a year ago the idea of a world-wide fund received unanimous support from member nations.

"Only a few of us can raise our hands in those solemn gatherings where war or peace is declared," he said. "But every one of us can do something about a hungry child."

Teen-Agers Meet Feb. 14

On Feb. 14 it is planned to bring together at Lake Success teen-agers representing United Nations countries for a mass conference. Based on the theme, "Report to the Children," the program will feature messages and voice recordings made by children all over the world calling upon adults to save them from starvation.

The United States campaign will be carried out jointly with American Overseas Aid, which also raises funds for foreign relief. There will be no opening ceremony, but the campaign will get under way officially tomorrow when former Under-Secretary of State William C. Clayton makes a speech in Cincinnati on behalf of the campaign.

Brooklyn Garden Club Seeking Supplies for Breukelen

The Brooklyn project to send supplies to Breukelen, in the Netherlands, will be discussed Tuesday, it was announced yesterday by the sponsor, the Brooklyn Heights Garden Club of 101 Columbia Heights, Brooklyn.

The club will meet in the home of Mrs. L. Parker McKinley at 92 State Street, Brooklyn. Dr. Willem Cnoop-Koopmans, consul general of the Netherlands, will speak.

Marguerite C. Salomon, of the project's executive committee, said contributions of articles, mostly apparel, were sought.

The Mayor of Breukelen has suggested for shipment knitted underwear, baby clothes, sheets and pillow cases, cotton material, men's suits, bicycle tires and tubes, cotton thread, rubber bands, pins, buttons, overalls and wool.

"In our opinion," he wrote, "you can best help by sending materials. The women can make the clothes themselves. In view of different cuts, and especially different measures, this seems to us the best way."

U.N. KASHMIR TALKS HALTED BY INDIANS

Delegates Await Instructions in Wake of Gandhi Murder—Recall of Aides Hinted

By A. M. ROSENTHAL
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Jan. 31—India's delegates to the United Nations were anxiously awaiting instructions from New Delhi last night on how to go ahead with the drawn-out Kashmir case in the light of upsets at home caused by the assassination of Mohandas K. Gandhi.

The assassination stopped hearings of the Indian-Pakistani dispute just as the Security Council was lining up a majority in favor of two Belgian resolutions calling for a cease-fire order and a United Nations-sponsored plebiscite in Kashmir.

Officially, N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar, chief of the Indian mission, is scheduled to go ahead on Tuesday with his arguments that the Council should take no action on a plebiscite now but spend all its efforts on bringing peace to the princely state.

But Indian spokesmen, still gloomy and stunned by the murder of Mr. Gandhi, conceded that they did not know what repercussions it would have on the case. One delegate, fearful of the possibility of widespread rioting, said:

"If your whole country should go up in flames, there would be little use in arguing a case before the Security Council."

Advisers May Be Recalled

There was speculation in Indian circles that Mr. Ayyangar and some of his advisers might be called home to confer with government leaders on the Kashmir case. And Indian delegation members were also discussing the possibility that a shift in the government might have an influence on the handling of the dispute.

Some diplomatic circles believed that Mr. Gandhi's death might change the whole focus of the Kashmir case. They believed that there would be an intensification of direct talks between New Delhi and Karachi.

Since the dispute has been officially presented to the Council, it cannot be dropped from the agenda without a majority vote. But it was believed that the Council would accept any agreement reached by the parties to the dispute.

Meanwhile, India and Pakistan were making no move to name their representative to the three-nation mediation board appointed by the Council on Jan. 20 to try to settle affairs in Kashmir. Pakistani spokesmen said they still had not made up their minds on the nomination.

"No Name in Our Pockets"

"We have no name in our pockets," said a Pakistani official. "Our policy is to observe the attitudes and statements of the Council delegations during the debate and then decide on which country is best suited to represent Pakistan on the mediation board."

The assassination of Mr. Gandhi was still a prime topic of discussion here, where the United Nations flag is at half-mast. And in Oslo, Secretary General Trygve Lie expressed his sorrow at the passing of the Indian leader.

"The news of his death will shock every peace-loving man in the world," said Mr. Lie. "His philosophy forbade every form of violence.

"The example of his personality and his power over the minds of men was so strong that he succeeded by his last fast in making leaders in the two Indian states accept his conditions and stop the civil war.

"The leaders now guiding the states are taking over a heavy heritage and are carrying a great responsibility."

POLE FOR U. N. ACTION ON ECONOMIC ISSUES

Poland feels that all major economic problems should be dealt with through the United Nations, Dr. Oscar Lange, Polish delegate to the United Nations Economic and Social Council, said yesterday at LaGuardia field on his arrival from Paris after a two-month stay in Poland.

He added that Poland was "ready to accept aid from anybody on the condition that there are no political strings attached to it."

"We are quite anxious to have the greatest economic cooperation with the United States," he said, "but such cooperation is possible only if there are no political strings and provided that priority is given, not to Germany, but to the countries that have been destroyed by Germany. Whether a country does or does not accept the Marshall Plan should have no influence on normal trade with the United States."

Dr. Lange said that aid should not be a license for the United States to assert "what parties should or should not take part in a government."

Asked about the Molotov Plan for Eastern Europe, Dr. Lange said: "I don't think there is such a plan. You would have to ask the Russians."

Dr. Lange announced that he was a candidate for the presidency of the Economic and Social Council, which begins sessions Monday. Poland, he added, is much interested in the work of the Council and intends to take an active role. It will urge that the Council have full authority "to deal with economic problems of the world."

PUPILS PASS TEST ON CURRENT NEWS

Youth Forum Panel Calls Death of Gandhi One of Major Events of the Year

The assassination of Mohandas K. Gandhi, 78-year-old Hindu leader in India, was listed as one of the year's outstanding news events at a current events quiz, conducted yesterday by the Youth Forum, which is sponsored by THE NEW YORK TIMES and broadcast by WQXR.

Three boys and three girls from public and parochial junior high schools of the city participated in the program as members of a panel, selected at random from their schools. Several hundred others in the same age group attended the session in Times Hall, 240 West Forty-fourth Street. They also gave responses to the questions submitted by Miss Dorothy Gordon, moderator of the forum for THE TIMES.

At the outset, Miss Gordon explained that the questions were selected from tests submitted monthly to the city schools by THE TIMES since last October and were prepared by a committee of three teachers. They have been used in classes during that time.

The pupils also mentioned the Palestine issue, the European Recovery Plan, the move for Korean independence and the issuance of the documents of the Russian-Nazi pacts as important news events in the international sphere.

The pupils were able to list the sixteen nations that will participate in the European Recovery Plan, when questioned by Miss Gordon, and also noted the conflict that has resulted from the Palestine partition plan of the United Nations.

They commented also on the recent devaluations of the Russian ruble and the French franc, with one of the pupils pointing out that Great Britain had objected to the French action as having a bad effect upon the status of the pound sterling and British economy generally.

On a national scale, the pupils noted the recent investigation of grain speculation, President Truman's message to Congress and his proposal for tax reduction as outstanding events.

The members of the panel were Milton Revan, 13 years old, Hermann Ridder Junior High School, the Bronx; Aubrey Seeman, 14, Junior High School 55, the Bronx; David Harris, 12, Public School 165, Manhattan; Frieda Lidicker, 13, Public School 73, Queens; Jean Roy, 12, St. Francis de Chantal School, the Bronx; Marion Gurewitz, 13, Montauk Junior High School, Brooklyn.

Next week the Senior High School Forum will discuss "Would a World Federation Assure Peace?" beginning at 10:15 A. M.

American Who Held Killer 'Wanted to See Gandhi'

Herbert Reiner Jr.
Associated Press

By The Associated Press.

STAMFORD, Conn., Jan. 31—Herbert Reiner Jr., the American who seized the assassin of Mohandas K. Gandhi, had recently expressed the hope in a letter that he might some day see the Indian leader and attend one of his prayer meetings.

His mother, Mrs. Herbert Reiner Sr., said at her home here today that it was apparently to fulfill that hope that her son was present when Mr. Gandhi was slain.

Mr. Reiner, who is 32, went to India in 1947 as a disbursing and financial officer for the American State Department.

He served in the Navy during the war and was discharged in 1946 as a lieutenant commander.

PAKISTAN SHARES GRIEF FOR GANDHI

Marks of Deep Respect Shown —Moslems Fear Effect of Loss of True Friend

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 31—Pakistan, as well as India, is shadowed in grief today over the death of Mohandas K. Gandhi. Moslems in the predominantly Moslem Dominion realize thaat Mr. Gandhi was a staunch friend of their brother Moslems in India and they are apprehensive of new religious violence now that India's great peacemaker is no more.

Every mark of respect is being shown to Mr. Gandhi by the Pakistan Dominion and Provincial Governments. It is recognized by Pakistan Moslems, many of them bitter enemies of Hindus and Sikhs, that Gandhi was above these quarrels and had voluntarily brought great suffering upon himself to advance religious tolerance.

According to newspaper dispatches from Pakistan all Government offices in Karachi, the capital, were closed today in mourning for greatest Hindu leader and flags were flown at half staff on all Government buildings in the Province of Sind.

Numerous prominent Moslems flew to New Delhi to attend Mr. Gandhi's last rites. One of these, the president of the West Punjab Moslem League, declared tonight that "every Moslem in Pakistan knew that Gandhi helped the Moslems in India."

Lahore, capital of West Punjab and scene of some of worst communal riots, was described tonight as a "city of death," so deep was the mourning for Mr. Gandhi. A Lahore resident, interview by telephone from New Delhi, said that the Moslems there attended a prayer meeting this afternoon in the Gandhian manner reciting from the Mindu scriptures as well as from the Goran. Later a mass meeting was held at which Mr. Gandhi was eulogized by the West Punjab Prime Minister and other Moslem political leaders of the Province.

The general feeling in Pakistan, according to informants, is that in Mr. Gandhi's death the 40,000,000 Moslems in the Dominion of India have lost one of their two best friends, the other being Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru.

"With Gandhi dead," said one Moslem from Pakistan, "the Moslems of India must give Pandit Nehru their strongest backing."

Punchboards on Mail Blacklist

Postmaster Edward J. Quigley of Brooklyn called attention yesterday "to the fact that lotteries, gift enterprises or schemes for the distribution of money or property by lot, chance or drawing are a violation of Section 259 of Title 39, United States Code." Punchboards were cited as an example of prohibited lotteries.

GANDHI CREMATED AS MILLION WATCH

of emotion on a colossal scale without any formality or pomp. Except for high-ranking officers, the service men participating were in undress uniform. There had been no time for drill and preparation so that the impression of the onlooker today—as at the independence celebration—was one of sheer overpowering mass.

Through the long sad night near relatives and members of Mr. Gandhi's entourage had prayed by his body which lay on a low bier surrounded by rose petals. The Sanskrit word for God was traced in flowers at the foot of the bier and rose petals covered the plain white sheet over Mr. Gandhi's body. The corpse had been exhibited on a balcony under flood lamps until midnight, but thousands waited all night long in a queue to see the body after the gates to the Birla residence were reopened at 6 A. M.

Prime Minister Nehru, his strong features set sternly against grief that burned in his dark eyes, personally supervised the arrangements that included the overnight conversion of an army weapons carrier into Mr. Gandhi's funeral cortege.

Military Honor Guard

Accompanied by the blowing of conch shells and shouts of "Mahatma Gandhi Ki Jai (Long Live Mahatma Gandhi") the procession began at 11:45 A. M. The cortege, with the engine silent, was pulled by four ropes held by fifty service men. Four thousand army troops, 1,000 air men, 1,000 policemen and 100 navy men formed the guard of honor, led by mounted cavalry of the Governor General's bodyguard.

Moslem organizations in colorful dress were conspicuous in the procession and had a favored place near the cortege. Many Moslems were openly weeping. Mr. Gandhi had been their greatest friend and defender against persecution by his brother Hindus.

Mr. Gandhi, covered with a white cotton cloth with face bared, lay on a bier bordered by a purple sheet. Pandit Nehru, Defense Minister Sardar Daldev Singh, Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabfribhai Patel and Mr. Gandhi's fourth son, Devadas, were on the cortege with other relatives and close associates in front. All were barefoot—a Hindu mark of respect.

Earl Mountbatten, wearing a black armband, Lady Mountbatten and their two daughters, Lady Pamela Mountbatten and Lady Brabourne, were in a car close by. Other Ministers of the Indian Cabinet followed as well as a number of Provincial Governors who had flown to New Delhi in special planes for the funeral.

Pelted With Flowers

As Gurkhas and paratroopers cleared the way, the shouting crowd pelted the cortege with flowers and garlands. Along the route of march as the body passed there was a continuing thick shower of rose petals flung upon the revered figure by devout mourners. Near the Delhi Gate three planes of the Royal Indian Air Force came low and dropped hundreds of flowers on the cortege.

The procession was preceded by police in jeeps, with loudspeakers, who asked crowds to be quiet as Mr. Gandhi's body passed. Police on foot bade the curb-sitters to remove their feet from the roadway and keep them on the curb. Armored cars and four army tanks moved abreast ahead of the procession proper.

Mr. Gandhi's grand-daughter Manu and his daughter-in-law Ava, who had been with him when he was shot, and other women members of his camp wept brokenly as they marched barefoot the entire five and a half miles to the burning ghat. They and other Hindu women chanted sacred Hindu airs the entire way.

At the Raj Ghat Mr. Gandhi's relatives and friends squatted cross-legged on the ground in the manner of Hindu mourners and prayed and chanted. While police and soldiers fought to hold the crowd at a workable distance, a structure of sandalwood, grease, coconuts, incense and camphor was erected on the brick platform eighteen inches high and twelve feet square, which had been built overnight by the Government's Public Works Department.

Mr. Gandhi's body was wrapped in a sheet sprinkled with holy water and placed atop this pyre on a bed of flowers.

As the fire rose the throng moved away quietly. They obviously went to their homes, for Delhi tonight was a dead city, though streets are usually almost impassable on Saturday nights. Every social event has been called off.

By Government order all India will mourn for thirteen days from today the loss of its greatest son.

MILLION IN HOSPITAL FUND

Many Institutions Contribute to N. Y. U.-Bellevue Drive

Philanthropic institutions and foundations have contributed to date "well over" $1,000,000 in the campaign to raise $15,575,000 for the projected New York University-Bellevue Hospital Medical Center, it was announced yesterday. About 160 personal and corporate foundations have donated an average of $7,500 each to the proposed medical center.

The largest contribution was $150,000 from the New York Foundation. The Bernard and Alva Gimbel Foundation contributed $100,000. Other contributions came from the Hofheimer Foundation, $75,000; the Altschul Foundation, $52,000, and the Bulova Foundation, $51,000.

A special concert will be held next Sunday at Carnegie Hall, the proceeds of which will be given to the Medical Center Fund. Dr. S. Aubrey Gittens is chairman of the committee sponsoring monthly concerts at Carnegie Hall for the benefit of the fund.

3 CITIES IN INDIA SWEPT BY RIOTING

paper Hindu Rashtra, a Marathi weekly with strong Mahasabha alignments.

This journal has been a bitter critic of Mr. Gandhi's efforts to bring about a conciliation between Hindus and Moslems. The assassin earlier had edited the Marathi newspaper Agrani (Fire) which suspended publication when action taken against it under the press emergency powers act for allegedly spreading disaffection.

The assassin, a college graduate, hails from the Bombay Deccan native state of Sangli.

Acting on the theory that the Mahasabha had plotted Mr. Gandhi's death, the police arrested twenty-one men suspected of involvement in the conspiracy here late tonight.

The house of Dr. V. D. Sarvarkar former president of Mahasabha was reported to have been searched. Dr. Sarvarkar has been an almost legendary political figure for his past bitter anti-British record. His secretary and bodyguard were among those arrested.

Elements of the Mahasabha organization in Bombay have been under close police surveillance for some time, particularly since the bomb thrown on Jan. 19 at Mr. Gandhi's prayer meeting.

Among those arrested in Poona by noon today was the assassin's brother.

Investigating officers will fly from Bombay to New Delhi tomorrow.

The line of inquiry now independently pursued in four provinces, Bombay, West Bengal, East Punjab and Delhi, indicates the wide ramification that the police attribute to their suspects. The police also suspect that the potential plotters have unlimited stocks of arms and ammunition.

Arson Widespread

POONA, India, Jan. 31 (Reuters)—More than two dozen buildings were set on fire and six fires were at one time burning simultaneously in the western part of Poona today when the fury of crowds was directed against local members of the Hindu Mahasabha.

Four premises of newspapers taking the Hindu Mahasabha line were attacked and one of them was gutted.

Homes Are Wrecked

KOLHAPUR, India, Jan. 31 (Reuters)—A large crowd swept around this city—capital of the Indian state of the same name, 100 miles south of Poona—today wrecking, looting and burning houses and business premises belonging to leading members of the Hindu Mahasabha and other prominent orthodox Hindus. By 1 P. M. (local time) the situation was still not under control.

GANDHI MEMORIAL IS HELD IN LONDON

Thousands Mourn at Services in India House Library, Made Into a Temple

By CLIFTON DANIEL

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 31—In grief and anxiety over the future of their riven native land, Indians in London paid final homage today to Mohandas K. Gandhi. Thousands attended a Hindu memorial service whose oriental ritual seemed both exotic and poignant in the stolid gray Anglo-Saxon surroundings of midtown London.

The library of India House, headquarters of the Indian High Commissioner, whose walls are paneled in rich Indian wood, was transformed temporarily into a Hindu temple. An altar was erected beneath a full-length portrait of India's modern demi-god, who was portrayed in the familiar loincloth that was his symbol of identity with India's poor. Spotlights illuminated the spindly, austere figure.

India's green, white and yellow national flag was draped over the altar, which was surrounded by a bower of white and yellow lilies, lilacs and daffodils.

Barefooted Indian women disciples continually padded to the altar to keep the heavy Oriental incense burning. A Hindu priest in a blue cassock refilled the crucibles of burning ghees, which is clarified butter.

Throughout the morning hundreds of worshipers filed before the altar, some leaving gifts. Flowers and a letter from "three ladies of Ceylon" with a check for a memorial fund were among the offerings.

As the memorial service began a priest read some of Mr. Gandhi's favorite passages from the Hindu scriptures. One person after another eulogized the dead leader.

Finally, when an Indian woman in a black coat went to the altar to pray, the congregation's emotions seemed to break and women sobbed audibly.

Speaking for the British Government, Arthur Henderson, Secretary for Air, termed Mr. Gandhi one of the greatest spiritual forces in history and said that his spirit "remains as a beacon of guidance to men and women not only of his own country but to all countries in the world."

Krishna Menon, Indian High Commissioner, was obviously choked by emotion when he tried to address the congregation in the library and thousands who listened to loudspeakers outside

"Our job is to carry on," he finally said, adding that the only way now to serve Mr. Gandhi was by living lives that would contribute to a happy India.

Reston Calls for Political Policy in Aid to Europe

Integration of the American economic policy of aid to Europe with a political "Marshall Plan" was urged yesterday by James Reston, diplomatic correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES, in a morning lecture at Town Hall.

Mr. Reston declared that the political hostility of the Soviet Union to our program of economic recovery and the political opposition of the Communist parties in France, Italy and Germany, backed by the Red Army standing along the Oder, "has produced considerable fear in Western Europe."

"Our policy is weak in two respects," Mr. Reston said. "It is not combined with a clear commitment by the United States to use its power against any future aggressor in Europe and it is not combined with an active, sincere, constant effort to reach a political and economic arrangement with the Soviet Union, whose policies are at the heart of this fear and economic chaos."

REDS ARE DRIVEN BACK FROM PEIPING AREAS

PEIPING, Jan. 31 (AP)—Chinese Government troops have seized the initiative north, east and south of Peiping, easing Communist threats to rail communications, pro-Government military dispatches said today.

The chief activity was said to be by troops from Jehol, 125 miles northeast of Peiping, who swept down to clear the Reds from the Peiping-Jehol Railway, particularly in the area twelve miles east to thirty-five miles northeast of Peiping. As a result, trains were reported running regularly to Jehol.

Similar operations were reported south of Peiping on the railway to Paoting.

Government dispatches from Manchuria continued to predict a new big battle at Sinlituh, seventy miles west of Mukden. The Communists captured the town Monday.

NANKING, Jan. 31 (Reuters)—The Chinese Government's position in western Manchuria became more precarious in the past twenty-four hours when Communist columns, fresh from their victory at Sinlitun, captured the important railway junction of Kowpangtzse, ninety miles southwest of Mukden, according to reports from Manchuria.

As a result of this success, the Communists now hold an uninterrupted line from Sinlitun to Panshan, twenty miles southeast of Kowpangtzse.

It was reported here today that strengthening of defenses in northern Kiangsu against a possible Communist threat to Nanking has been ordered by the Ministry of Defense.

837 COILS

each muslin-pocketed . . that's just ONE of the things that make this S & F mattress a buy

Do you know how long 106 years is? It's a whole century plus six years. Gimbels furniture department's done a whale of a lot of growing in that time. Look at this mattress. Look at the price. No wonder Gimbels volume of furniture business is zooming.

$48

Gimbels made a special purchase of these Stearns & Foster mattresses just for the Midwinter Furniture Sale. Usually you'd pay dollars and dollars more for this type mattress. The 837 coils (the perfect number for a large size mattress) are fine high carbon steel wire—not the soft, sagging kind. As far as we know, there's no finer mattress made anywhere, by anyone, that sells at this low price. Each coil is tailored into its own trim muslin cover, then they're nested row on row. Then S&F pads these coils with Insulo cushions. Over the cushions S&F puts layers of finest blended cotton felt. They surround the whole thing not with an ordinary roll edge—but with the famous seat-edge pre-built border. The mattress has a heavy 8-ounce woven striped tick, handles for turning and ventilators. Twin or full size. Use Gimbels easy payment plan and take months to pay for your Stearns & Foster mattress (credit service charge). (Matching pre-built border eight way hand tied steel coil box spring, twin or full size $48.)

REDS' MANIFESTO IS ISSUED IN BRAZIL

Congress Moves to Dismiss Deputy for Reading Charges Signed by Prestes

By RALPH M. GARCIA
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 31—Luis Carlos Prestes, head of the Brazilian Communists, has issued a manifesto attacking the army and judiciary, causing political leaders to demand that Deputy Pedro Pomar, who is chief editor of Tribuna Popular, Communist newspaper, be dismissed from Congress.

Deputy Pomar remains in Congress because he was elected by the Social Progressive party. He read the Prestes manifesto in Congress amid protests from other deputies.

A few hours after the reading of the manifesto the movement to oust Deputy Pomar was started.

The Prestes manifesto commences by painting a gloomy picture of the political, financial and economic situation and accuses the government of "treason and political terror directed by President Dutra, who aims to become a dictator and deliver Brazil to Yankee bankers."

"Brazil is in the throes of black hunger," he said. "The Communists have been fighting for liberty and democracy against the brutality of feudal and capitalistic exploitation and against Yankee imperialism."

After denouncing "Yankee imperialism and Wall Street slaves of the dollar" the manifesto charges:

"Once more our constitution was brushed aside by an executive who controls public funds and thus can obtain the complicity of judges who violate the laws."

The manifesto said that the Communist Deputies who were expelled from congress were defending the country against fascist generals, against President Dutra and all those who "use their office to protect illicit Delas and deliver the country to Truman and Marshall, who are directly intervening in the country's administration and ordering around Brazil's armed forces."

The manifesto asked the workers to rebel against the government.

"Organize yourselves to fight for higher salaries and against hunger," it continues. "Raise yourselves against the dictatorship, fight for land for the workers and against American bankers and create a popular, democratic and progressive government.

The action against Deputy Pomar will be based on the charge that he showed disrespect to Congress by reading a manifesto that demands revolution.

The manifesto is signed by Senhor Prestes in the name of the Brazilian Communist party, which was outlawed about a year ago.

A report from Sao Paulo said a freight car loaded with dynamite exploded on the Sorocabana Railway at Cerquilho. Four persons were killed and forty-three were hurt. The railway station and many houses were destroyed.

The police said they suspected sabotage. The railway has had two Communist-led strikes in one of which a train was wrecked.

COMMUNISTS BEATEN BY CZECH STUDENTS

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PRAGUE, Jan. 31—Prague University students decisively defeated the Communist group in today's voting of 300 delegates of the Student Association of Prague University and other institutions of higher learning in Bohemia. A Democratic student bloc, consisting of Czech National Socialists and People's party supporters, elected twenty-six members of the board of directors to the Communists' ten and the Social Democrats' four.

The president of the student body will be a member of the Czech National Socialist party, which at present is under heavy Communist attack as most actively anti-Communist party in the country.

The student delegates voted by a two-thirds majority to disaffiliate with the Communist-dominated Society of Czech youth, an organization for the youth of the whole nation and for general indoctrination along lines now becoming familiar in modern Europe.

The Communists succeeded in halting by only a few votes an effort to take the Student Association out of its membership in the also Communist-dominated National Confederation of Trade Unions. Under the present arrangement every student, in a sense a trade union member, might be subjected to trade union discipline under certain circumstances.

To destroy this connection a two-thirds vote was required and the Democratic student bloc fell barely short of the necessary number of votes.

The student meeting was stormy throughout. Delegates started yesterday morning and have not slept since. At late hour tonight they were still working on the last details of their program.

The Marine Corps Institute is a school operated by and for Marines at no cost to the students. Enlist in the Marines now and take advantage of a thorough, complete education. Choose your own course of study. Recruiting headquarters, 90 Church Street.

BRITISH GUNS HALT JERUSALEM SNIPING

Children Play Where Bullets of Jews and Arabs Crossed—Six-Pounder Main Weapon

By SAM POPE BREWER

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

JERUSALEM, Jan. 31 — The British planted a six-pounder cannon and a three-inch mortar in Jerusalem today to put an abrupt end to the incessant sniping between the Jewish Yemin Moshe quarter and the Arab villages near by.

Jewish posts were occupied and the six-pounder anti-tank gun and mortar were trained on the areas from where Arab shots have come.

The result was that instead of the repeated bursts of firing that have made the area hazardous, children were playing today in the open ground where the gunners stood by their weapons.

The Stern group has just issued a statement accusing the British of working in connivance with Arabs and warning of a Sternist plan to stamp out Arab armed activity. Today's British action, however, gave this Jewish section peace and security for the first time in two months.

Yemin Moshe lies about 500 yards west of the southwest corner of the Old City. It is on a steep slope facing the Armenian part of the Old City across a deep gully. Most of the shots have come from two Arab villages lying south of the Old City and little more than half a mile from Yemin Moshe.

The British began their clean-up operation early yesterday by taking over two Haganah pillboxes at the top of the hill on which the village lies. Despite Haganah protests the British troops replaced them in these posts thus commanding Yemin Moshe as well as the points from which the Arabs were firing.

Periodic bursts of fire continued throughout yesterday but this morning the six-pounder and the mortar were brought up and planted on the slope of the hill near King George Avenue and trained on the areas from which the Arab snipers operated. Arabs sent to ask the purpose of the gun, were told that it would return the snipers' fire if they resumed activity.

The British announced tonight another move to preserve order in Haifa. From tomorrow on 400 marines who arrived last night will take over control of the port area, relieving Sixth Airborne Division detachments.

Haifa will be a keypoint of the British Army withdrawal operations and the British cannot afford to allow chaos there. Because of its mixed population it has been one of the most difficult points to control up to now.

The day was generally quiet in Jerusalem, though one Jewish house near Sheik Jarrah quarter was blown up early this afternoon. There were no casualties in the explosion.

A manifesto issued to the press by the Stern Gang and received in today's mail said in part:

"Events in Eretz Israel [Palestine] since the United Nations decision have proved that British imperialism, after its military and political defeats, decided to call upon its allies among the Arabs. With the flagrant assistance of the British authorities and by means of terror the Arab Higher Executive succeeded in ensnaring the Arab masses, who would not voluntarily and in their own interests have aided or abeted those criminals."

The manifesto put the blame for present troubles on Arab bands of "professional robbers and adventurers," and said that the Sternists "have decided to visit retribution upon the marauders and their helpers."

Casualties reported by the police today totaled four Arabs killed and four wounded and one Jewish girl wounded. Two of the Arabs were killed and three wounded when one of them picked up a booby trap in Qiby Village and it exploded. One was killed by a sniper in Ramleh and one by a sniper in Jaffa.

The Jewish girl was seriously injured when shot by a sniper in Tel Aviv.

The statement by Sir Alexander Cadogan to the Palestine Commission at Lake Success that the Trans-Jordan Frontier Force would be disbanded caused considerable consternation here and the censors forbade its publication locally. It was feared that the troops might desert with their arms and ammunition or that their morale would be greatly lowered by the news.

It had been intended that the announcement would be made only as the mandate was about to be terminated so that the unit could be kept intact. Many of the men and officers had been under the impression that the force might be absorbed into Trans-Jordan's Arab Legion under Brig. J. B. Glubb Pasha, but so far there has been no mention of this possibility.

The Frontier Force, commanded by Col. J. W. Hackett, an Australian, is composed of 2,900 men and officers. A majority of the fifty-two officers are British.

The name of the force is misleading as it is entirely a Palestinian unit whose duties are to guard the frontiers with Trans-Jordan, Lebanon and Syria. It is a British organization partly subsidized by the Palestine Government and partly by the British Government. The great majority of its men are Arabs, with an extremely small percentage of Jews.

The Trans-Jordan Frontier Force is a highly efficient military body trained in the latest tactics and with the most modern weapons available. Its officers and men are a colorful lot in their khaki uniforms and Cossack-style astrakhan headdress. Their actual duties have been those of a gendarmerie, patrolling frontiers, guarding bridges and preventing smuggling and illegal immigration.

BRITISH INSIST REDS WERE ON VESSELS

necessarily considered subversive.

Nevertheless, the British have convinced themselves that large-scale Jewish immigration, far from being discouraged or prevented by Soviet satellite governments, has been deliberately encouraged by them. Since the British take it for granted that the satellites would not or could not pursue such a policy independently, they assume that the immigration is in accord with Soviet policy.

In the case of the Pan York and Pan Crescent, the Russian conditions are believed to have been that the ships would be released only if 1,000 Jewish Communists were included among the immigrants.

It seems that at the last moment Jews in Palestine tried to prevent or at least to delay the ships' departure. It was at this time that a quarrel within the Jewish Agency for Palestine, followed by the resignation of Dr. Moshe Sneh, security officer of the agency, took place. The Jewish Agency did not halt the ships.

From the British official reports it is possible to re-create the background and chronological development of events as the British understand them.

For at least two years Jews streamed steadily into Rumania from the Soviet Union. Since no-one can go out of Russia without approval, the British take it for granted that Soviet authorities knew of this migration. Moreover, there is evidence to the effect that Soviet authorities occasionally put military transport at the disposal of Jewish leaders to facilitate this transit.

It is also asserted that many of these Russian Jews not only were among unauthorized immigrants to Palestine from Black Sea ports in the last two years but furthermore received priority over Jews from elsewhere in Europe. It is asserted that Jews were helped by the Russians and Rumanians to embark from Rumanian Black Sea ports as well as to get to Bulgaria. Although clearances to ordinary travelers are virtually impossible to get, these immigrants readily got exit clearances.

Prior to the sailing of the Pan York and the Pan Crescent, at least four ships with unauthorized immigrants left Rumanian and Bulgarian ports and three others left Yugoslav ports.

Camps have been in existence in Rumania, where paramilitary training has been given to wou[illegible]-be immigrants with the permi[illegible]on of the Soviet section of the [illegible]llied Control Council, it said, and a Major Levy of the Soviet section has been publicly engaged in Jewish extremist activities in Rumania.

Major Levy was said to have been in constant contact with Josef Klarman and Moshe Averbuch, who have been implicated in this immigration. Mr. Averbuch was connected with Haganah, Zionist militia. It is believed that the Rumanian secret police was implicated with the tacit approval of Moscow.

Early in November, 1947, Dr. Sneh, a former leader of Haganah, conferred in Bucharest with Mr. Averbuch and Dr. J. J. Schwarz, European director of the American Joint Distribution Committee, according to the documents. The British think that was the time Dr. Sneh accepted Russian conditions for the sailing of the Pan York and the Pan Crescent.

On Nov. 15, British officials believe, a letter was read at a meeting of the Palestinian Jewish Communist party from a Jewish section of the Rumanian Communist party stating that the Rumanian Government would not hamper Jewish Communists who wished to leave for Palestine to strengthen the Communist movement there.

British information early in December was that Ana Pauker, Rumanian Communist leader and now Foreign Minister, was apparently opposed to this emigration from Rumania and was trying to stop it. However, the British surmise that, as the Pan York and the Pan Cresent were released from Constanta, a Rumanian port, and sailed mostly with Rumanians from Burgas, Bulgaria, Madame Pauker must have changed her mind or had it changed for her.

Received Fuel in Rumania

There was a long period when the two ships lay empty in Constanta. The Pan York got there Oct. 1 and the Pan Crescent Oct. 11, and they did not leave until Dec. 22. During that period repairs were made, the ships were refitted and each got forty tons of fuel oil from a Rumanian company under the Joint Russian-Rumanian Control.

Meanwhile, the immigrants had been lined up the customary way. Those wishing to go filed applications months before. Each was assigned to a local group leader, and the immigrants were told they would be notified when and how to leave. They were notified first that they would sail from Constanta.

On Dec. 20 a number of cattle-car trains from all parts of Rumania set out for Constanta, where most of the immigrants arrived Dec. 21 and 22. The next day they were told the plan had been altered and they would sail from Bulgaria. Some of the trains that had not reached Constanta were directed straight for the frontier and to Burgas. Those in Constanta left the morning of Dec. 24 for the Bulgarian frontier.

On the Rumanian side there was strict customs examination of all the immigrants, but, curiously enough, there was no search or intervention of any kind on the Bulgarian side or during the twenty-four-hour journey to Burgas, where the Jews arrived the morning of Dec. 26.

The embarkation had been remarkably well organized. The Jews stayed in their trains from the moment they crossed the Bulgarian frontier until they boarded the ships. Bulgarian officials kept out of sight even in Burgas, although dock authorities were said to have been helpful.

Each immigrant received a card assigning him to a bunk, stating what sitting he was to eat at and detailing his general duties while on the ship. Each also received a metal identification disk on a string. Discipline was strict at all times.

Both ships sailed from Burgas on Dec. 26. They were boarded, unopposed, by the British Navy off Cyprus and thence escorted to Famagusta, where the debarkation took place Jan. 1.

Questioning Difficult

Then came the usual interrogation by British authorities. It was a difficult matter because the immigrants had to be debarked quickly and could not be segregated afterward. Security during the train journey and the sea voyage had been so highly organized that there was not much to find. The orders had been to destroy all documents, and Haganah leaders gave repeated warnings about documents and about talking to the British.

Nevertheless, a number of documents were discovered. Among them were membership cards of the Union of Communist Youth in Rumania, the Rumanian Communist party, the Lenin United Communist Association, the Union of Female Anti-Fascists and the Universal Democratic Front.

All these bodies, it is asserted, are militant Communist organizations. Moreover, a number of Communist handbooks were found. As was previously stated, some of the documents showed that certain passengers had served in Russian forces during the war.

Also, about 1,000 of the immigrants spoke Russian, according to the British, who acknowledge[illegible] that they have no means of co[illegible]firming their suspicions that some of these were non-Jews.

Most of the immigrants were Rumanians. There were relatively few Hungarians, Bulgarians or Germans.

CIRCULATIONS STILL GAIN

Ayer Lists 51,410,089 for Dailies, 44,296,572 Sundays

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 31—The latest compilation by the Ayer Directory of Newspapers and Periodicals, which has just come off the press, shows a large and growing total for daily and Sunday newspaper circulations in the United States.

In each of the last six years the over-all aggregate has increased, and 1947 ran true to form. Although smaller than in either of the preceding two years, the gain still is considered large.

The total for 1947 was 51,410,089 for daily newspapers, both morning and evening, an increase of 658,596 over the previous year. The total circulation of Sunday newspapers was put at 44,296,572, a rise of more than 1,000,000 copies per issue over the previous twelve months.

REFUGEE DEADLINE NOW DISTURBS IRO

Battle to Reverse Decision Is Expected—Preparatory Body Ends Fifth Session

By MICHAEL L. HOFFMAN
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Jan. 31 — The Preparatory Commission of the International Refugee Organization ended its fifth session today.

Final meeting was notable for attempts by the British and United States delegations to soften the impact of yesterday's commission decision to recommend tomorrow as the deadline for the eligibility of refugees to IRO care, maintenance and resettlement programs.

If the IRO General Council confirms the Preparatory Commission's decision, taken on British initiative with United States support, persons fleeing from political and racial persecution after tomorrow will becomes charges of the Government of whatever country they can manage to get into but they will receive no international aid.

The British delegate, C. J. Edmonds, read a telegram today from Foreign Secretary Bevin expressing continuing concern over the refugee problem and implying that Britain's position on the deadline issue should not be interpreted to mean that Britain dissociated herself from future steps to aid refugees.

United States delegate, George Warren, whose deep personal concern for the refugees has never been doubted by his colleagues despite some positions taken by his government, told the commission that he was sure the United States Government would not have a closed mind on the issue of future refugees when the serious concern of the other members of the commission had been explained to the Washington authorities.

It is quite clear to everyone associated with the Preparatory Commission since its foundation that this decision to set a deadline, even though so far it is only couched in the terms of a recommendation, marks the beginning of a crisis. Once the issue has been raised every voluntary relief agency and every Government that is likely to be faced with a new refugee problem will be bound to fight to get the decision reversed.

To reverse it now means, in effect, to decide in favor of a more or less permanent refugee organization, which the United States and the British supported but which a majority of non-European Governments are equally bound to resist, at least until public opinion has been swung around on the question.

If the deadline had not been set, the secretariat would still have been bound, for budgetary reasons, to limit its extension of aid but it would have been able to avoid making arbitrary rulings on eligibility. It would have been unnecessary to create what is bound to become a new class of DP's with not even the hope of international aid in resettlement to look forward to.

Then, in a year or two the issue of "new" refugees could have been faced after most of the pressure from wartime refugees had been relieved by resettlement. Today even delegates who voted for the deadline fervently wish that this could have happened.

The Preparatory Commission meets again here on May 4 unless before that time the constitution has been ratified by an additional two states so that the council of the IRO may assemble.

70 HURT IN SHANGHAI RIOT

Taxi Dancers and Waiters Protest Closing of Halls

SHANGHAI, Jan. 31 (UP)—Seventy persons were injured today when 500 taxi dancers and waiters and 400 policemen fought in the offices of the Social Affairs Bureau during a demonstration against a Government order closing dance halls.

Thirty girls and forty policemen were hurt. The offices were wrecked.

The riot began when bureau officials, ordered to enforce the ban, started drawing lots to see which dance halls would be closed first.

BRITON SAYS RUSSIA NEEDS COOPERATION

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 31—If the Soviet Union's aims are peaceful, Secretary for War Emmanuel Shinwell said today in a speech at Nottingham, she "has everything to gain from restoration of a Western Europe which is strong enough to stand on its own feet."

Continuing the series of talks on Soviet relations recently made by British ministers, Mr. Shinwell asserted that the Labor party wanted friendly cooperation with the Soviet Union in every sphere but on a basis of "mutual respect and democratic tolerance."

His speech echoed the sentiments contained in a statement made a week ago by Hector McNeil, Minister of State, who declared that the British Government was still prepared to discuss any differences with the Soviet Union.

"Let us not forget," Mr. Shinwell said, "that, despite what is said on either side, Europe was in the past and must be in the future an economic entity. It is doubtful whether even the Marshall Plan can succeed unless the West obtains a steadily increasing supply of coal, food and timber from the East, while at the same time the standard of life in Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary will be reduced to lower levels unless those countries continue to exchange their surplus produce for manufactures from the West.

"This fact alone should demonstrate how groundless is the fear that recovery in Western Europe threatens the security of Russia and her neighbors, provided that Socialist principles are not ignored."

30 Die in Ship Fire Stampede

HONG KONG, Jan. 31 (AP)—Thirty persons were pushed into the water and drowned tonight when steerage passengers stampeded off the burning coastal steamer Kwantung at a Hong Kong wharf. Most were women and children. Crew members extinguished the fire with slight damage to the vessel.

ITALY SLAPS SOVIET ON PROTEST TO U. S.

Rome Informs Moscow That Only It Has Right to Pass on Warships' Visit

By ARNALDO CORTESI
Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Jan. 31—The Foreign Ministry instructed the Italian Ambassador to Moscow today to inform the Russian Government that if any protest was to be made over the presence of United States warships in Italian ports Italy would do it. This move is thought in Rome to take all force from the Russian protest note to Washington.

Italy made it plain that she has the right enjoyed by all sovereign states to decide without foreign interference whether warships of another power are welcome in her ports. The Italian Ambassador was further instructed to call Moscow's attention to the fact that the Italian Government was not aware of the Russian step in Washington until the news of it was published by newspapers.

This is the first time since the end of the war that Italy has had enough courage to rebuke a foreign power. It is pointed out in Rome that international courtesy would have required Russia to inform the Italian Government beforehand of the protest to Washington or at least to advise it at the moment when the protest was delivered.

Russia instead, preferred to treat Italy as though she were a "negligible quantity" and had no voice in deciding what warships might be allowed to visit her ports, the Foreign Ministry asserted.

The Italian Government charged that the Soviet Union protested to Washington without giving sufficient weight to some essential elements of the case. These are:

First—Visits of American warships to Italian ports, as to ports of other Mediterranean countries, are made only after authorization has been obtained through normal diplomatic channels.

Second—It is exclusively up to the Italian Government, as to all governments of sovereign powers, to judge whether there is any reason to make protests.

Third—The Italian Government would grant permission with "equal cordiality" if any other foreign power wished its warships to visit Italian ports.

REECE URGES PURGE OF COMMUNISTS IN U. S.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 31 (AP)—Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said tonight that "the spread of Communist power throughout the world constitutes the greatest menace to our nation."

He appeared as the principal speaker at a dinner of the Order of Sons of Italy in America.

"Whether * * * we shall be compelled, ultimately, to come to grips with communism abroad, is something for the future to decide," he continued. "It is to be hoped, of course, that armed conflict can be avoided, but it would be unrealistic to fail to recognize that possibility. Meanwhile, however, we can certainly proceed with a thorough housecleaning at home."

Mr. Reece defined communism as "an organized attempt directed from a foreign headquarters to destroy liberty, to destroy property, to destroy religion and all of the other things necessary to the perpetuation of our form of government. In so far as it receives support from American citizens, it is nothing more than organized treason."

"It is a grim fact which must be faced," he declared, "that the Communist power today represents the greatest threat of our American institutions * * * because of unwise policies of appeasement, conciliation and even outright encouragement and material support practiced by our own Government.

"We have helped to create a monster which threatens to destroy us."

NON-VOTERS FACE ARREST

Guatemala Acts Against 16,000 —80,000 More Cases Likely

GUATEMALA, Jan. 31 (UP)—The Director of Registration brought court action today against 16,000 local voters for their failure to go to the polls in recent municipal elections.

Similar action will be brought against 80,000 voters throughout Guatemala. Under present election laws, those who fail to vote are liable to fines or imprisonment.

President Juan Jose Arevalo did not vote but he was said to have given a valid excuse. No action will be brought against him.

GREECE OUSTS HEAD OF HER MAIN ARMY

as a means of protesting against what he considered governmental refusal to protect the Army from what he termed "ill-considered criticism" by parliamentarians and the press.

The impression here tonight is that politicians scored a victory over the military in the Ventiris removal—although it would not be fair to attribute political aspirations to any general who might be regarded as taking General Ventiris' place.

Actually, the post held by General Ventiris is to be dissolved and the apportioning of duty by the three Army Corps in the north that he commanded from his headquarters at Volos is to be recast.

The corps operations in Macedonia and Thessaly will come under the direct command of the General Staff in Athens.

This move was interpreted by some observers as an attempt to make Athens supremely responsible for the prosecution of the war against the rebels headed by Gen. Markos Vafiades. The implication is that this may entail serious drawbacks, in so far as Athens is rife with political discord.

Shift by Sophoulis Seen

ATHENS, Jan. 31 (AP)—All questions regarding the prosecution of warfare against the guerrillas were not settled at today's meeting of the Defense Council.

General Ventiris had offered his resignation as commander two months ago, but it was not accepted. He had expressed dissatisfaction privately with continued criticism of his command, chiefly by the Liberal party press.

Premier Sophoulis had strongly opposed General Ventiris' resignation at the time, but later changed his mind. The Premier wanted General Ventiris removed and commands given to some senior officers favorable to the Liberal party. This met with opposition from both the British and Americans, who said politics had no place in the Greek Army.

Vice Premier Tsaldaris was said to have been willing to accept General Ventiris' resignation. This was a change in position, for he had previously clashed with Mr. Sophoulis over a new distribution of military commands. It was believed Mr. Tsaldaris had differences with General Ventiris over the methods used to halt the guerrillas in their recent attempt to seize Konitsa.

Mr. Tsaldaris disclosed on Jan. 12 that friction had developed between the American Mission for Aid to Greece and War Minister George Stratos over matters of military procedure.

ANTI-STRIKE LAW VOIDED

Sophoulis Informing Washington of Its Cancellation

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Jan. 31 — Premier Sophoulis said today that the Greek Ambassador in Washington had been instructed to inform the United States Government that the Greek Government had decided to call for legislation to cancel the anti-strike measure adopted last December.

The measure, while containing anti-lockout provisions, carries the death penalty for leadership of "illegal" strikes and has been under some severe criticism.

[The State Department in Washington was asked by the CIO Executive Board on Friday to protest to Athens, on the basis of the United States interest on democratic rights in Greece, against the "death penalty" anti-strike law.]

The Greek Government, realizing that it is under criticism abroad, went to some length today to publicize a statement by Dwight P. Griswold, chief of the United States mission, yesterday at his weekly conference with the Athenian press. Questioned whether he agreed with certain unfavorable commentaries on the Athens situation, Mr. Griswold replied that, on the contrary, he was "optimistic regarding the present situation."

General Alexander Papagos, retired, said during an interview today that reports circulating here to the effect that he would be willing to become Greece's dictator were "malevolent fantasies." He said he disapproved of all dictatorships.

General Papagos commanded the Greek Army in the war against Italy in 1940, was held by the Germans in Dachau and since 1945 has been Grand Chmberlain. He is 67 yers old.

NEW GUIDE OFFERED ON ATOM RESEARCH

Top Scientists Crowd Meeting as Prof. Schwinger Outlines Way to Pass Obstacles

By WILLIAM L. LAURENCE

A new mathematical compass to guide physicists in the dark jungles of the nucleus of the atom, promising to lead them to hitherto forbidden domains of knowledge concerning the innermost workings of the material universe, was given yesterday at the annual New York meeting of the American Physical Society at Columbia University by Prof. Julian Schwinger of Harvard University.

Professor Schwinger's paper was the highlight of the meeting that attracted more than 1,500 of the country's leading nuclear physicists. So great was the interest shown that hundreds were turned away at its presentation at the morning session, while scores crowded the isles and the doorways. The standees included some of the world's topflight physicists.

Dr. Schwinger was invited by popular demand to give a repeat performance in Columbia's more spacious McMillin Theatre in the afternoon, the first time in the history of scientific gatherings, within the memory of the oldest scientists present, for an encore to be given by a scientist.

"This is the big thing," commented Prof. Hans A. Bethe of Cornell University, one of the world's leaders in theoretical physics. Seated at the front row at the second performance, smoking his pipe, was Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, director of the Institute for Advanced Study, who took office yesterday as the new president of the American Physical Society.

Scores of others of similar high rank in the realms of physics could be seen smiling with admiration as Dr. Schwinger hurdled over hitherto unsurmountable mathematical obstacles. The audience applauded gleefully in the manner of children at a motion picture greeting the arrival of the hero in the nick of time to foil the villain.

"Villain" Is Really "Hero"

The major "villain" in this case represented recent experimental observations at Columbia University that threatened to upset current fundamental ideas about the nature and motion of electrons, ideas forming the keystone of current atomic theory. The climax of Dr. Schwinger's presentation came when he proved to the satisfaction of his colleagues that the "villain" was really no villain at all, but was actually no less than the "hero" in a villain's disguise.

A great part of the advance in atomic research has depended on knowledge of the hydrogen atom, which served as the "cosmic Rosetta Stone" for decoding the mysteries of the more complicated atoms. For twenty years the established doctrine of the hydrogen atom has been the theory of Prof. P. A. M. Dirac of Cambridge University, England, who was awarded the Nobel Prize for his fundamental contributions to atomic knowledge.

Professor Dirac's theory brought together for the first time various unrelated experimental observations. Its mathematical symbols combined harmoniously for the first time a number of major cosmic themes—the mysterious spin of the electron about its axis, the electron's magnetic moment, and what is known as the relativity effect, namely, the increase of the electron's mass with the increase of its speed.

Most striking of all, the theory predicted the existence of the positron, or positive electron, a prediction verified several years later by Prof. Carl D. Anderson of the California Institute of Technology, a discovery that brought him the Nobel Prize.

Because of its success in embracing all of the observed facts about the electron and the verification of its prediction, Dr. Dirac's theory about the laws of motion of the electron stood among scientists as the major pillar of modern atomic theory, on a par with Newton's laws of motion in the everyday world.

The Columbia experiments, performed last year by Prof. Willis Lamb and Robert Retherford, tested for the first time, by means of radar waves, another prediction of the Dirac theory that had been regarded as crucial to its validity. The results showed "a small but significant discrepancy" between the predictions of the Dirac theory about certain definite energy levels of the hydrogen atom and actual experimental observation.

The discovery of this discrepancy between theory and experiment threatened until yesterday to pull out the keystone of the arch of all current fundamental concepts about the forces and motions of the electron and proton in the hydrogen atom. Without the Dirac theory physicists would have been left stranded in the wilderness of the universe without a compass to guide them.

The first to come to the rescue of the theory was Professor Bethe with a tentative explanation for the discrepancy. According to Dr. Bethe, the electron is not only attracted by the nucleus but is also continuously emitting and absorbing radiation. This process, he held, results in the shift of energy levels by an amount that depends on the state of motion of the electron within the atom, a shift that would account for the observed discrepancy between prediction and observation.

Paper Bolsters Theory

The chances of Dr. Bethe's explanation being correct were regarded by leading physicists as about equally divided. The problem presented nuclear physics with its major crisis in modern times, on the outcome of which depended whether the whole structure they had built up laboriously for the past twenty years would stand or fall.

Until yesterday the results hung in the balance. Professor Schwinger came along in the nick of time with a formidable mathematical structure that proved not only that the discrepancy was no discrepancy at all, but also that the Dirac theory was much better than physicists had believed it to be.

With this threat to the basic theory of the electron now removed, Dr. Schwinger told the physicists, the road has been opened to attack another formidable citadel of the universe, the realm of the mysterious meson, which holds the key to the very foundations of the physical universe.

Foreign Affairs, Wine Keep Minister Busy

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LUXEMBOURG, Jan. 31 — When the Foreign Ministers of Belgium and the Netherlands had completed the draft of their communiqué on the proposed western European union last night, they sent word for Joseph Bech, elderly Foreign Minister of Luxembourg, to come and initial the documents. M. Bech could not be found.

Finally he was located in the cellar of the Grand Hotel Brasseur, gravely sampling wine from several bottles. Unperturbed, M. Bech explained that besides having been Foreign Minister of the tiny Duchy of Luxembourg for twenty years, he was also Minister of Viniculture. As the man responsible for Luxembourg's wines, he was engaged in making the selection for the state reception to be held that evening.

Take Editor of German Magazine Off Train in Austria

VIENNA, Jan. 31 (AP)—Warren Trabant of New York, editor of the United States-sponsored German-language magazine Heute, was taken off the Prague-Munich train today by Soviet authorities, his wife said. He is being held in Soviet-occupied Austria.

Mrs. Trabant said the Russians had removed her husband from the train in Steyregg, Austria, for failure to have an Austrian visa. She said the Russians had permitted her to continue to Salzburg, although she also lacked a visa.

United States military sources in Salzburg said they were working on the case and hoped to have Mr. Trabant released later today.

BOY SCOUT WEEK WILL OPEN FRIDAY

2,120,000 Members in U. S. Will Mark Organization's 38th Anniversary

The Boy Scouts of America will bserve the thirty-eighth anniversary of the organization during Boy Scout Week, which will begin 'riday and continue through Feb. 2, Amory Houghton, president of he Scouts' National Council, announced yesterday.

More than 2,120,000 members of the Boy Scouts will celebrate the anniversary in most communities in the United States and its possessions. The week's theme will be "The Scout citizen at work—in his home, community, nation and vorld." Scouting's activities for the year will begin with that week.

Boy Scouts will engage in a program to save and produce food for he starving overseas, and as part of the program each Scout will be xpected to "save a bushel, grow a bushel, and share a bushel" of ood. They will save a bushel by ating grain substitutes.

How Aid Will Be Given

Each Scout and leader with access to land will be encouraged to grow garden produce or field crops and Scout units will be urged to share a bushel by sending a CARE or similar food package to a brother Scout or needy family abroad.

In addition to conserving food and natural resources, the Scouts will emphasize safety and fire prevention, home repairs and the maintenance of personal health.

At special meetings during the week, demonstrations for parents and friends of Scouts will outline the Scout troop as an example of democratic living. Scouts and their visitors will take part in an evening of games, stunts, campfire songs and skits. Scout delegations will also call upon the Mayor or other head of the community to report on what services they have contributed in the last year, and the scope of the work to be undertaken in 1948.

On Feb. 8, the date of the incorporation of the organization, countless churches of all denominations will observe Boy Scout Sunday. Scouts and their leaders will attend church services in uniform and many sermons are expected to consider some aspect of the week's theme. Synagogues will hold their observances on Friday evening and Saturday.

In a message of greetings, Mr. Houghton declared:

"More than 14,000,000 men and boys have been members of the Scouts since the movement was organized in 1910. For each of them the Scout oath and law has become a part of his way of life. But the movement's effect has gone far beyond the impressive numbers in its membership."

Dr. James E. West, Chief Scout, said:

"It is fairly universally recognized, in my judgment, that the Scout, by his special experience and training, has definite and distinct citizenship advantages. He has accepted his personal responsibility to plan his daily life and actions so as to keep himself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

From London came a message from Col. John Skinner Wilson, director of the Boy Scouts International Bureau. He said the task of extending good-will and understanding to Scouts of former enemy countries was "a hard job, but one well worth doing."

PUBLIC GETS BLAME FOR POOR MOVIES

Parent-Teachers Group Told Element of Profit Cannot Be Overlooked by Industry

While most Hollywood producers are anxious to improve the quality of their productions, the public repeatedly has shown it will not support, always, expensive motion pictures produced purely from an artistic standpoint, industry spokesmen told members of the United Teachers Association of New York yesterday.

They were among a group of speakers at a UTA conference on "Children's Films for Children."

At the session in Freedom House, 20 West Forty-second Street, the movie representatives indicated that at times children have proved better judges of what constitutes a good picture than have adults. They said high production costs made it economically unsound to turn out feature-length films that parent groups would regard as "exclusively designed" for children.

Harold O. Danson of Eagle Lion Films, in defending the industry, denied that movies are "corrupting" children. He said there were plenty of films released "which children enjoy and which will not corrupt their morals." He and other industry spokesmen pointed out also that the element of profit and loss cannot entirely be overlooked in the picture industry any more than in any other.

"You cannot expect an industry in which production costs have risen tremendously in the past few years to become altruistic and lose money producing pictures that even your children do not like," he said.

Harold Hendee, research director for RKO Radio Pictures, dwelt on the desire of producers to turn out the so-called better pictures if they could feel assured of public support at the boxoffice. He said frequently a "great picture," such as the "Informer," produced several years ago, lost money until it won a gold medal award and was released again.

"If you are interested in good pictures watch for the good ones when exhibited in your local or neighborhood theatre and consider it your duty to support them, and we'll make them," Mr. Hendee said.

The movies and radio as contributing factors in juvenile delinquency was discounted by Edwin T. Lucas, director of the Society for the Prevention of Crime. He said there was no reliable evidence that either of these mediums was contributing to delinquency, but declared they do contribute to "bad taste." He said it was a "grave error" on the part of adults to feel that they alone were capable of selecting motion pictures suitable for children. He said there was a tendency to overlook the fact that "children are people," have a right to discriminate for themselves and a right to their own conception of realism.

Dr. Irene F. Cypher, Professor of Education at New York University, presided. She and several parents who spoke said there was room for improvement in the quality of films now turned out by Hollywood.

KITAIN, VIOLINIST, HEARD

Presents Program of Standard Items at Carnegie Hall

Robert Kitain, Russian violinist who made his New York debut nine years ago, appeared in Carnegie Hall yesterday afternoon. The program included standard repertoire items, such as a Vivaldi-Respighi Sonata, a Bach Chaconne for violin alone, Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnole," the Debussy Sonata and works by Szymanowski and Paganini.

Although Mr. Kitain evoked moments of beauty in the Bach slow movement and achieved an effect of dramatic drive in some of the arpeggiated figures, one had the feeling that he was playing without enough care. Double stops and even single melodic notes often required adjustments for pitch, the tone was frenquently scratchy and the violinist regularly allowed his bow to bounce in legato passages as if it were too tight.

Boris Roubakine was the accompanist. A fair sized audience applauded with enthusiasm. C. H.

TOILET SET BRINGS $1,950

Three-Day Sale at Parke-Bernet Galleries Realizes $70,295

A finely chased eighteen-karat gold toilet set in the Louis XV mode was sold for $1,950 yesterday at an auction sale of art properties of Mrs. John Russell Pope, of New York, and other collectors, held in the Parke-Bernet Galleries, 30 East Fifty-seventh Street.

Receipts for the closing session of the three-day sale were $29,217, bringing the total for 694 lots to $70,295.

A Sheraton carved and inlaid mahogany break-front bookcase, of English early Nineteenth Century design, was sold to a private buyer for $900, and a dealer paid $600 for a twenty-two karat gold and enamel stem vase. Among valuable rugs in the collections, was a Kirman medallion carpet, 26 feet 8 inches by 17 feet 4 inches, which an agent purchased for $1,300.

BARBARA HUTTON GAINS

Improves After 2d Operation—Suffered Relapse Friday

BERN, Switzerland, Jan. 31 (AP)—Princess Igor Troubetskoy, the former Barbara Hutton, underwent a second operation today. Her condition was described as critical this morning but had improved tonight.

Doctors said the Woolworth heiress is in no immediate danger. She underwent a major operation last week to overcome an intestinal ailment. Today's was termed a minor abdominal operation. She had suffered a relapse last night.

Another major operation may be necessary, the doctors said.

THOMAS RYAN, PIANIST, MAKES DEBUT HERE

Thomas Ryan, pianist, gave his first New York recital yesterday afternoon at Town Hall. He was heard in a program made up of Bach's "Toccata" in D major, Beehoven's Sonata, Op. 109, Schumann's "Kreisleriana" and the Sonata by Bartók.

Mr. Ryan's playing was sane, serious and refined. A tender lyricism was the keynote of his performances, and it was in those parts of his offerings where this sufficed that he came nearest to having something communicative to impart. Intensity, fire and brilliance, however, were never in evidence in his work.

Without these factors, or, vividness of imagination, the "Kreisleriana" of Schumann, and Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 109, though technically secure, had neither the wealth of contrasts or the emotional depth to make them come to life, in any adequate degree.

Except in the initial Bach offering, which was wooden in sound, Mr. Ryan produced a tone that was always of agreeable quality, but decidedly limited in color. Delicate passages were nicely detailed as regarded nuances and shading, and were suavely delivered.

But want of structural clarity, remissness in the shaping of phrases, and the inability to infuse his readings with vital impact, or profundity of feeling, gave them too surface an effect, despiee the fact that they exhibited an inherent sense of taste and considerable sensitivity. N. S.

ANSERMET OFFERS STRAVINSKY WORK

Conducts NBC Symphony Also in Beethoven, Ravel Pieces in 3d Broadcast Program

Ernest Ansermet, Swiss conductor returned to lead the NBC Symphony for his third broadcast performance early yesterday evening. Known here for more than thirty years as a conductor of Stravinsky compositions, he chose that composer's "Symphonies of Wind Instruments (in memory of Claude Achille Debussy)" as the novelty of the performance.

It was a version of the work recently revised by the composer, substituting conventional instrumentation for the rare basset horn and also flute, smaller metrical divisions for ease of performance and clarification of certain harmonies. The title suggests a series of movements, but the composition is continuous, being divided into several sections of diverse motives only one of which is subject to extensive later use.

Mr. Ansermet and the wind players gave it a masterful performance, investing the incredible rhythmic complexity, the baroque figuration, the contrast of shrill whistlings and big, round sonorities with warmth and vitality.

The concert opened with Beethoven's Fourth Symphony which was read with a faithfulness to the composer's markings and consequent vivid expression unparalleled in this reviewer's memory. The triumph of the event was the spectacular slow movement as its tensions were built inevitably to those incredible, dissonant sforzandos. It was a tribute to the conductor's authority that the orchestra played for all it was worth, contributing a remarkable performance.

The event was concluded by a reading of Ravel's "La Valse," a reading which made the overworked piece come to life. Mr. Ansermet will conclude his visit with this orchestra with next week's concert.

Mitropoulos Gets Honorary LL.D.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 31—An honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred this afternoon by Anatolia College of Solonika, Greece, on Dimitri Mitropoulos, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. President Ernest W. Riggs of Anatolia College made the presentation at a special convocation held in Sanders Theatre, Harvard University. Mr. Mitropoulos is in Boston with the Minneapolis Orchestra for a concert at Symphony Hall.

Stuart Canin, Violinist, in Debut Recital; Former GI Entertained Big 3 in Berlin

When President Truman, Stalin and Winston Churchill attended a state dinner in Berlin during the Potsdam Conference they were entertained by two young American musicians in uniform. The pianist was Eugene List, then a sergeant. The violinist was an obscure private named Stuart Canin.

New York concert-goers have had many opportunities to hear Mr. List, but late yesterday afternoon they got their first chance to hear the other performer of that occasion, for 21-year-old Mr. Canin made his local debut at Town Hall.

The records do not show that Mr. Stalin or Mr. Churchill were as enthusiastic about the violinist as they were about the pianist, but nevertheless Mr. Truman must have been equally proud of him as a commendable representative of American musical culture. For he is a serious, talented and musicianly young fiddler.

With the exception of the Hindemith Sonata in E (1935), his program did not depart from conventional channels. The three major works were Beethoven's G major Sonata, Op. 30, No. 3, the Adagio and Fuga from Bach's unaccompanied Sonata in G major and the D minor Weiniawski Concerto. Nor did his playing show signs of marked individuality, but everything was played correctly, with good taste and with evident musical feeling.

The young violinist made no attempt to show off, but his technique was equal to all the demands of the music. The bowing was smooth and steady, the intonation accurate, and the tone, which was pleasant in sound from the start, grew richer in color as the recital progressed. In the sonatas, too, there was careful adjustment to the dynamics of Eugene Helmer, the pianist.

Altogether, a promising beginning, for one does not expect a fully developed and richly mature human being at his age, even if he has played before the Big Three. The predominantly youthful audience was warmly enthusiastic.

Health Assembly Is Shifted

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Jan. 31—The World Health Organization's interim commission decided today that the first World Health Assembly should be held in Geneva. The date was set tentatively for June 24, subject to approval of United Nations headquarters. This reverses a decision to hold the assembly in the Western Hemisphere. The main reason is that only two Western countries, Canada and Haiti, have ratified the organization's constitution.

STUFFED PORK SHOULDER

- Small fresh pork shoulder (with bones removed)
- Salt and pepper
- 1½ to 2 cups savory stuffing
- Flour, if desired

Sprinkle salt and pepper on the inside of the meat and pile in part of the stuffing. Place the roast, fat side up, on a rack in a shallow uncovered pan. Roast without water in a moderate oven (325°F) until tender, about four hours for a five-pound shoulder. Turn the roast occasionally for even cooking. Remove the strings before serving.

SAVORY STUFFING

- ¼ cup diced celery and leaves
- 1 tablespoon diced onion
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons fat
- 2 cups bread cubes
- ¼ teaspoon savory seasoning
- Salt and pepper to taste

Cook the celery, onion, and parsley in the fat a few minutes. Add the bread cubes and other seasonings and stir until well mixed. If desired, cooked rice, potato, or other cereal base may be used instead of part of the bread.

WRIGHT'S FUNERAL SET FOR TOMORROW

Co-Inventor of the Airplane to Be Buried Beside Brother —Truman Pays Tribute

DAYTON, Ohio, Jan. 31 (AP)—The body of Orville Wright will be buried here on Monday beside that of his brother, Wilbur, who helped him build and fly the first successful airplane.

A funeral service for the pioneer aviator will be conducted at 2:30 P. M. in the First Baptist Church, of which he was a member, by the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Seasholes, the pastor. Burial will take place in Woodland Cemetery.

Mr. Wright, whose age was 76, died in his sleep at Miami Valley Hospital last night of lung congestion and a heart ailment. He had entered the hospital on Tuesday after a heart attack, the second in recent months.

Wilbur Wright, the older of the two famous brothers, died in 1912.

Message From President

DAYTON, Ohio, Jan. 31 (UP)—Messages of condolence on the death of Orville Wright have come to the Wright home from all parts of the country.

President Truman wired:

"Please accept the deepest sympathy of Mrs. Truman and myself in your great bereavement. Few men have so profoundly affected the course of history as did Orville and Wilbur Wright.

"Few men have opened up to mankind such great possibilities for an increasing better world. They will be remembered always by their fellow countrymen with admiration and gratitude."

Medal for Merit Scheduled

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 (AP)—Orville Wright died without receiving the Medal for Merit which President Truman had intended awarding to him for his wartime services.

Mr. Wright had been expected to come to Washington on Jan. 15, but sent word he would be unable to make the trip. Plans then were begun to have Gen. Carl Spaatz, Air Force chief of staff, and John F. Victory, secretary of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, go to Dayton to present the award.

Mr. Wright's last visit to Washington was made late in October for a meeting of the NACA.

During the war, he served also on the Inventors Council and, among other things, took part in development of a decoding machine.

Plane in London Museum

LONDON, Jan. 31 (AP)—Officials of London's Science Museum, where the Wright brothers' original airplane has been on display for twenty years, said today they expect Orville Wright's will to specify what is to happen to the craft.

M. J. B. Davy, keeper of the Department of Air and Water Transport, estimated that more than 10,000,000 visitors have seen the plane since it first was placed in the entrance hall in February, 1928.

"There has been controversy about the plane for years," Mr. Davy said. "The position has been that it was on indefinite loan to us by the owner, Orville Wright, and that is still the position today. He did express the intention a couple of years ago of withdrawing it, but we have had no further instructions.

"Even if it is withdrawn," he added, "a replica, on which students of the de Havilland Aeronautical Technical School are working, is almost complete, and will be available to replace it."

DELAWARE UNIVERSITY LIFTS BAN ON NEGROES

NEWARK, Del., Jan. 31 (UP)—The University of Delaware today followed the initiative of the University of Arkansas and voluntarily lowered its barriers against admission of Negro students.

University trustees voted today to admit Negroes to certain courses of study not available at the Delaware State College (for Negroes) at Dover.

Arkansas yesterday became the first southern state to make the move.

Dr. William S. Carlson, Delaware's president, said the trustees had studied the recent Supreme Court decision ordering the University of Oklahoma to admit a Negro woman student, but had "arrived at their own ruling independently."

He said the only limitations on admission of Negro students were that they be residents of Delaware and meet established requirements.

Dr. Carlson said today's action meant that the university would become "the first in the South" to enable Negroes to work for doctors' degrees.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 31 (AP)—Oklahoma decided today that a white man could not attend a school set up for Negroes, but still left unanswered the more serious racial segregation problem: "Can Negroes attend schools for whites?"

Dean Jerome E. Hemry of the newly created Law School for Negroes at the state capitol here rejected the enrollment application of Walter M. Harrison, 57, Oklahoma newspaperman and ex-Army officer.

Mr. Hemry indicated that Mr. Harrison's application, which was made yesterday, could not be accepted because of Oklahoma's constitutional provision of separate schools for whites and Negroes. No other applications have been received for the school, which was set up to comply with a United States Supreme Court decision ordering Oklahoma to grant equal and immediate educational opportunities to Mrs. Ada Lois Sipuel Fisher, 23-year-old Negro.

Mrs. Fisher refused to enroll and has taken her fight back to the Supreme Court, where on Monday the high tribunal is expected to consider her latest petition requesting that the University of Oklahoma be forced to admit her to its law school.

OSCAR SLATER DIES IN SCOTLAND AT 75

Central Figure in Celebrated Murder Case Was Released After 18 Years in Prison

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 31—Oscar Slater, central figure of celebrated case in British justice, who was convicted of murder and vindicated after eighteen years in prison, died today in Ayr, Scotland. His age was 75.

In May, 1909, he was reprieved and the death sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Eighteen years later, thanks mainly to the labors of the famous author, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, a specially constituted court, empowered by an act of Parliament to review the case, commented unfavorably on the conduct of the trial.

Slater was freed in 1927 and accepted £6,000 (nearly $30,000) from the Government as an ex gratia payment for his wrongful conviction. The end of the story was unfortunately marred by a quarrel between Slater and his benefactor, Sir Arthur, over money advanced by the lattetr to pay the costs of the appeal.

On the evening of Dec. 21, 1908, Miss Marion Gilchrist, 80 years old, a well-to-do spinster who lived alone in a six-room flat in Glasgow, was murdered with a blunt instrument, such as a hammer. Although she had a rather large collection of jewelry, only one item, a diamond brooch, was missing. The police discovered that soon after the murder a pawn ticket for a diamond brooch had been offered for sale by Oscar Slater. They also learned that he and a woman had sailed for New York on the Lusitania under the names of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Sando.

Slater was arrested when he arrived in New York, and the Glasgow police sent detectives here with Miss Gilchrist's maid, in addition to a youth who lived next door, and a 15-year-old girl. All three had seen a strange man living Miss Gilchrist's apartment about the time of the murder.

They failed to identify Slater, but he returned to Scotland without fighting extradition. He had an alibi for the evening of the murder and seemed confident of acquittal. Moreover, he proved that the diamond brooch he pawned had been the property of his woman companion for some time before the murder.

In Glasgow, however, Slater was identified by twelve persons, including the three who had failed to identify him in New York. According to Scottish law the jury was composed of fifteen men, and a majority vote was enough to convict. Nine voted guilty, one not guilty, and five "not proven" The death sencence was commuted after 20,000 persons signed a petition for mercy.

SPRING VALLEY, N. Y., Jan. 31—Officials of Rockland Lodge 329, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, announced tonight a two-month postponement of a strike by 177 bus drivers of five affiliated companies operating in Rockland County and Bergen County, N. J., scheduled for 12:01 tomorrow morning.

A spokesman for the union said it had agreed to put off the strike until April 4 rather than inconvenience the public during the cold weather. He added that the union did so with the understanding that the companies would continue to bargain in god faith on the drivers' request for a 25 per cent wage rise. The companies, which on week days carry 25,000 persons, are the Hill Bus Company, Rockland Coaches Inc., Spring Valley Motor Coach Company Inc., Rockland Transit Corporation and the Tappan and Nyack Bus Lines Inc.

Announcement of the postponement came after a prolonged conciliation conference between company and union negotiators in Bergenfield, N. J.

MRS. GERKEN DIES; HORSE TRAINER, 80

Noted Whip, Winner of 1,000 Blue Ribbons in U. S. Shows —Judged Harness Ponies

Mrs. John Gerken, one of the most famous women exhibitors and whips in the history of American horse shows, whose entries won more than 1,000 blue ribbons, died Friday night in her home at 983 East Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, after an illness of two years. She was 80 years old.

The former Clara Ridley, she was a daughter of Edward Ridley of Brooklyn, who owned a dry-goods store on Grand Street, Manhattan, when that was a fashionable shopping district. She learned to ride at the age of 5 on the fields of the old family farm facing Kings Highway, Brooklyn.

It was at Durland's Riding Academy that she met her husband-to-be, the late John Gerken, one-time president of the Fulton Trust Company. In due course their four children rode ponies over the diminishing acres of the Ridley farm.

Honored by National Group

Few women have known horses as did Mrs. Gerken, for she bred them, raised them, broke them, trained them for the show ring, showed them and, until two years before her death, judged them. She was the first woman to drive in the old Madison Square Garden and the first to be named by horsemen as qualified to judge harness ponies. Ten years ago the National Horse Show Association gave a dinner in her honor at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Early in 1907 Mrs. Gerken won fifty-six blue ribbons in three consecutive weeks. During the preceding six years she had not entrusted any of her employes with the training of her horses, controlling and directing the work entirely herself. All her entries were selected in the rough, then broken and gaited by her.

That autumn, however, she decided to curtail her activities at Gerkendale Farm, Gravesend, and announced the sale of her collection of show horses. The list was headed by the gelding, Newsboy, winner of 100 first prizes. Mrs. Gerken had bought him up at Atlantic City seven years before for $600. Later she refused several offers of $10,000 for him.

Drove for Exhibitors

During the succeeding years Mrs. Gerken never lost her interest in horses. She continued to drive for other exhibitors from time to time, always performing brilliantly, and until her illness frequently appeared at shows as a judge.

The late Alfred G. Vanderbilt first recognized her ability as a judge, and shortly before he sailed on the Lusitania's tragic final voyage he asked her to serve at the Garden that year. Her name was announced in the list of judges for a show that was never held. In 1922 she was the only woman judge at the Garden show.

Mrs. Gerken leaves a son, Edward Ridley Gerken, retired New York banker. Her husband died in the Brooklyn home in 1930 at the age of 76.

A feud between the Oom, who headed the "Mystic Order of Tantrik," and Mr. Crumbie started over Bernard's favoring Sunday baseball in Upper Nyack. T. T. HEINE, 80, DEAD; GERMAN SATIRIST

Co-Founder of Simplicissimus Attacked Junkers, Kaiser and Nazi Movement

Thomas Theodor Heine, Europe's famous political cartoonist, who was co-founder of the German magazine Simplicissimus, noted for its satire and wit in pre-Hitler days, died in Stockholm, Sweden, on Tuesday, according to word received here yesterday. He was 80 years old.

A brilliant artist of international repute Th.Th. Heine (as he signed his cartoons) was inseparable from the weekly that drew its name from the title character of Grimmelshausen's epic of the Thirty Years' War. He founded Simplicissimus with Albert Langen in Munich in 1896, but in 1909 it became an independent institution and assumed its distinctive character.

He was the acknowledged leader of a group of artists and writers, including Edward Thoeny, Wilhelm Schultz, Ludwig Thoma, Olaf Gulbransson and Bruno Paul. But above all the publication reflected Heine's personality. Week after week he not only contributed his masterly sketches but provided his colleagues with ideas and materials as well.

Work Marked by Humor

Heine's style and craftsmanship lay somewhere between Daumier and Beardsley. His work was marked by puckish humor and intellectual finesse. Yet he and his group were so outspoken in their views that they most frequently clashed with their targets: Prussian imperialism, Junkerism, Catholicism and German bureaucracy in general. Heine in particular, using a signature device of a red bulldog, chronicled with affectionate malice the subservient spirit of the small bourgeoisie.

The brushes of Heine and his associates with their opponents became repeated causes célèbres. The most famous was Heine's case of lesé majesté that occurred in the late Nineties. Empress Elizabeth of Austria was an admirer of the German poet Heinrich Heine (no relation to the artist), whom she honored with a monument in front of her Achilleion palace on Corfu. When the Kaiser bought the place he promptly removed the poet's statue.

Thereupon Heine, the artist, drew a cartoon of the Achilleion with a statueless pedestal. The caption was a "Schuettelreim," a two-line verse in spoonerism fashion, and began:

"Von Korfu juengst der Heine schwund. . . ."

Heine was sentenced to some months internment in a fortress. Copies of the issue were confiscated and became a collector's item. But the world laughed at the sardonic mood and the magazine's political reputation was established.

Fled from Hitler Regime

Ten years before the Nazis came to power the Simplicissimus started to attack the Hitler movement. When the Fuehrer took over, Thoeny and Gulbransson, among others, bowed to the Nazis. Heine, however, whose father was Jewish, went into exile, "pauper fashion," as he said.

He worked in Czechoslovakia till the Munich pact drove him to Oslo. When the Nazis occupied Norway, for nine months Heine lived underground. Then he escaped to Sweden.

Born in Leipzig, Heine studied painting at Duesseldorf Academy, then took art courses at the Munich Academy. He began painting in the Bavarian capital, mostly landscapes in the impressionist manner. His early political cartoons appeared in Fliegende Blaetter and Jugend. Several collections of his drawings appeared in book form, such as Bilder aus dem Familienleben"; "Thorheiten"; "Die Boesen Buben" und "Das Grosse Malheur."

Heine's serious paintings were frequently bought by European galleries. He also did a few sculptures. An English translation of his first and only novel, written six years ago in Oslo, was published here last year under the title "I'm Waiting For Miracles." It was a satire on European civilization.

CUSTOMS GAIN HERE UNDER LOWER RATE

$22,500,000 January Total Laid in Part to the Entrance of Warehoused Goods

Customs collections made at this port during January, the first full month of merchandise entry under the new reduced tariff plan, totaled more than $22,500,000, an increase of approximately 17 per cent over the corresponding period of last year, it was made known yesterday.

The new system of lowered tariffs on nearly 1,000 items, which went into effect on Jan. 1, is designed to stimulate foreign trade, and its real effect is not expected to be felt until the usual spring influx of goods, customs officials explained. They added, however, that increased revenue is expected under the plan, despite the reductions.

Harry M. Durning, collector of customs here, attributed the high January total to heavy withdrawals of warehoused materials whose entry had been held up in anticipation of the tariff reductions. He said the month is normally a "let-down period" that follows heavy importation for the Christmas buying season in this country.

Last month's heavy business was highlighted by the "exceptional" returns of Jan. 23, which brought the Government a total of $1,894,000 in duties. Officials called this collection unusual, in view of the fact it included no real big single entry, as in normal in "big" days, but rather a large list of entries.

Exceeds November Total

The January total also ran well ahead of the 1947 Christmas figures for November and December. December showed an aggregate of $16,851,000, while November had collections totaling $18,193,000. The warehousing of considerable amounts of incoming cargo, to be held for the effective date of the tariff reductions, had its effect on these two months, it was said.

Many importers, it was explained, felt that the drop in duties would more than offset the warehouse charges on goods held. This proved true in most cases, since the duties were reduced as much as 50 per cent on many items. But some companies that took to the warehouses were disappointed and now face the necessity of bringing in their goods and paying the same duties that were in effect before Jan. 1, as well as the charges for storing the merchandise.

A number of items did not receive any reduction. These included some spices and sauces, rosary beads, ginger root and rope.

Of the twenty-one nations committed to the Geneva Conference, fourteen have not yet ratified the new tariff agreement under which this country instituted the reduced duties. Any concessions made on particular items to ratifying countries, however, also are granted to nonsignatory nations under the most-favored nation clause.

Custom officials asserted that the full impact of the reduced duties would not be felt until at least six months of this year had passed. They pointed to the winter months as normally low in importations, and added that gradual European recovery plus the usual increases in incoming merchandise during the spring and summer probably would show the plan to its best advantage.

Navigation Course Offered

The Hayden Planetarium will offer a course in modern celestial navigation for the next four months, it was announced yesterday by Gordon A. Atwater, chairman and curator. The course will be conducted by Mr. Atwater, who as a commissioned officer in the Navy, had charge of training thousands of naval officers and midshipmen in navigation during the war. The first session of the course will be held on Wednesday evening.

Col. Charles F. Williams
The New York Times (U. S. Army Signal Corps)

Col. Charles F. Williams has assumed command as Engineer of the New York District, Corps of Engineers, with headquarters at 120 Wall Street, it was announced yesterday. He succeeds Col. W. F. Heavey, who has retired.

As District Engineer, Col. Williams will direct all military construction in the States of New York, New Jersey and Delaware, and the improvements and maintenance of rivers and harbors and flood control projects. He also will be responsible for the construction of the five veterans hospitals assigned to the New York District, four of which are of 1,000-bed capacity and the other with a capacity of 1,984 beds.

Colonel Williams, a West Point graduate, class of 1913, served as Deputy Chief of Staff in the First Army throughout its World War II operations. Prior to that he was assigned as an instructor in the Army's Command and General Staff School.

UAW PUSHES OWN STORES

Union Also Has Warehouses in Many Industrial Centers

DETROIT, Jan. 31 (AP)—The United Auto Workers, CIO, through Victor G. Reuther, educational director, reported today that cooperative warehouses and union stores had been established by the organization in many industrial centers.

In Michigan alone, the report stated, the union had establishments at Pontiac, Detroit, Lansing, Flint, Jackson, Muskegon, Saginaw and Port Huron. They sell groceries, appliances, hardware and auto supplies, and some are equipped with mass distribution warehouses

Elkhart, Ind., has one store and is pushing a drive to open two more. Waterloo (Iowa) UA members have an option on a $75,000 building and are striving to raise share capital.

Cooperative warehouse systems also are being organized in Illinois, Wisconsin and California and committees are working to start the plan operating in New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Connecticut.

DRAGGED 100 FT. BY TRAIN

Franklin Lakes, N. J., Man Found in Snow by School Boys

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

FRANKLIN LAKES, N. J., Jan. 31—Otto Lutolf of this place, a lawyer with offices in Paterson, tripped in getting off the 11 o'clock train on the New York, Susquehanna & Delaware Railroad here last night and was dragged nearly 100 feet before he broke loose. He lay injured in the snow until found by two boys on their way home from a basketball game at Ramsey High School.

He was taken to the Hackensack Hospital, where an operation was performed this afternoon. His condition was described as fair.

FAMED U. S. FLEET NEARS FINAL PORT

Only Six Remain of 23 Ships Including 'President' Series Built for World War I

Scrap yards may soon have claimed all but three of the twenty-three transports built for World War I, ending the saga of what was claimed to be the world's largest fleet of standard passenger liners, according to the American Merchant Marine Institute. Two of the "survivors" are currently being operated under the Spanish flag, and another, now owned by the Army, is idle.

The AMMI recalled yesterday that this "fleet" was built too late for the first great conflict but, with three exceptions, continued in operation and saw service in the second World War. They were of two general types, sixteen being 535 feet long, and seven 522 feet. All were of approximately 13,000 gross tons.

All but five of them, it was added, were known as "President" liners during the greater part of their careers. They were operated by the Dollar Line and its successor company, the American President Lines.

The institute's breakdown of the eventual disposition of these vessels showed that one was sunk before the recent war, seven were lost in World War II, nine have been sold for scrap since the end of the war, three are currently up for sale for scrapping or operation by foreign-flag companies, two are being operated by Spanish interests on the Europe-South America run, and one is idle, under the control of the U. S. Army.

In addition to operation by the Dollar and American President Lines, several of these vessels served under the house flags of the American Mail Line, Munson Line and United States Lines.

The two which were purchased for operation under the Spanish flag are the President Lincoln and the President Wilson, which were renamed Cabo de Buena Esperanza and Cabo de Hornos, respectively. The Army's vessel is the former President Taft, now the Willard A. Holbrook.

The seven lost in World War II, all named at one time for Presidents of the United States, were the Adams, Cleveland, Garfield, Harding, Harrison, Pierce and Polk. The three still up for sale are the former Presidents Hayes and Monroe, and the Southern Cross. Those that have already ended their careers as scrap steel were once known as the President Grant, President Jackson, President Jefferson, President McKinley, President Roosevelt, President Van Buren, American Legion, Pan America and Western World.

BERMUDA CRUISE DELAYED

Veendam, Slowed by Weather on Way Here, to Leave Wednesday

The departure of the Holland-America liner Veendam on a six-day cruise to Bermuda has been postponed until noon Wednesday, Frederick R. Wierdsma, general manager of the company in this country and Canada, announced yesterday. The ship was originally scheduled to leave here twenty-four hours earlier.

Mr. Wierdsma explained that the postponement was dictated by heavy seas that have slowed the Veendam on her way from Southampton and Rotterdam. She is now due here on Tuesday, after almost continuous heavy weather on the Atlantic. He said no change had been made in the cruise's duration, adding that instead of returning to New York about 5 P. M. on Feb. 9 she is due back here on Feb. 10 at the same time.

Air Service to Atlantic City

Beginning March 1, Eastern Air Lines will operate regular passenger, mail, express and freight air service into Atlantic City, N. J., Capt. E. V. (Eddie) Rickenbacker, president and general manager of the line, announced yesterday. Eastern Air Lines planes will use the Pomona Air Base airport, Captain Rickenbacker said.

THE WEATHER OVER THE COUNTRY

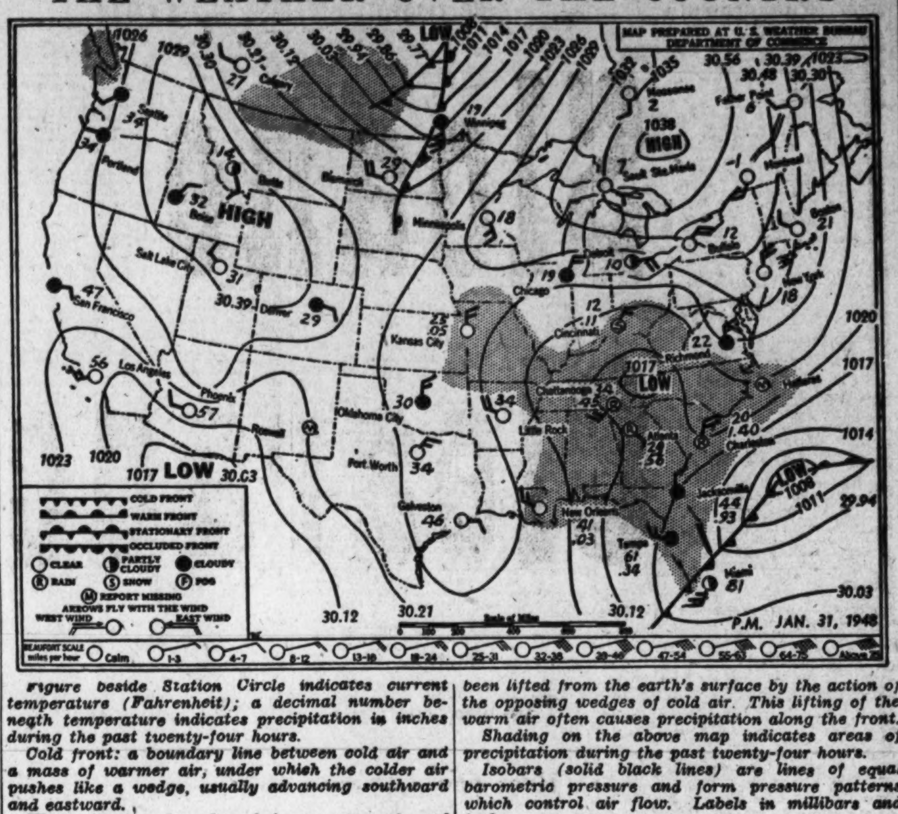

Figure beside Station Circle indicates current temperature (Fahrenheit); a decimal number beneath temperature indicates precipitation in inches during the past twenty-four hours.

Cold front: a boundary line between cold air and a mass of warmer air, under which the colder air pushes like a wedge, usually advancing southward and eastward.

Warm front: a boundary between warm air and a retreating wedge of colder air over which the warm air is forced as it advances, usually northward and eastward.

Stationary front: an air mass boundary which shows little or no movement.

Occluded front: a line along which warm air has been lifted from the earth's surface by the action of the opposing wedges of cold air. This lifting of the warm air often causes precipitation along the front.

Shading on the above map indicates areas of precipitation during the past twenty-four hours.

Isobars (solid black lines) are lines of equal barometric pressure and form pressure patterns which control air flow. Labels in millibars and inches.

Winds are counter-clockwise toward the center of low-pressure systems, and clockwise and outward from high-pressure areas.

Pressure systems usually move eastward at an average movement of 500 miles a day in the summer and at a rate of 700 miles a day in the winter.

The Summary

Snow and sleet were reported yesterday in North Carolina, the Middle Mississippi Valley and the Lower Ohio Valley, while rain fell over the Southeastern United States. Snow flurries occurred in the Eastern Great Lakes region. Cold weather continued over the Northeastern States and the Great Lakes region, with below zero temperatures reported in many places yesterday morning. Morning temperatures were freezing as far south as southern South Carolina, Georgia, northern Alabama and the western Gulf Coast.

A low over northeastern Florida yesterday will move eastward into the Atlantic by this morning, while a high over eastern Ontario will move southeastward to northern New England. High pressure will continue over the Northwestern United States.

Skies will be generally cloudy today in New England, the Atlantic States except Florida, the Lower Ohio Valley, northern Minnesota and Idaho. Sunny weather will prevail in Wisconsin, the Lower Mississippi Valley, eastern Texas, the Northern and Southern Rockies and the Southwestern States. Elsewhere in the United States, partly cloudy conditions will be general.

Snow will fall in New England late today, while more general snow is predicted for the Upper and Middle Ohio Valleys and the Southern Middle Atlantic States. Snow flurries will occur in North Dakota, the northern portions of Idaho, Wyoming and Arizona and in eastern Washington. Light rain or freezing rain are in store for Georgia and the Carolinas in the morning and will be followed by cloudy weather in the afternoon.

Temperatures are expected to fall in Florida, North Dakota and the Rockies, while general warming will take place over most of the eastern half of the country. However, temperatures will remain below normal over most of the latter area.

going at Gimbels tomorrow—this satiny mahogany spinet made by famous Winter Company

We think you'll look a long, long time before you'll find another piano at the price with a tone that's richer or more resonant. Gimbels spinet is made by famous Winter, one of the country's biggest piano manufacturers. It has an 88-note keyboard, just like a full-size piano. But it measures only 37x56½x24 inches—compact and space-saving for city apartments. The graceful style is taken from the 18th Century. It is finished in gleaming satin-finish mahogany veneers. Use Gimbels easy payment plan (credit service charge included). Take months to pay for your spinet. $524
(Winter spinet in lustrous walnut veneers for an additional $20)

going at Gimbels tomorrow—precious Russel Wright "American Modern" 16-piece starter sets

We think famous Russel Wright is the flower, the cream, the elite, the pick of the dinnerware crop. Russel Wright is a rare find these days—it's been 7 long months since we've had enough to advertise. We saved up 16-piece starter sets and some open stock. Each piece of this "American Modern" dinnerware has clean, flowing, graceful lines and a satiny texture. The colors are rich, warm, earthy shades with a creamy glaze. Starter sets have 4 cups, saucers, bread-butters, dinner plates in 5 colors: white, gray, coral, chartreuse, sea-foam blue. We have stock, too (but not all pieces in all colors). We can't fill mail or telephone orders. Come in—but hurry . . . 6.95

We say Bigelow-Sanford Fervak is some of the best broadloom you can buy for your money. Come in to Gimbels. Sink your feet into Fervak's thick velvety pile. Look at the softly blended colors. Every foot of this tightly tufted Axminster is packed with lively lustrous wool. We'll cover your floor or out and bind a room-size rug. Gimbels

When a teen ager asks "How's the apple pie?" and she's told it's gone—does she order peach? No! She shrieks, "Give me a double hunk of that gone apple pie." "Gone" to her means good—tops—out of this world. "Real gone" means absolute tops. That's how Gimbels feels about Russel Wright dinnerware, Winter pianos, Bigelow Broadlooms, antique paperweights. They're tops, the best — they're real gone.

going at Gimbels tomorrow—150 paperweights dating from the middle 1800's

Gimbels believes you could search through museums, never find paperweights finer than Edwin A. Joseph's collection. Paperweight-making started as a glassblower's hobby around 1820. Workmen arranged scraps of colored crystal in breathtaking designs, iced them with limpid glass. You'll find Bristol weights, Nailsea flower-pots, Sandwich glass like melted sugar in this sale. You'll find rare Baccarat, Clichy, St. Louis pieces. All subject to prior sale. Write, phone.
